Here is the official report. As you will see they did not come close to the 2,830 mark on the second day – nor did they meet it on the third day of data entry. We are now on day four and at this rate will not have enough cases in the pipeline to keep Adjudicators busy over the weekend – which we should be doing if we intend to adjudicate everything in 15 days.

By comparison last Tuesday's incoming after a three day weekend was 2,252. We are in the uptrend leading to the finale next week, I think. If I had to guess today I'd say next Wednesday will be CAP day.

Big volume day , I count 3,180 as received. We should all form a lottery and pick the day we reach the cap. Winner gets a trip to St. Albans in January.

USCIS Update

March 27, 2012

USCIS to Accept H-1B Petitions for Fiscal Year 2013 Beginning April 2, 2012

Petitioners are Reminded to Follow Regulatory Requirements

WASHINGTON—U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) announced today that it will begin accepting H-1B petitions subject to the Fiscal Year (FY) 2013 cap on Monday April 2, 2012. Cases will be considered accepted on the date that USCIS takes possession of a properly filed petition with the correct fee. USCIS will not rely upon the date that the petition is postmarked.

The congressionally mandated numerical limitation on H-1B petitions for FY 2013 is 65,000. Additionally, the first 20,000 H-1B petitions filed on behalf of individuals who have earned a U.S. master's degree or higher are exempt from the fiscal year cap.

USCIS will monitor the number of petitions received and will notify the public of the date on which USCIS received the necessary number of petitions to meet the H-1B cap. If the number of applications received exceeds the numerical cap, USCIS will randomly select the number of petitions required to reach the numerical limit from the pool of petitions received on the final receipt date. USCIS will reject cap-subject petitions that are not selected, as well as those received after the final receipt date.

Petitions for new H-1B employment are exempt from the annual cap if the beneficiaries will work at institutions of higher education or related or affiliated nonprofit entities, nonprofit research organizations or governmental research organizations. Petitions filed on behalf of beneficiaries who will work only in Guam or the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands are exempt from the cap until December 31, 2014. Employers may continue to file petitions for these cap-exempt H-1B categories seeking work dates starting in FY 2012.

Petitions filed on behalf of current H-1B workers who have been counted previously against the cap also do not count towards the congressionally mandated H-1B cap. Accordingly, USCIS will continue to process FY 2012 petitions filed to:

- extend the amount of time a current H-1B worker may remain in the United States;
- change the terms of employment for current H-1B workers;
- allow current H-1B workers to change employers; or
- allow current H-1B workers to work concurrently in a second H-1B position.

H-1B petitioners should follow all statutory and regulatory requirements as they prepare petitions to avoid delays in processing and requests for evidence. USCIS has developed detailed information, including a processing worksheet, to assist in the completion and submission of FY 2013 H-1B petitions.

U.S. businesses use the H-1B program to employ foreign workers in specialty occupations that require theoretical or technical expertise in specialized fields, such as scientists, engineers, or computer programmers.

For more information on the H-1B nonimmigrant visa program and current Form I-129 processing times, visit www.uscis.gov or call the National Customer Service Center at (800) 375-5283.

Subject: RE: Cap rejection statistics

VSC has their own preference not to handle any rejects in Claims but to do them all manually , i.e. outside the systems. CSC does both and I have no breakdown on how many but all that you see should be from CSC.

The only time VSC would normally have a claims rejects is when we are notified that the check was reported as NSF – non sufficient funds – after we processed it. Then if the applicant did not send another check within 14 days, it would be recorded in CLAIMs as a rejection for NSF. You might see some of those. But for CAP it is pretty rare. It usually happens with people, not businesses, filing on their own for an I-765 or etc.

Gwen,

Here's a fun and probably useless statistic for you. CSC rejects a smaller percentage than VSC.

Through Thursday June 7

Thanks Gwen, and to that we can add 700 that were in the VSC data entry queue. That gives us about 84,400. Today vsc said their count was 2300. CSC is usually a little less so they may be somewhere between 1700-2000. That gets us up to 88,000-89,000.

Verbatim Store 'n' Go™ USB Flash Drive Quick Guide

Windows 98 SE Users:

You must install a Windows 98 SE driver file prior to using Store 'n' Go for the first time. This file can be downloaded from www.verbatim.com or www.verbatim-europe.com. After installing the driver file, you can begin using the device as detailed in the Getting Started section below. Note: Earlier versions of Windows including Windows 95, do not support USB Mass Storage Devices or are not compatible with this product.

Getting Started (Windows Operating Systems):

Remove cap and plug device in USB port. Windows will automatically recognize a new removable drive. Click on My Computer and locate the new removable drive. You may now use Store 'n' Go just like any other drive to store, copy, move, or delete files. Note: It is recommended to copy the V-Safe 100 manual and program files from the removable drive to your desktop for future reference. You may delete these files from the drive if desired to maximize storage space. These files can also be downloaded from www.verbatim.com or www. verbatim-europe.com

To Remove Store 'n' Go:

Left click the "Safely Remove Hardware" icon on the system tray at the bottom right hand side. Click on the device you wish to remove. When the "Safe to Remove Hardware" screen appears, you can now safely remove Store 'n' Go. If you receive a message indicating the device cannot be removed right now, please close any file or application that may be open on the device and try again. Windows 98 SE users: There is no "Safely Remove Hardware" icon on the system tray. Simply confirm the LED Status indicator is flashing slowly before removing device or right click on drive in explorer and select eject. A rapidly blinking LED indicates that the device is being accessed. Note: Removing your Store 'n' Go while the LED status indicator is blinking rapidly may cause data to be corrupted or lost.

Getting Started for Mac OS 9.0 or higher systems:

Store 'n' Go will automatically be recognized by your system. Insert the drive and click on the "Untitled" drive icon. To Remove Store 'n' Go: Drag the Store 'n' Go icon to the recycling bin, then remove Store 'n' Go after confirming that the LED indicator is flashing slowly or off.

Getting Started for Linux Kernel Version 2.6.x or higher:

Your Store 'n' Go will be automatically recognized upon insertion. Tested on Red Hat, Suse and Turbo Linux versions.

Using V-Safe 100 Security Application (Windows 98SE, 2000, XP Operating Systems only):

V-Safe 100 Security Application enables you to setup a password to secure sensitive data from unauthorized access. The V-Safe 100 Security Application has been pre-loaded on your Store 'n' Go for your convenience. Locate the "V-Safe 100.exe" file on the drive and double click it to launch. Follow the on-screen prompts to set up your password, password hint and select the size of your privacy zone. Note: Formatting or resizing the privacy zone on your Store 'n' Go will erase all data. Copy any files you do not wish to erase to another drive before formatting or resizing the privacy partition. Enter your password to access the privacy zone. To logout, double click the "Logout Privacy Zone" icon placed on your Store 'n' Go. To login again, double click the V-Safe icon placed on your Store 'n' Go. Please retain your password in a secure area for safe keeping. A detailed user guide has been stored on your Store 'n' Go or can be downloaded from www.verbatim.com or www.verbatim-europe.com

LED Status Indicator:

Store 'n' Go's LED status indicator provides the following information:

LED Flashing Slowly: Device connected and ready for use.
LED Blinking: Device in use. (Data is being accessed or transferred.) Note: Do not remove the device while the LED is blinking, as data may be corrupted or lost.
LED Off: Device is in low power suspended mode

Carrying Store 'n' Go:

You can put Store 'n' Go in your pocket, purse, on your key ring or attach it to the carry lanyard. Avoid temperature extremes, shock, and moisture. If your Store 'n' Go is accidentally exposed to water, allow it to dry thoroughly before using. Keep the protective cap in place when not using Store 'n' Go.

User Write On Labels:

A set of write on labels is included which may be used to personalize your Store 'n' Go or identify the contents. After writing on the label, place the label in the recessed label area.

Guía rápida de la unidad flash USB de Verbatim Store 'n' Go™

Las unidades flash USB Store'n'Go de Verbatim son una práctica forma de almacenar, compartir y transportar datos, presentaciones, fotos, música y videoclips. Antes de utilizar Store'n'Go, familiarícese con las siguientes instrucciones.

Usuarios de Windows 98 SE:

Antes de utilizar por primera vez Store 'n' Go, debe instalar los archivos del controlador para Windows 98 SE. Puede descargar el archivo desde www.verbatim.com o www.verbatim-europe.com. Después de instalar el archivo del controlador, puede comenzar a utilizar el dispositivo tal como se indica en la sección "Introducción" más adelante. Nota: las primeras versiones de Windows, incluida la versión Windows 95, no son compatibles con los dispositivos de almacenamiento masivo USB y son incompatibles con este producto.

Introducción (sistemas operativos Windows):

Retire la tapa y conecte el dispositivo al puerto USB. Windows reconocerá automáticamente una nueva unidad extraíble. Haga clic en Mi PC y ubique la nueva unidad extraíble. Ya puede utilizar Store'n'Go como si se tratara de cualquier otra unidad para almacenar, copiar, mover o eliminar archivos. Nota: se recomienda copiar el manual de V-Safe 100 y los archivos de programa de la unidad extraíble al equipo de sobremesa para poder consultarlos en el futuro. Puede borrar esos archivos de la unidad si lo desea para maximizar el espacio de almacenamiento. Asimismo, estos archivos pueden descargarse desde www.verbatim.com o www.verbatim-europe.com

Extracción de Store'n'Go: Haga clic en el icono "Quitar hardware con seguridad" de la bandeja del sistema que se encuentra en la parte inferior derecha. Haga clic en el dispositivo que desea extraer. Cuando aparezca la pantalla "Es seguro quitar el hardware", puede extraer con seguridad Store 'n' Go. Si el sistema muestra un mensaje que indica que el dispositivo no puede extraerse en este momento, cierre todos los archivos o las aplicaciones que pueden estar abiertos desde el dispositivo y vuelva a intentarlo. Usuarios de Windows 98 SE: En la bandeja del sistema no existe ningún icono "Quitar hardware con seguridad". Antes de retirar el dispositivo, compruebe que el LED de estado parpadea lentamente o haga clic en la unidad en el explorador y seleccione el objeto. Si el LED parpadea rápidamente, se está accediendo al archivo. Nota: si retira Store 'n' Go mientras el LED de estado parpadea rápidamente, se pueden dañar o perder los datos.

Introducción para Mac OS 9.0 o sistemas superiores:

El sistema reconocerá automáticamente el dispositivo Store'n'Go. Introduzca la unidad y haga clic en el icono de la unidad "Sin título". Extracción de Store'n'Go: Arrastre el icono de Store 'n' Go a la papelera. A continuación, confirme que el LED parpadea lentamente o que está apagado y extraiga Store 'n' Go.

Introducción para Linux Kernel Version 2.6.x o superior:

Al insertar Store 'n' Go, el sistema lo reconocerá automáticamente. Ha sido probado en versiones Red Had, Suse y Turbo Linux.

Utilización de la aplicación de seguridad V-Safe 100 (sólo para sistemas operativos Windows 98 SE, 2000 y XP):

La aplicación de seguridad V-Safe 100 le permite configurar una contraseña para proteger los datos sensibles contra accesos no autorizados. La aplicación de seguridad V-Safe 100 viene instalada en Store 'n' Go, para que le resulte más práctico. Localice el archivo "V-Safe 100.exe" en la unidad y haga doble clic para iniciarlo. Siga las instrucciones que aparecen en pantalla para configurar la contraseña, la pista para la contraseña y seleccione el tamaño de su zona de privacidad. Nota: si formatea o cambia el tamaño de la zona de privacidad en Store 'n' Go, se borrarán datos. Copie los archivos que no desee borrar en otra unidad antes de formatear o cambiar el tamaño de la partición de privacidad. Para acceder a la zona de privacidad, escriba la contraseña. Nach der Installation der Treiberdatei können Sie das Gerät wie unten im Abschnitt „Erste Schritte" gezeigt verwenden. Hinweis: Frühere Versionen von Windows einschließlich Windows 95 unterstützen keine USB-Massenspeichergeräte oder sind nicht mit diesem Produkt kompatibel.

Erste Schritte (Windows-Betriebssysteme):
Entfernen Sie die Schutzkappe, und stecken Sie das Gerät in den USB-Anschluss. Windows erkennt automatisch ein neues austauschbares Laufwerk. Klicken Sie auf „Arbeitsplatz", und suchen Sie das neue austauschbare Laufwerk. Jetzt können Sie Store 'n' Go wie ein herkömmliches Laufwerk zum Speichern, Kopieren, Verschieben und Löschen von Dateien verwenden. Hinweis: Es empfiehlt sich, die V-Safe 100-Handbuch- und Programmdateien zur späteren Referenz vom austauschbaren Laufwerk zum Desktop zu kopieren. Anschließend können Sie diese Dateien vom Laufwerk löschen, um den Speicherplatz zu erhöhen. Diese Dateien stehen unter www.verbatim.com oder www.verbatim-europe.com zum Download bereit.

So entfernen Sie Store 'n' Go: Klicken Sie rechts unten in der Taskleiste mit der linken Maustaste auf das Symbol „Hardware sicher entfernen". Klicken Sie auf das Gerät, das Sie entfernen möchten. Wenn der Bildschirm „Hardware kann jetzt entfernt werden" angezeigt wird, können Sie Store 'n' Go sicher entfernen. Wenn eine Meldung mit dem Inhalt angezeigt wird, dass das Gerät zur Zeit nicht entfernt werden kann, schließen Sie Dateien oder Anwendungen, die unter Umständen auf dem Gerät geöffnet sind, und versuchen Sie es danach erneut. Windows 98 SE-Benutzer: In der Taskleiste befindet sich kein Symbol zur sicheren Hardwareentfernung. Stellen Sie vor dem Entfernen des Geräts einfach sicher, dass die LED-Anzeige langsam blinkt. Sie können auch im Explorer mit der rechten Maustaste auf das Laufwerk klicken und „Auswerfen" wählen. Eine schnell blinkende LED-Anzeige bedeutet, dass gerade auf das Gerät zugegriffen wird. Hinweis: Das Entfernen des Store 'n' Go bei schnell blinkender LED-Anzeige kann zu Beschädigung oder Verlust von Daten führen.

Erste Schritte bei Mac OS 9.0 oder höheren Systemen:
Store 'n' Go wird von Ihrem System automatisch erkannt. Stecken Sie das Laufwerk in den USB-Anschluss, und klicken Sie auf das Laufwerksymbol „Ohne Namen". So entfernen Sie Store 'n' Go: Ziehen Sie mit der Maus das Store 'n' Go-Symbol auf den Papierkorb. Entfernen Sie anschließend Store 'n' Go, nachdem Sie sich überzeugt haben, dass die LED-Anzeige langsam blinkt oder aus ist.

Erste Schritte bei Linux Kernel Version 2.6.x oder höher:
Store 'n' Go wird automatisch beim Einstecken erkannt. Getestet unter Red Hat, Suse und Turbo Linux.

Arbeiten mit der Sicherheitsanwendung V-Safe 100 (nur Windows 98SE, 2000, XP):
Die Sicherheitsanwendung V-Safe 100 ermöglicht Ihnen das Einrichten eines Passworts, um vertrauliche Daten vor unbefugtem Zugriff zu schützen. Zu Ihrer Erleichterung wurde die Anwendung bereits auf Ihrem Store 'n' Go geladen. Suchen Sie die Datei „V-Safe 100.exe" auf dem Laufwerk, und doppelklicken Sie zum Starten darauf. Folgen Sie den Bildschirmanweisungen, um Ihr Passwort und einen Passworthinweis einzurichten und um die Größe des geschützten Bereichs zu wählen. Hinweis: Wenn Sie den geschützten Bereich auf dem Store 'n' Go formatieren oder dessen Größe anpassen, werden alle Daten gelöscht. Kopieren Sie Dateien, die nicht gelöscht werden sollen, vor einer Größenanpassung oder dem Formatieren des geschützten Bereichs auf ein anderes Laufwerk. Geben Sie Ihr Passwort ein, um auf den geschützten Bereich zugreifen zu können. Zum Abmelden klicken Sie auf das Symbol „Aus geschützten Bereich abmelden" auf dem Store 'n' Go. Zum erneuten Anmelden klicken Sie auf das V-Safe-Symbol auf dem Store 'n' Go. Bewahren Sie Ihr Passwort an einem sicheren Ort auf. Ein detailliertes Benutzerhandbuch ist auf Ihrem Store 'n' Go gespeichert und kann auch von www.verbatim.com oder www.verbatim-europe.com heruntergeladen werden.

LED-Anzeige:
Die LED-Anzeige des Store 'n' Go liefert die folgenden Informationen:
LED blinkt langsam: Gerät ist angeschlossen und einsatzbereit.
LED blinkt: Gerät ist in Gebrauch (Datenzugriff oder -übertragung). Hinweis: Entfernen Sie das Gerät nicht, während die LED blinkt, da dies zu Beschädigung oder Verlust von Daten führen kann.
LED aus: Das Gerät befindet sich im Stromsparmodus.

Store 'n' Go transportieren:
Store 'n' Go lässt sich einfach transportieren: In der Hosentasche oder im Portemonnaie, am Schlüsselring oder mit der mitgelieferten Trageschlaufe. Setzen Sie das Gerät keinen extremen Temperaturen, Erschütterungen oder Feuchtigkeit aus. Sollte Ihr Store 'n' Go versehentlich mit Wasser in Berührung kommen, lassen Sie es vor erneuter Inbetriebnahme vollständig trocknen. Lassen Sie die Schutzkappe aufgesteckt, wenn Sie das Store 'n' Go nicht verwenden.

Beschriftbare Etiketten:

Im Lieferumfang sind beschriftbare Etiketten enthalten, mit denen Sie Ihr Store 'n' Go personalisieren oder dessen Inhalt aufführen können. Nachdem Sie das Etikett beschriftet haben, setzen Sie es in den dafür ausgesparten Bereich ein.

1. INTRODUCTION

V-Safe 100 is the Store 'n' Go tool that enables you to create and access a password-protected secure area, called a Privacy Zone, on your Store 'n' Go. Messages and prompts guide you through setting up V-Safe 100 with your password and customizing the Privacy Zone to suit your personal and business needs for securing your information.

The combination of enhanced hardware with a high-speed USB 2.0 interface enables you to start working immediately, and to easily secure all your confidential data.

This user guide summarizes the procedures, and also includes some important Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs). For the latest FAQs, please visit the Verbatim website www.verbatim.com or www.verbatim-europe.com

2. SYSTEM

2.1. Requirements

- Pentium II 266 MHz
- 1.5MB free disk space
- Operating systems: Windows 98® Second Edition*, Windows 2000®, Windows XP® (*Windows 98SE driver available from www.verbatim.com or www.verbatim-europe.com )
- Access to your main drive (usually drive [C:])
- Administrative privileges for Windows 2000 and XP

2.2. Recommendations

- Graphic accelerator that supports 24-bit color depth for best-quality graphics

3. GETTING STARTED

CAUTION! When you create your Privacy Zone, the Store 'n' Go is formatted and ALL data will be lost. Back up your files before you create your Privacy Zone.

3.1. Creating the Privacy Zone

1. Select the removable disk drive that was assigned to your Store 'n' Go, and double click the V-Safe 100.exe file to launch the application.
2. Click OK to continue after you have read the V-Safe 100 Welcome window (Figure 1).

3. When the V-Safe 100 Format window is displayed (Figure 2), enter the following information in the relevant fields:
   a. Your password (required)
   b. The same password to confirm (required)
   c. A hint to remind you of your password (optional)

4. Move the Store 'n' Go slide bar (up or down) to designate the size of your new Privacy Zone. When you have set the Privacy Zone size, click OK.

   The Privacy Zone maximum size is limited. A minimum portion of your Store 'n' Go is kept free to store the V-Safe 100 application, future upgrades, and future applications without hindering V-Safe 100 operation.

5. The V-Safe 100 Format Warning window is displayed (Figure 3). To proceed with the format operation, click OK.

3.2. Working with Your Privacy Zone

3.2.1. Logging In to Your Privacy Zone

1. After you have created a Privacy Zone, V-Safe 100 automatically prompts you to log in. Alternatively, you can double click the V-Safe 100 icon on your desktop to display the V-Safe 100 Login window (Figure 6).

2. To log in to your Privacy Zone, type in your password and click OK. If you enter the wrong password, an error message is displayed (Figure 7).

If you forget your password, click Hint to display the Hint field in the V-Safe 100 Login window (Figure 8).

V-Safe 100 terminates automatically after five incorrect attempts and ejects your Store 'n' Go in order to protect your secure data. If this happens, remove your Store 'n' Go and re-insert it. This will give you another five chances to enter the correct password before your Store 'n' Go locks up again.

3.2.2. Working with Files in the Privacy Zone

After logging in to the Privacy Zone, you can open and work on any file. Files that are worked on and saved within the Privacy Zone are protected even after you log out of the Privacy Zone.

3.2.3. Logging Out of Your Privacy Zone

If you attempt to log out of, restart, or shut down the system while working on files in the Privacy Zone, file changes may not be saved. It is therefore recommended to close all files prior to logging out of the system or shutting down your computer.

To log out of the Privacy Zone:

1. Save and close all files that you have opened from your Store 'n' Go.
2. When inside the Privacy Zone, log out by double clicking on the Logout Privacy Zone icon. (Figure 10).

4. If you attempt to log out of the Privacy Zone while a file is still open, V-Safe 100 notifies you with a Warning message. When the Warning message (Figure 12) is displayed, click OK, close any open files from the Privacy Zone and try again to log out of Privacy Zone.

4. CUSTOMIZING YOUR SETTINGS

4.1. Desktop

2. Select any of the options listed (a tool tip for each option is displayed as your mouse passes over it), including:
   - o Create Shortcut in Quick Launch bar
   - o Create Shortcut on Desktop
   - o No login confirmation
   - o No logout confirmation
   - o Language selection
3. Click OK to activate the options selected.

4.2.1. With the Change Password Button

To change your password using the Change Password button:

1. Click Change Password in the V-Safe 100 Settings window (Figure 13). .
2. When the Change Password window (Figure 14) is displayed, type in the current (old) password, the new password, and the new password once again for confirmation. It is recommended to type in a hint in case you forget or lose your password.

3. Click OK. A confirmation message is displayed (Figure 15).

4.2.2. Without the Change Password Button

If the Change Password button is not displayed in the V-Safe 100 Settings window, you can change the password by formatting the Privacy Zone, as described in Section 3.1. See step 4 for specific instructions regarding the password.

CAUTION! When you change your password without the Change Password button, your Store 'n' Go is formatted and ALL data is lost.

4.3. Changing the Size of the Privacy Zone

CAUTION! Changing the size of your Privacy Zone requires formatting your Store 'n' Go, causing ALL secured and non-secured data to be lost.

To change the size of the Privacy Zone:

1. Click Format in the V-Safe 100 Settings window. The V-Safe 100 Format window is displayed, as shown in Figure 2 on page 5.
2. Enter the new password and confirm it by entering it a second time.
3. Enter a hint in case you forget your password.
4. Set the new size of your Privacy Zone using the slide bar.
5. Click OK. The V-Safe 100 Format Warning window is displayed, as shown in Figure 3 on page 6.
6. Click OK to reformat your Store 'n' Go and create a new Privacy Zone.

To remove the Privacy Zone:

1. Follow steps 1 to 3 above.
2. Set the size of your Privacy Zone to 0% using the slide bar.
3. Click OK. A message is displayed (Figure 16) warning you that your Store 'n' Go will not have a Privacy Zone.

5. FAQs

Q: How do I check which version of V-Safe 100 I'm using?

A: The simplest way is to right click the V-Safe 100 icon on your Store 'n' Go, and then click Properties>Version in the menu that is displayed.

Q: How do I know if I'm working in my Privacy Zone or in the Public Zone?

A: If the root folder of your Store 'n' Go contains a file that says "Logout Privacy Zone" then you're in your Privacy Zone. Otherwise you're in the Public Zone.

Q: How do I switch between the Public Zone and my Privacy Zone?

A: Launch V-Safe 100 from your desktop, Store 'n' Go, or the Quick Launch Bar. If you see a prompt asking for your password, this means that you are currently in the Public Zone. To switch to your Privacy Zone, enter your password and click OK. If you see a pop-up window with a prompt asking you for logout confirmation from your Privacy Zone, this means that you're working in your Privacy Zone. To switch, click OK. To remain logged in to your Privacy Zone, click Cancel.

Q: I accidentally deleted V-Safe 100 from my Store 'n' Go. How can I access data in my Privacy Zone?

A: You can still access data in your Privacy Zone. Simply restore a copy of V-Safe 100 on your Store 'n' Go by downloading the application from the Verbatim website www.verbatim.com or www.verbatim-europe.com to your desktop and copy the .EXE file to your Store 'n' Go. Launch the .EXE file from your Store 'n' Go by double-clicking the V-Safe 100 logo, and you can log in to your Privacy Zone using your old password.

Q: Can I use more than one Store 'n' Go with V-Safe 100 simultaneously?

A: No.

Q: Why can I use V-Safe 100 only on certain computers?

A: You can only use V-Safe 100 if you have administrator privileges on that computer.

Q: Is there an alternate way to format both the Public and Private Zones on my Store 'n' Go if V-Safe 100 formatting fails?

A: Yes, using the OS format utility. Then copy V-Safe 100 and use it to access your Privacy Zone.

Rose, Claudia,

Can you two matrix me something on the 129/140 that would list from top to bottom the easiest to the most problematic categories that the lockbox could upgrade. I think we will have to break this down bit by bit to establish where the limit is we can transfer to them, but if even a single 1-2 categories of visa types under these two forms can be ingested without requiring extensive checking we should move forward with it.

What I mean is something like this, don't worry that my chart is probably entirely wrong but the components would be like this –

| Form/category | Eligibility determined by | JPMC review or USCIS review | System required | Recommendation |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1`29 – H1A | Labor cert | JPMC | | Lockbox |
| 129 – H1B | | | | |
| 129-H2B | | | | |
| 129 – H3 | | | | |
| 140-E1 | Priority date | USCIS | C3 | |
| 140 E2 | | | | Service Cnter retaine |

Thanks – I need to start with something and I can't follow adjudicative rules without something like a matrix to help me. There is good need to follow through with establishing even a portion of this at the lockbox if we can, if nothing else because they have expended a good deal of time, effort and money already in preparing for it, so lets keep plugging away as best as we all can to make at least some part of it workable.

Hi Julie,
Just wanted to let you know that the I-924 database is under development and we're having a demo of it on Monday. As soon as it's ready, records here will make any last minute modifications to the SOP and send it to Denis and you. We'll also send you the most recent draft version of the form (it still isn't finalized yet). We'll need to have it priced out in the near future for data entry.

Sasha Haskell over in BEST is SCOPS' POC for any adjudicative issues, if you have any questions. The points of contact at CSC Records are Rich Nicholson, Juliet Fries and Bonnie Robbins.

Hello Bobbie and Claudia,

Thank you for reaching out to David Cartier for the eCISCOR outage information. Based on the information he provided on the rarity of occurrences when eCISCOR is down, we would like to propose that the Lockbox system shall retry to connect to eCISCOR for up to 24 hours to receive a response for an application. If a response is not received 24 hours after the initial request, the Lockbox will reject the application. We want to confirm with you if you agree that this process should be put into place for the rare case that eCISCOR is down for an extended period of time.

Thanks,

Of the 22,000 filings thus far, VSC had only 110 from Thursday and CSC 490 from Tuesday-Thursday remaining to data enter, so we are virtually current.

Thursday's mail was 236 VSC, 224 CSC.

This will be the last daily update. Some stats from this year's incoming –

The split of filings was 57% VSC 43% CSC, very similar to previous years.

The reject rate is 816/21,400 completed, a little under 4%

Walter/Rich,

Attached is the revised CSC 4-2-10 CAP report. (CSC CAP numbers thru April 2nd.)

We will send out a new 4-3-10 CAP report with today's receipts.

OBTW. If volume of CAP petitions is low today, we plan to only bring in about half of the PRESORT temps tomorrow.

Regards,

Greg

Walter/Rich,

We have some missing box ranges due to NFTS upload problems on Friday.

We are in the process of reauditing those missing box ranges.

My best estimate is NLT 1100 (Pacific) that I'll be able to send you the final numbers.

Regards,

Greg

Day 1 estimated total is 7,932 and Day 2 estimated total is 833 for a grand total of 8,765 for the first two days.

The following is taken from the attached report and breaks the days down by CAP category:

I think we have these things all straightened now ☺ (After talking with Greg yesterday, his daily DE numbers are up to 1,768 and VSC will be at 2,000+)

I'll have the final presentation completed today (about 16 slides).

How many hard copies should I bring with me?

Walter,

We had a teleconference with the centers yesterday to review the center level plans. The thing that stands out on each is the daily H1B CAP production goal is inadequate. We really aren't happy that you have a goal of only 1170 per day at CSC and 1500 at VSC. This is less than past years. It is also not true that we won't waive the data entry requirements for other forms for a reasonable period of time. CAP forms are, in fact "more important" than other forms during this time period and we want a higher emphasis put on getting them processed in a timely manner. They have far more fee money attached to them than other types.

So, sharpen your pencil and see what revised production numbers you can come in with on Thursday. I thought it was better to let you know in advance.

VSC and CSC,

I have confirmed with Jim that there are approximately 4,000 cap numbers left as of COB 12/8. This was calculated by subtracting 80,000 (estimated count) from 84,000 (65,000 minus 1,000 for Chile/Singapore plus 20,000 for Masters).

Rob, can you let BEST know what the contractor front log estimate is?

Not really; you are just counting up the data entered figures. Jim is querying C3 to determine how many are approved or pending. There have been about 600-700 denials already and these he's deducted from the totals. It could be a few more weeks before he give the word that we have enough.

Good Morning Kristen,

The VSC report looks fine at first glance, however, CSC's report as Denis pointed out under the data entry totals, the H1B CAP line did not carry the 38 through the total and not too sure how the total didn't change with the new numbers, but it's apparent that the formula is not working properly...

It's a simply formula error – up and down don't even match the across – they didn't include the 38 H1B CAP going across line – if someone would have just double-checked the math they would have seen it…or if someone would have noticed that the total was the same as yesterday, they would have figured it out…

Recall what I just said about the problem of sending out work with errors. Kristen did not proof this , then Rich resent it to his management without looking either. Compared to yesterdays it shows the data entry totals were not changed. It's simple mistakes like this that cost credibility.

Makes sense rolling them into the regular cap.

We do need some type of cushion in the regular cap though because we will have denials/withdrawals, etc. What's our overall magic number?

Jim says our magic number is 24K for the masters so we are okay. We don't need a cushion because they just fold into the regular cap. It is my understanding we just close the cap when we hit it. I am including Jim in case I am saying something wrong. Also, Denis once we hit the master's cap do we update differently to roll into the regular cap?

All,

Attached are some rough preliminary edits to the H1B/H2B cap page. I have not inserted numbers into the table yet as it will change before this has cleared OCC and is ready for posting.

I have a question for the group as a whole regarding the data table currently on the web site. Is it mandatory that we include the number of approvals in the update? If not, can we remove that block? I don't see where we currently have this information filled out, and I think it raises a number of questions (especially since this number will fluctuate).

This is definitely an opportunity to remove any language you feel is unnecessary and add language to items that need clarification. Please let me know of any comments/edits you may have. I will consolidate SCOPS comments/edits and forward to OCC for their clearance.

Thanks!

Carol and Jim,

Could you please summarize the duplicate filing process that was agreed upon last Tuesday? Last year we held all rejects until after the duplicate scrape was completed. I believe we decided not to hold rejects this year, thus allowing petitioners a chance to re-file in a timely manner.

Also, will the duplicate scrape be limited to petitions received from 4/1 – 4/7 only?

Thanks,

Rob

Denis,

We were just informed by the contractor that you would like for them to start data entry of premium processing petitions on 2nd shift tomorrow (4/7). If so, would the PP clock start on 4/7 or would we go with our original plan of the PP clock commencing on 4/8 (see attached Word doc)? If getting a jump start on 4/7 means that we would start the clock for all premium petitions on 4/7, then we would not maximize our data entry efforts, while losing a full day on the premium clock. In my opinion, this would be a big mistake.

Lisa and I were talking this morning (prior to hearing from the contractor) and we were actually going to inquire and see if we could delay D-day until 4/9. This would allow for a full and accurate count of all petitions at the conclusion of the five day filing window. It would also allow the contractor to get a jump on the ~~Post-RNG~~ Acceptability Review procedures that still need to be completed. I believe we may need legal counsel's opinion as to whether we would be on firm legal grounds to delay the start of the PP clock until 4/9, but if so, then it would provide huge dividends to Adjudications as we try to manage 8-10 K premium processing petitions within the 15-day processing window.

Thanks,

Have they sent anything to you regarding today's mail volume - was it just like any other Monday or was there a significant amount of CAP mail?

Subject: Anticipated H-1B CAP volume and preparations in advance

Walter,

We've finished a teleconference today on the CAP filing season starting a week from today. In February the best estimate I could provide you was to prepare for volume in line with what we received in 2008. We no longer believe this will be the case. We believe now that volume at most will be commensurate with 2007, when we received approximately 120,000 filings. Accordingly you should anticipate receiving 75,000, not 100,000 filings at Vermont and 45,000, not 60,000 filings at California. Please make any adjustments to your plans accordingly. When you have finished please send me these updates with the revised dates, staffing figures and any process changes you incorporate.

Ultimately, we'll only know by the end of the day April 1. Our plans must remain flexible to deal with the contingencies of significantly lower volume than even the numbers I listed above.

All –

Kevin asked me to send this issue to you all for discussion and decision. The service centers are asking when the start date indicated on the I-129 form is blank or has something such as "ASAP" written in can they reject the form.

Let me know when you'd like to discuss. Ideally, I'd like to get a response to the service centers by Thursday of this week.

Thank you.

Rob is scheduled for the 6:00 a.m. flight, which gets to Washington about 7:45 so if it is on time he should make it with plenty of time. I will let him know that if the flight is delayed longer than 1 hours then he should probably not go.

We will call in for 9:00 a.m.

Tomorrow (3/3/09) Rob Perkins and Lisa Manahan were going to travel to Washington and participate in the H1B meeting with Stanley. Unfortunately Lisa called in sick today and informed us that she has pneumonia. She will be unable to attend this meeting. We are still expecting that Rob Perkins will be traveling in the morning (weather permitting) and would like to have our Records POC participate via conference call.

Could you please provide the call in number and estimated start time for the meeting. I will also try to attend this call with our Records POC.

Thanks

Attached is the revised CSC 4-2-10 CAP report. (CSC CAP numbers thru April 2nd.)

We will send out a new 4-3-10 CAP report with today's receipts.

OBTW. If volume of CAP petitions is low today, we plan to only bring in about half of the PRESORT temps tomorrow.

We have some missing box ranges due to NFTS upload problems on Friday.

We are in the process of reauditing those missing box ranges.

My best estimate is NLT 1100 (Pacific) that I'll be able to send you the final numbers.

Walter/Rich,

We did finish CAP Presort for all petitions received on both Days 1 and 2 today at 4PM.

NFTS is still down. We may not get you the exact CAP numbers (box ranges from NFTS).

Attached is an estimated count for Days 1 and 2.

The estimate is a box count based on last year's average of 22.5 files per box.

Day 1 estimated total is 7,932 and Day 2 estimated total is 833 for a grand total of 8,765 for the first two days.

The following is taken from the attached report and breaks the days down by CAP category:

| Estimated Daily Receipts | (Estimate based on 600 per cage / 22.5 per box / 20 per bucket) | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | 4/1/10 | 4/2/10 | 4/3/10 | 4/5/10 | 4/6/10 | 4/7/10 | Total |

| Total | 7,932 | 833 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 8,765 |

Chy's team is auditing Day 1 and Day 2 boxes. They will upload and run a box range for each day if NFTS comes back up tonight.

If NFTS comes back up; Chy will send out an updated CAP count to all e-mailed above.

Have a great weekend.

Regards,

Greg

Denis,

If my calculation is correct we will most likely hit the Master's cap today (24,000). Is Jim going to send a message to let us know when we should start entering STD instead of MAS for the Masters?

Here is the updated report. I plugged in CSC's numbers as well so all tabs should be updated. The only numbers I don't have yet are the mail numbers for today. So far I know we received approximately 6,515 pieces of mail.

Question for you....Do we need to continue to bar code the cases if we aren't going to need to run the RNG? If we could stop this step it would save time.

Rich/Walter,

Attached is the best estimate of where CSC stands as of 3PM on 4/6/09. (Light day)

We plan on starting to assemble CRP & CMP tomorrow.

We will also call USPS to see if we need to make three mail runs tomorrow.

If the mail is light tomorrow, CSC should be CAP complete (Bar-coded; pallet/cage; and Lottery ready) NLT 5PM.

Regards,

Greg

Rich/Walter,

Best estimate of where CSC stands as of 4PM on 4/3/09 attached.

The first 2 days are complete (Bar-coded; pallet/cage; and Lottery ready) with the exception of less than a bucket of Day (2) petitions which needs CIS Review.

We plan on setting up for CMP and CRP possible assembly on Monday. (Depends on Monday's volume of mail.)

Greg

Best estimate of where we stand this morning attached.

We received One bucket of Possible CAP cases today.

We Should be completed (Lottery Ready) for ALL 3 days by end of 1st shift today.

I'll have an updated report by COB today that should be more accurate.

Rich/Walter,

Attached is the best estimate of CSC CAP Day one received and CAP Day Two received. (Revision in RED for day one received)

Very low received petition count today! (Estimate 73% less than day two last year. Day 1 update/difference is also looking lower and around 45% less than day one last year.)

Estimate that night crew should be completed with PRESORTING of Day one and two by end of 2nd shift.)

I will try to revise the numbers on this report for Day one and two tomorrow morning.

Rich/Walter,

Best estimate of where CSC stands as of 4PM on 4/3/09 attached.

The first 2 days are complete (Bar-coded; pallet/cage; and Lottery ready) with the exception of less than a bucket of Day (2) petitions which needs CIS Review.

We plan on setting up for CMP and CRP possible assembly on Monday. (Depends on Monday's volume of mail.)

Regards,

Greg

Rich/Walter,

Best estimate of where we stand this morning attached.

We received One bucket of Possible CAP cases today.

We Should be completed (Lottery Ready) for ALL 3 days by end of 1st shift today.

I'll have an updated report by COB today that should be more accurate.

Rich/Walter,

Attached is the best estimate of CSC CAP Day one received and CAP Day Two received. (Revision in RED for day one received)

Very low received petition count today! (Estimate 73% less than day two last year. Day 1 update/difference is also looking lower and around 45% less than day one last year.)

Estimate that night crew should be completed with PRESORTING of Day one and two by end of 2nd shift.)

I will try to revise the numbers on this report for Day one and two tomorrow morning.

Greg

Here are the correct numbers. Apparently the report clerk added some of the manifests that had already been counted and that is why the number jumped to 34,103. Please note that you should be seeing the number of opened and bar coded count jump up quite a bit from yesterday.

In summary we received 24,801 pieces of mail and of that 4,107 have been opened and bar coded.

Sorry for the confusion!

Of the 22,000 filings thus far, VSC had only 110 from Thursday and CSC 490 from Tuesday-Thursday remaining to data enter, so we are virtually current.

Thursday's mail was 236 VSC, 224 CSC.

This will be the last daily update. Some stats from this year's incoming –

The split of filings was 57% VSC 43% CSC, very similar to previous years.

The reject rate is 816/21,400 completed, a little under 4%

Greg,
In discussing the Master's cases with the ACD/COTR, his direction is to count all Masters cases as STD/regular cases and not to be concerned about Master numbers after today.

Subject: FW: Masters Cap?

Hi,

Since we had reached the 24,000 recommended cap for Masters, can the Contractor key these cases as regular cap cases from now on? That way we won't have to make the change at time of adjudication.

Also, do you have a more current count for regular cases?

Thanks, Rich.

My recommendation is:

24,000 (Masters only) plus another 76,000 combining Regular and other (rolled over) Masters. Grand total is 100,000.

Makes sense rolling them into the regular cap.

We do need some type of cushion in the regular cap though because we will have denials/withdrawals, etc. What's our overall magic number?

Jim says our magic number is 24K for the masters so we are okay. We don't need a cushion because they just fold into the regular cap. It is my understanding we just close the cap when we hit it. I am including Jim in case I am saying something wrong. Also, Denis once we hit the master's cap do we update differently to roll into the regular cap?

Hi,

Do we have a cushion number for Masters? I'm not sure if we have a strategy and when/if we need to rack and stack for a Masters RNG or if they should start being out into the regular cap?

Jim says not to worry about it, just keep coding all you get as Masters as MAS. They don't plan to issue a press release about reaching the Masters 20,000 non-cap until they've actually issued all the visas. When that happens, they'll just begin issuing the Masters applicants the regular CAPed visas until 65,000 of them are issued. At that point we stop accepting any.

According to Jim we have some weeks to go before they will have issued the 20,000 Masters visas category.

Rob and I thought the reason why it was 24,000 instead of 20,000 was to account for the denials and rejects. Therefore we thought Jim was using the number received.

Not really; you are just counting up the data entered figures. Jim is querying C3 to determine how many are approved or pending. There have been about 600-700 denials already and these he's deducted from the totals. It could be a few more weeks before he give the word that we have enough.

Denis,

If my calculation is correct we will most likely hit the Master's cap today (24,000). Is Jim going to send a message to let us know when we should start entering STD instead of MAS for the Masters?

Re: Contract Discrepancy Report – VSC-09-010

Please review the attached CDR. The contractor accepted forty-four H1B Cap filings in error. These filings should have been rejected due to incorrect start dates (dates prior to 10/1/09). As the result of these errors the Vermont Service Center had to refund close to $93,000. See attached documentation.

VSC-09-010

As of May 22nd the Records unit at the Vermont Service Center has processed forty four refunds on CAP filings that were taken in error. All forty four of the filings had start dates prior to 10/1/09, therefore should not have been accepted.

These cases were data entered before the errors were discovered, therefore the applicants received a receipt notice and in some cases a final action was granted. This causes unnecessary confusion for the applicants, their cases end up needing to be administratively closed and there monies are returned at a later date by the Burlington Finance Center.

As a result of these errors, the Vermont Service Center has had to refund close to $93,000. Attached you will find an excel spreadsheet containing the receipt numbers and the amount refunded for each filing.

Greg,

I reviewed the H1B and Dee and I both reviewed the MILNATAZ. No comments for changes to MILNATZ>

For H1B, no specific changes. My general comment would be that the language is accurate for years before 2009. It is not current with this year's filing numbers. If they want to have an overview completely up to date they may want to adjust some of the language in that regard. (The CAP is routinely exhausted well before the end of the fiscal year....usually within the first few days....etc.)

I-129 H1B CRIS (CAP Receipt Information System) Database:

Purpose of Report: The CRIS database was designed to aid the California Service Center (CSC) in the tracking and processing of H1B CAP cases. The CRIS database is an Access database that require the Contractor to input the RNG number and/or receipt number of the respective H1B CAP case and input the H1B cap case data information such as petitioner, attorney and beneficiary name, address, DOB, COB, EIN number and reason for rejection when rejecting the H1B cap cases. CRIS information is also used to respond to the inquiries from the petitioner and the attorneys. The database has a search capability to search for a H1B cap case by CAP number, petitioner/beneficiary's name and box number etc. The database has capability to produce reject and/or acknowledgement letters.

Report Name/number: CSC- CRIS

Frequency: Daily during the H1B CAP open season.

How to print the report: The contractor will maintain the RNG lottery CAP number information and the other case information into CRIS database to ensure that all H1B CAP cases received at CSC are accounted for. The information relating to the rejected cap cases is entered into CRIS database. The Contractor selects the appropriate reject letter stored in the CRIS database and then prints the reject letter by clicking the print button.

How to interpret the database: The CAP case number information is updated in "Updates/Data Entry block and various queries are performed by selecting the fields listed under "Database Queries" block . The various options are listed in the below screen print.

Additional Comments: The CRIS database can import and export data as necessary. The administrators have a capability to control the data and protect the database by restricting and/or granting permissions, such as read/write or read only access. This database can be upgraded and managed without interrupting users. This database can be utilized by multiple users. This CRIS database has features to run automated queries to list non-selected, winners, masters, regular cap and PP cases and to produce Pick-lists with Box locations. The database has the flexibility for administrators to customize additional queries as needed. This database can be used as a workflow management tool by USCIS and the contractor.

JIT Report:

Purpose of Report: The JIT Report was created to enable Adjudications management to view pending file counts on the file room shelves on a weekly or daily basis. The JIT report is an Access database that requires the contractor to maintain RPC code descriptions of what is currently on the shelves and staging areas in the file room. The database will group RPC codes with like descriptions and produce a count.

Type of report: Database.

Report number: CSC-1

Frequency: Weekly (Tuesday).

How to print the report: The contractor will maintain the RPC code tables in the JIT report database to ensure the RPC descriptions are accurate and current. The contractor will run the JIT report and access the reports tab to generate the report. The JIT report will be emailed every Tuesdays to the designated ACDS and Records employees in the center.

JIT Report Entry

RPC Maintenance by Supervisor

How to interpret the report: This report shows file counts grouped by RPC description. The report will display a receipt file count, and A-file count and a total file count for the RPC. The RPC descriptions are grouped by the Division that process the work.

Sample of Finished JIT Report

JIT Report

Additional Comments: The database needs to be monitored to ensure it is up to date and accurate. The JIT report database will also update and Excel spreadsheet on the common drive that has file counts for every RPC in the center. This report can be used as a workflow management tool by USCIS and the contractor.

Duplicate Receipt Notices:

Purpose of Report: The Duplicate Receipt Notice database was created to enable the contractor to print duplicate notices upon request. When Adjudications or Records receives a request for a duplicate notice, the receipt number is updated on a designated spreadsheet on the common drive. Each evening on second shift, the contractor will run the duplicate receipt notice database which will access the receipt numbers in the spreadsheet, query the number against CLAIMS 3 and generate the notices. Once all the receipt notices have been printed and verified, the receipt numbers on the spreadsheet on the common drive can be deleted. Receipt notices that are not generated through claims will need to be keyed manually using the templates in the database

Report number: CSC-2

Frequency: Daily.

How to print the report: The contractor will access the Duplicate Receipt Notice database on the common drive and select run. Verify the number of notices matches the number of receipt numbers in the spreadsheet on the common drive. There may be additional receipt notices if there is a G28.

Spreadsheet Listing Receipt Numbers

Duplicate Receipt Notice Database

Duplicate Receipt Notice Receipt Number Entry

How to interpret the report: This database uses templates of receipt notices in the reports tab of the database to generate the notices. The templates will need to be updated from time to time depending on changes from USCIS.

Additional Comments: The database needs to be monitored to ensure templates are up to date and the contractor is correctly generating the notices.

Closed File Verification Report:

Purpose of Report: The Closed File Verification Report (CFV) was created to enable the identification of open cases prior to them being shipped to file storage facilities. The CFV report is an Access database that requires the contractor to maintain RPC code descriptions (referred to as "box" codes) for boxes of adjudicated files that have been prepared for shipment. The database will identify open cases within each "box code" so that they may be removed and properly updated prior to shipment.

Type of report: Database.

Report number: CSC-3

Frequency: Each time a full pallet of boxed approved cases is prepared and daily for denied cases.

How to print the report: The contractor will reconcile the RPC codes for each box to ensure that no files are charged to that RPC prior to placing files in the box. The contractor then enters the RPC range into the CFV database which generates the CFV report. The report will be printed and used as a manifest to remove the listed files from their boxes.

Closed File Verification Database

Entering RPC Ranges into the Database

How to interpret the report: This report shows open files grouped by RPC description (box). The report will display the receipt or A-File number, the Form type, the last active date, and status. The files are pulled from the RPC/box and returned to the appropriate division for action.

Final Closed File Verification Report

Additional Comments: The box codes need to be monitored to ensure that each is properly reconciled after each use.

CSC Backlog Reduction Fact Worksheet:

Purpose of Report: The CSC Backlog Reduction Report was created to enable the contractor to accurately estimate the amount of time and number of resources needed to reduce their backlogs. This report is an Excel spreadsheet that requires the contractor to accurately account for their pending backlog counts, oldest processing dates, anticipated incoming volumes, and number of available resources. In addition to this, targeted completion dates for brining these areas into compliance are provided.

Type of report: Spreadsheet

Report number: CSC-4

Frequency: Submitted to COTR every Thursday night

How to print the report: The contractor maintains this spreadsheet on the common drive.

CSC Backlog Reduction Fact Worksheet

How to interpret the report: This report tracks backlogged processes, oldest dates, total backlog volume, projected date of compliance, and status. The top five areas of concern are indicated at the bottom of this report.

Additional Comments: This report can be used as a workflow management tool by the contractor.

Semi-Annual Audit Plan Report:

Purpose of Report: The Semi-Annual Audit Plan Report was created to enable the contractor to plan their file audits and track their progress. This report requires the contractor to maintain an audit record for each RPC in their areas of responsibility. The progress of their "rolling" audit is projected in order to calculate a date of completion.

Type of report: Database/spreadsheet

Frequency: Weekly

How to print the report: The contractor maintains an accurate listing of each of their RPC's and its audit history. The report is run through Access. The database records the date of the audit, which clerk performed the audit, and the results of any reconciliatory actions taken on the audit reports from their portable scanning devices.

Auditing sheets (cover signs) are used during the physical audits to identify the areas currently being audited. After each area is audited, the portable scanning device is downloaded to NFTS and the audit report is printed and reconciled. Each report is annotated to indicate what actions were taken during the reconciliation process.

Semi-Annual Audit Status Report (Excel)

Audit Plan (Access)

NFTS Audit Log

All Unaudited RPC's

Unaudited Workstations/Staging Areas

How to interpret the report: This report shows file audit progress by RPC in a sequential order. The database is color coded; an entry with a white background indicates an area that has not been audited.

Additional Comments: The database needs to be monitored to ensure the RPC's are up to date and accurate. It also must be monitored to ensure that enough resources are being allocated to reach targeted completion dates. This report can be used as a workflow management tool by the contractor.

I-130 Upfront RFE Process:

Purpose of Report: The contractor has an automated system for generating/printing RFE notices for I-130's. The report is run through Access. The receipt numbers for these cases are run through a database which pulls data from CLAIMS. The database then produces the RFE notice which is then prepared for mailing.

Type of report: Database.

Report number: CSC-7

Frequency: Daily

I130 Upfront RFE Process (Access)

How to print the report: The contractor will input the I-130 receipt numbers and officer stamp numbers into the database. After bouncing against CLAIMS, the notices are printed.

Printed RFE Notice

How to interpret the report: Additional Comments: None.

I-129 Auto Revocation/Withdrawal Process:

Purpose of Report: The I-129 Auto Rev/Withdrawal process was created to enable the contractor to generate Auto Revocation and Withdrawal notices in batches. The report is an Access database that requires the contractor to input receipt numbers related to Auto Revocations or Withdrawals into the database which are then bounced off of CLAIMS. The contractor also notifies local IT of the receipt numbers being prepared so that CLAIMS can be updated as well. After receiving confirmation from local IT that CLAIMS has been updated, the contractor prints the notices and prepares them for mailing.

Type of report: Database.

Report number: CSC-8

Frequency: Daily

How to print the report: The contractor reviews correspondence received which requests a withdrawal and enters these receipt numbers into the database. After entering the receipt numbers, the receipts are bounced off of CLAIMS to gather beneficiary and attorney information. Then the report is prepared/exported. A copy of this report is sent to local IT via email so that CLAIMS can be updated. Local IT confirms the updates were successful and then the contractor physically prints the notices and mails them out.

6.14 System Generated Reports

System generated reports are generated manually or automatically depending on which USICS system is being accessed. System generated reports need to be reconciled and monitored in accordance with USCIS guidance for each individual system to ensure accuracy of electronic records. System generated reports can be categorized as one of the following:
Informational - Informational reports are generated when needed to verify data, get counts or monitor a process.
Reoccurring - Reoccurring reports are generated on a daily, weekly or monthly basis and require reconciliation to ensure the accuracy of system data. Most reoccurring reports will grow in size when not reconciled since these reports are cumulative.
Error Report - Error Reports are usually generated automatically or by OIT when two USCIS systems try to interface and update data. When the data from one system does not match the data from the other system an error report is generated to show which records were not updated. These reports are usually daily and not cumulative.

I192 Master List

Purpose of Report: The I192 Master List is a spreadsheet maintained by the contractor to track cases submitted for FBI name check validation. When a name check request is electronically created on the I192 and submitted, via e-mail, the contractor checks the spreadsheet to see if the name has already been submitted. If the name has not been submitted, the information is then updated on the I192 Master List spreadsheet. The I192 Master List spreadsheet is located on the J drive and has limited access and update capabilities. At the end of the week, the contractor submits the weekly requests to Headquarters.

Type of report: Spreadsheet Report number:

Frequency: Daily

How to print the report: The spreadsheet or any relevant portion can be printed in Excel using the print function on the computer.

How to interpret the report: The spreadsheet is self explanatory by column headers. The user can search by A # or other category, to determine if and/or when the case was submitted for a name check System rejects have barcodes that are audited to the drawers they have been placed in. Manual rejects without barcodes are also placed in the drawers and recorded on the spreadsheet to show the location and listing the name of the applicant and any G-28 lawyer. The batch date is the date of the G-254 created for the unclaimed money deposit for the fees returned with the undeliverable applications.

Additional Comments: Files pulled for processing or return to the applicant are updated on the spreadsheet and lined off of the G-254 if necessary.

Lists of multiple files that need to be pulled and moved to other locations or sent to the requester are e-mailed to the contractor. The contractor records these pulls on the spreadsheet and forwards the request on to the team responsible based on the file location. The log records the number of files to be pulled, the type of file, where they are to be delivered, if screen prints are needed, and when the pull must be completed. The list ID links to the original e-mail.

Additional Comments: CPAU audits a sample of the pulls to ensure all files are timely pulled and correctly delivered.

PMI Report

Purpose of Report: The PMI Report is provided by the Contractor to validate the hours logged by employees conducting Fileroom Operation tasks against the hours billed in the Contractor's Fileroom Invoice. The report is requested from the Contractor via email and hard copy memo letter. The Contractor is provided 4 business days to supply the PMI Report for the randomly selected employees to compare the PMI hours to the billed Fileroom hours.

The PMI Report is provided to CPAU in Excel format electronically and contains the employee's name, employee number, tasks performed, date, production for the day, and time spent on the operation. The report includes all tasks completed in Fileroom, Data Entry, Fee Collection and Mailroom Operations. This includes meetings and training sessions.

Type of report: Excel Database.

Report number:

Frequency: Varies based on the number of invoices billed.

How to print the report: The Contractor will forward the report with the randomly selected employees electronically, and CPAU with verify all of the selected employees are included in the report, and print the report as needed.

How to interpret the report: This report provides the tasks worked on by employees, their production and time on their tasks. The tasks identify the specific Fileroom and non-Fileroom work completed and the time logged on these tasks. Only the hours logged working on Fileroom Operations are counted to validate against the employees' Timesheets and Fileroom Invoice.

Employee Timesheets:

Purpose of Report: Contractor Employees Timesheets are requested from the Contractor to validate the Fileroom hours worked by employees against the Fileroom Operation hours billed on the Fileroom Invoice. The Timesheets are provided electronically to CPAU, and the Timesheets indicate the hour spent on Fileroom, Data Entry and Mailroom Operations.

Type of report: Reports.

Report number:

Frequency: Varies based on the number of invoices billed.

How to print the report: The Contractor will forward the Timesheets with the randomly selected employees electronically, and CPAU with verifies all Timesheets for the selected employees are included, verify the dates of the Timesheets correspond to the billing period, and print the Timesheets. ## I-129 H1B CRIS (CAP Receipt Information System) Database:

Purpose of Report: The CRIS database was designed to aid the California Service Center (CSC) in the tracking and processing of H1B CAP cases. The CRIS database is an Access database that require the Contractor to input the RNG number and/or receipt number of the respective H1B CAP case and input the H1B cap case data information such as petitioner, attorney and beneficiary name, address, DOB, COB, EIN number and reason for rejection when rejecting the H1B cap cases. CRIS information is also used to respond to the inquiries from the petitioner and the attorneys. The database has a search capability to search for a H1B cap case by CAP number, petitioner/beneficiary's name and box number etc. The database has capability to produce reject and/or acknowledgement letters.

Type of report: Database.

Report Name/number: CSC- CRIS

Frequency: Daily during the H1B CAP open season.

How to print the report: The contractor will maintain the RNG lottery CAP number information and the other case information into CRIS database to ensure that all H1B CAP cases received at CSC are accounted for. The information relating to the rejected cap cases is entered into CRIS database. The Contractor selects the appropriate reject letter stored in the CRIS database and then prints the reject letter by clicking the print button.

How to interpret the database: The CAP case number information is updated in "Updates/Data entry block and various queries are performed by selecting the fields listed under "Database Queries" block . The various options are listed in the below screen print.

Additional Comments: The CRIS database can import and export data as necessary. The administrators have a capability to control the data and protect the database by restricting and/or granting permissions, such as read/write or read only access. This database can be upgraded and managed without interrupting users. This database can be utilized by multiple users. This CRIS database has features to run automated queries to list non-selected, winners, masters, regular cap and PP cases and to produce Pick-lists with Box locations. The database has the flexibility for administrators to customize additional queries as needed. This database can be used as a workflow management tool by USCIS and the contractor.

JIT Report:

Purpose of Report: The JIT Report was created to enable Adjudications management to view pending file counts on the file room shelves on a weekly or daily basis. The JIT report is an Access database that requires the contractor to maintain RPC code descriptions of what is currently on the shelves and staging areas in the file room. The database will group RPC codes with like descriptions and produce a count.

Type of report: Database.

Report number: CSC-1

Frequency: Weekly (Tuesday).

How to print the report: The contractor will maintain the RPC code tables in the JIT report database to ensure the RPC descriptions are accurate and current. The contractor will run the JIT report and access the reports tab to generate the report. The JIT report will be emailed every Tuesdays to the designated ACDS and Records employees in the center.

JIT Report Entry

RPC Maintenance by Supervisor

How to interpret the report: This report shows file counts grouped by RPC description. The report will display a receipt file count, and A-file count and a total file count for the RPC. The RPC descriptions are grouped by the Division that process the work.

Sample of Finished JIT Report

JIT Report

Additional Comments: The database needs to be monitored to ensure it is up to date and accurate. The JIT report database will also update and Excel spreadsheet on the common drive that has file counts for every RPC in the center. This report can be used as a workflow management tool by USCIS and the contractor.

Duplicate Receipt Notices:

Purpose of Report: The Duplicate Receipt Notice database was created to enable the contractor to print duplicate notices upon request. When Adjudications or Records receives a request for a duplicate notice, the receipt number is updated on a designated spreadsheet on the common drive. Each evening on second shift, the contractor will run the duplicate receipt notice database which will access the receipt numbers in the spreadsheet, query the number against CLAIMS 3 and generate the notices. Once all the receipt notices have been printed and verified, the receipt numbers on the spreadsheet on the common drive can be deleted. Receipt notices that are not generated through claims will need to be keyed manually using the templates in the database

Report number: CSC-2

Frequency: Daily.

How to print the report: The contractor will access the Duplicate Receipt Notice database on the common drive and select run. Verify the number of notices matches the number of receipt numbers in the spreadsheet on the common drive. There may be additional receipt notices if there is a G28.

Spreadsheet Listing Receipt Numbers

Duplicate Receipt Notice Receipt Number Entry

How to interpret the report: This database uses templates of receipt notices in the reports tab of the database to generate the notices. The templates will need to be updated from time to time depending on changes from USCIS.

Additional Comments: The database needs to be monitored to ensure templates are up to date and the contractor is correctly generating the notices.

Closed File Verification Report:

Purpose of Report: The Closed File Verification Report (CFV) was created to enable the identification of open cases prior to them being shipped to file storage facilities. The CFV report is an Access database that requires the contractor to maintain RPC code descriptions (referred to as "box" codes) for boxes of adjudicated files that have been prepared for shipment. The database will identify open cases within each "box code" so that they may be removed and properly updated prior to shipment.

Type of report: Database.

Report number: CSC-3

Frequency: Each time a full pallet of boxed approved cases is prepared and daily for denied cases.

How to print the report: The contractor will reconcile the RPC codes for each box to ensure that no files are charged to that RPC prior to placing files in the box. The contractor then enters the RPC range into the CFV database which generates the CFV report. The report will be printed and used as a manifest to remove the listed files from their boxes.

Closed File Verification Database

Entering RPC Ranges into the Database

How to interpret the report: This report shows open files grouped by RPC description (box). The report will display the receipt or A-File number, the Form type, the last active date, and status. The files are pulled from the RPC/box and returned to the appropriate division for action.

Final Closed File Verification Report

CSC Backlog Reduction Fact Worksheet:

Purpose of Report: The CSC Backlog Reduction Report was created to enable the contractor to accurately estimate the amount of time and number of resources needed to reduce their backlogs. This report is an Excel spreadsheet that requires the contractor to accurately account for their pending backlog counts, oldest processing dates, anticipated incoming volumes, and number of available resources. In addition to this, targeted completion dates for brining these areas into compliance are provided.

Report number: CSC-4

Frequency: Submitted to COTR every Thursday night

How to print the report: The contractor maintains this spreadsheet on the common drive.

CSC Backlog Reduction Fact Worksheet

How to interpret the report: This report tracks backlogged processes, oldest dates, total backlog volume, projected date of compliance, and status. The top five areas of concern are indicated at the bottom of this report.

Additional Comments: This report can be used as a workflow management tool by the contractor.

Semi-Annual Audit Plan Report:

Purpose of Report: The Semi-Annual Audit Plan Report was created to enable the contractor to plan their file audits and track their progress. This report requires the contractor to maintain an audit record for each RPC in their areas of responsibility. The progress of their "rolling" audit is projected in order to calculate a date of completion.

Frequency: Weekly

How to print the report: The contractor maintains an accurate listing of each of their RPC's and its audit history. The report is run through Access. The database records the date of the audit, which clerk performed the audit, and the results of any reconciliatory actions taken on the audit reports from their portable scanning devices.

Auditing sheets (cover signs) are used during the physical audits to identify the areas currently being audited. After each area is audited, the portable scanning device is downloaded to NFTS and the audit report is printed and reconciled. Each report is annotated to indicate what actions were taken during the reconciliation process.

Semi-Annual Audit Status Report (Excel)

Audit Plan (Access)

NFTS Audit Log

Unaudited Workstations/Staging Areas

How to interpret the report: This report shows file audit progress by RPC in a sequential order. The database is color coded; an entry with a white background indicates an area that has not been audited.

Additional Comments: The database needs to be monitored to ensure the RPC's are up to date and accurate. It also must be monitored to ensure that enough resources are being allocated to reach targeted completion dates. This report can be used as a workflow management tool by the contractor.

I-130 Upfront RFE Process:

Purpose of Report: The contractor has an automated system for generating/printing RFE notices for I-130's. The report is run through Access. The receipt numbers for these cases are run through a database which pulls data from CLAIMS. The database then produces the RFE notice which is then prepared for mailing.

Type of report: Database.

Report number: CSC-7

Frequency: Daily

1130 Upfront RFE Process (Access)

How to print the report: The contractor will input the I-130 receipt numbers and officer stamp numbers into the database. After bouncing against CLAIMS, the notices are printed.

Printed RFE Notice

How to interpret the report: Additional Comments: None.

I-129 Auto Revocation/Withdrawal Process:

Purpose of Report: The I-129 Auto Rev/Withdrawal process was created to enable the contractor to generate Auto Revocation and Withdrawal notices in batches. The report is an Access database that requires the contractor to input receipt numbers related to Auto Revocations or Withdrawals into the database which are then bounced off of CLAIMS. The contractor also notifies local IT of the receipt numbers being prepared so that CLAIMS can be updated as well. After receiving confirmation from local IT that CLAIMS has been updated, the contractor prints the notices and prepares them for mailing.

Type of report: Database.

Report number: CSC-8

Frequency: Daily

How to print the report: The contractor reviews correspondence received which requests a withdrawal and enters these receipt numbers into the database. After entering the receipt numbers, the receipts are bounced off of CLAIMS to gather beneficiary and attorney information. Then the report is prepared/exported. A copy of this report is sent to local IT via email so that CLAIMS can be updated. Local IT confirms the updates were successful and then the contractor physically prints the notices and mails them out.

Denis – we have to find a way to make this happen because we pushed OCC and argued vehemently to be able to send the case back where the check is returned for NSF. It does absolutely no good for them to correct the fee deficiency, because at that point, they get credit for the date the deficiency is corrected, and by that time, the filing acceptance period will have closed. It also doesn't make the agency look good. We need to come up with ways to deal with this. –Sophia

Carol – Sophia,

I am fine with Sunny's advisory on how to treat filings with an NSF. However, the Burlington Finance Center is just not wired to not try to collect on an NSF. If we want them to execute a special procedure to follow bullets 4 and 5 below, it is something we would have to get them on board with beforehand. We would be asking the BSF to only send out invoices for the $30 NSF charge and not the application fee. This may not be possible to do in practice.

(1) Under the regulation you do have the opportunity to make the bad check good within 14 days.
(2) However, it's clear that you don't get the advantage of the date you filed the application with bad check.
(3) Normally, we would give you a filing date when we collect the good check.
(4) However, in the H-1B context, where we already have more than enough petitions with earlier filing dates to take up all slots, it would be a fruitless action to have the petitioner make the check good, when we'd just have to return it again anyway because the petitioner's new filing date necessarily will be a date on which we are no longer accepting petitions.
(5) Therefore, it's most efficient and fair for all concerned, and consistent with the regulations, to reject any petition that turns out to have a bad check.

Hi Sophia

After reviewing the NSF issue, OCC agrees that H-1B cap subject petitions should be rejected if a NSF fee is remitted. To support this contention, Phil Busch provided the following analysis:

(6) Under the regulation you do have the opportunity to make the bad check good within 14 days.
(7) However, it's clear that you don't get the advantage of the date you filed the application with bad check.
(8) Normally, we would give you a filing date when we collect the good check.
(9) However, in the H-1B context, where we already have more than enough petitions with earlier filing dates to take up all slots, it would be a fruitless action to have the petitioner make the check good, when we'd just have to return it again anyway because the petitioner's new filing date necessarily will be a date on which we are no longer accepting petitions.

(10)Therefore, it's most efficient and fair for all concerned, and consistent with the regulations, to reject any petition that turns out to have a bad check.

We'll be on the lookout for the filing tips worksheet. Thanks again for your help.

Sunny and Claudia – We are about to send you the filing tips and worksheets this afternoon for OCC concurrence. We need to get them posted this week, because petitioners are preparing their 4/1 filings now. Also, we have a meeting with ACIP next week to review the filing tips and helpful hints.

In anticipation of these documents, and to facilitate quick clearance, I wanted to flag the 2 issues for you that have changed from last year:

1) Bounced Checks: If one or more of the fees remitted are returned, that will result in the petitioner's loss of consideration for an available slot under the FY '10 H-1B cap. This is based on the regulations at 8 CFR 103.2(a)()(I), which provide that an application or petition which is submitted with the wrong filing fee shall be rejected as improperly filed and that the rejected applications and petitions, and ones in which the checks or other financial instrument used to pay the filing fee is subsequently returned as non-payable with not retain a filing date. While we normally provide petitioners the opportunity to correct the fee deficiency, in all cases, the filing date is not established until the date the proper fee is remitted, i.e., the fee deficiency has been corrected. For an H-1B cap subject petition, any fee deficiency that is corrected would necessarily fall outside the filing acceptance period. As explained during prior meetings, this position is necessary because of the abuse we have found during last year. It is also necessary to ensure consistent treatment between H-1B petitions and all other immigration filings where a fee is returned for insufficient payment.

    - Petitioners are making speculative filings with insufficient fees and will correct them only if their petition is selected. This is costly for the agency and it is not fair to those petitioners who properly file with correct and sufficient fees during the filing acceptance period.

    - This treatment of insufficient fees puts H-1B filings on parity with how we accord filing (or priority dates) for other immigration filings across the board. For example, if an I-130 is filed with an insufficient fee, the petitioner is given the opportunity to correct the fee deficiency; however, the I-130 filing date is not established until the date that the fee deficiency has been corrected. Unlike H-1Bs, there is no limited filing window for I-130s, as there is for cap subject H-1B cases. Allowing H-1B petitioners to correct the fee deficiency and retain their H-1B slot would actually provide preferential and inconsistent treatment to H-1B petitioners that is not accorded to any other petitioner or applicant for any other immigration benefit.

2) Degree Confirmation: Based on our meeting, if all the requirements for the degree have been met, but the degree has not yet been awarded, we will accept:
   - A final transcript; OR
   - A letter from the Registrar; OR
   - A letter executed by the person in charge of the records of the educational institution where the degree was awarded.

The newly-enacted TARP provisions will be in a separate USCIS Update, which is also forthcoming.

Please let me know if you have any questions. --Sophia

Subject: FY-'10 H1B Draft Reject letters

Please review the attached draft FY-'10 H1B Cap reject letters that we could use them to reject FY-'10 H1B cap cases. VSC and HQ had concurred with the verbiage of each reject letter during our H1B Cap meeting that was held at Washington DC last year.

I have modified the verbiage of these reject letters so that we could use them to reject FY-'10 CAP cases. Please see the below description for each reject letter.

Reject letter # 1 refers to the rejection of late filed Master Cap case.

Reject letter # 2 refers to the rejection of late filed Regular Cap case.

Reject letter #3 refers to the rejection of incorrect employment start date for H1B cap case

Reject letter #4 refers to the rejection of "not selected" Cap case.

Reject letter #5 refers to the rejection of winner cap case that was filed improperly.

Reject letter # 6 refers to the rejection of "early filed" which is the same as reject letter # 5. The only difference is that I added the "Filed too early" reject reason in the block 9 of the reject letter. After the cap filing period, we may take off that reject reason and use the reject letter # 5. VSC and CSC each could use their Service Center mailing address in these draft reject letters.

Could you please all advise if you concur with the verbiage of these reject letters and concur with using them to reject FY-'10 H1B Cap cases?

Thanks,

USCIS Update

USCIS ANNOUNCES CENTRALIZED FILING LOCATION FOR CERTAIN H-1B CAP EXEMPT PETITIONERS

WASHINGTON – U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) announced today a new customer service initiative to streamline the adjudication of H-1B petitions. Effective today, USCIS will employ a special unit dedicated to processing these types of H-1B cap exempt petitions at the USCIS California Service Center (CSC). Aliens employed by certain types of educational, nonprofit or governmental organizations, as defined below (normally referred to as "cap exempt," aliens employed by such entities are not subject to the H-1B numerical limitations). See section 214(g)(5)(a) and (b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA); and 8 CFR 214.2 (h)(8)(A).

H-1B "cap exempt" petitions, as referenced here, include petitions filed by:

- Institutions of higher education, as defined in section 101(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965, 20 U.S.C. 1001(a);
- Nonprofit organizations or entities related to or affiliated with institutions of higher education; and
- Nonprofit research organizations or governmental research organizations, as defined in 8 CFR 214.2(h)(19)(iii)(C).

Such institutions and organizations can indicate that their H-1B filing is cap exempt by marking Form I-129 (Petition of Non-Immigrant Worker) with a "yes" answer to questions 1, 2, or 3 in Part C of the H-1B Data Collection and Filing Fee Exemption Supplement (page 10).

H-1B petitioners are now encouraged to use the following special mailing address for qualifying H-1B cap exempt petitions. To determine if your petition qualifies, please make sure your institution or organization fits one of the categories listed above.

For Direct Mail:

U. S. Citizenship and Immigration Services
California Service Center
ATTN: CAP EXEMPT H-1B Processing Unit
P.O. BOX 30040
Laguna Niguel, CA 92607-3004

For non-United States Postal Service (USPS) deliveries (e.g. private couriers):

U. S. Citizenship and Immigration Services
California Service Center
24000 Avila Road, Room 2312
Laguna Niguel, CA 92677

Each H-1B petitioner is encouraged to mark the outside of the envelope and the top margin of the I-129 form, with "EXEMPT." This will ensure quick identification of the H-1B filing throughout the petition's processing at CSC.

If a cap exempt H-1B petition is received at a different Service Center, that Service Center will expeditiously forward the petition to the CSC for processing. In the near future, USCIS will post special filing instructions to Form I-129 requiring all[1] qualifying H-1B cap exempt petitions to be filed at the CSC.

Please note, the highest volume of H-1B filings occurs during the month of April (Six months before the new fiscal year). This may result in longer than average receipting times or other interruptions in processing times. The public is reminded that petitioners may file a qualifying H-1B cap exempt petition at any time of the year dependent on the petitioner's need, and no earlier than six months ahead of the intended start date.

– USCIS –

[1] H-1B "cap exempt" petitions, as referenced here, do not cover H-1B petitions filed on behalf of beneficiaries requesting an exemption from the cap on account of holding a U.S. Master's degree or higher, requesting an extension of stay, or change of employer, or petitions requesting an amendment. These types of petitions, while also "exempt" should continue to be filed in accordance with the filing charts on uscis.gov and the Form I-129 instructions.

CHANGES TO THE FY2009 H-1B PROGRAM

WASHINGTON – U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) issued an interim final rule today that prohibits employers from filing more than one petition for an H-1B visa for a single employee in a fiscal year. The change is intended to promote a fair and systematic process for H-1B petitioners. This rule ensures that companies filing H-1B petitions that are subject to numerical limits will have an equal chance to receive consideration for an H-1B worker.

The interim final rule will become effective upon publication in the Federal Register and may be accessed via USCIS' website at www.uscis.gov.

BACKGROUND

U.S. businesses utilize the H-1B program to employ foreign workers in fields that require theoretical and practical expertise in specialized occupations requiring a bachelor's degree or higher (or its equivalent), such as scientists, engineers, or computer programmers. By law, USCIS cannot grant more than 65,000 new H-1B visas per fiscal year, subject to certain limited exceptions. The first 20,000 H-1B petitions filed on behalf of aliens with U.S.-earned masters' or higher degrees are exempt from the H-1B numerical limitation of 65,000. USCIS administers a separate "20,000 cap" for such exempt petitions.

USCIS will use a random selection process for all the master's degree or higher cap-exempt cases received on the first five business days available for filing H-1B petitions for a given fiscal year, if necessary. In the event that the U.S. master's exemption limit is reached on the first five business days, USCIS will first conduct the random selection process for such petitions before it begins random selection for petitions to be counted toward the 65,000 cap. Petitions eligible for the U.S. master's degree or higher exemption that are not selected to receive an H-1B visa number from the 20,000 cap will be considered with the other H-1B petitions in the random selection for the 65,000 cap filed on the first five business days.

CAP-EXEMPT PETITION

USCIS also notes that petitions for new H-1B employment are exempt from the cap if the aliens will work at the defined institutions of higher education or a related or affiliated nonprofit entities, or at nonprofit research organizations or governmental research organizations. Thus, employers may continue to file petitions for these exempt H-1B categories regardless of H-1B visa number availability.

(more)

CAP PROCEDURES

USCIS will use the following process for handling H-1B petitions subject to the FY 2009 cap:

- April 1, 2008 is the first day petitions may be received for an October 1, 2008 start date. When it is determined that the numerical limitations have been reached, USCIS employs a random selection process to choose among the petitions received on the "final receipt date." If the "final receipt date" falls within any one of the first five business days, the random selection will be run using all the cap-subject petitions received on those five days.

- USCIS will reject and return the filing fee(s) for all cap-subject H-1B petitions that are not selected in the process described above. The new rule clarifies that this provision only applies to petitions that indicate they are cap-subject. If a petitioner claims to be exempt from the cap and is later found to be subject to the cap, USCIS will not refund or return fees and that petition will be denied if no cap numbers are available.

- Petitions for the FY 2009 cap received before April 1, 2008 will be rejected. A petition is considered received when USCIS takes possession of and stamps the petition as received, not by the date the petition is postmarked.

In order to fully utilize its data entry and initial processing capacity, USCIS may choose to distribute filings received at one service center to other service centers for data entry. In the event that USCIS exercises this option, petitioners may receive receipt notices or other correspondence from a service center other than the one to which their H-1B petition was mailed.

PREMIUM PROCESSING

Cap-subject petitions requesting premium processing that are received on the "final receipt date," or during the initial five business day period mentioned above, cannot be processed until after the random selection has been completed. The premium processing 15-day adjudication period (processing deadline) will not begin until such time as USCIS has completed the random selection process.

The number of master's exemption cases received cannot be determined until all the petitions have been sorted and counted. The same holds true for the master's exemption premium processing cases. In accordance with established guidelines, USCIS will refund premium processing fees for any filings for which it cannot meet processing deadlines. Even if USCIS issues a refund of the premium processing fee, it will continue to provide premium processing for these filings until completion.

CURRENT H-1B WORKERS

Petitions filed on behalf of current H-1B workers do not count towards the congressionally mandated H-1B cap. Accordingly, this rule does not affect USCIS processing of petitions filed to:

- Extend the amount of time a current H-1B worker may remain in the United States;
- Change the terms of employment for current H-1B workers;
- Allow current H-1B workers to change from one cap-subject position to a different cap-subject position with a different employer; or
- Allow current H-1B workers to work concurrently in a second H-1B position.

USCIS ANNOUNCES INTERIM RULE ON H-1B VISAS

Rule Modifies Selection Process and Prohibits Multiple Filings

WASHINGTON – U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) transmitted an interim final rule to the Federal Register today that prohibits employers from filing multiple H-1B petitions for the same employee. These changes will ensure that companies filing H-1B petitions subject to congressionally mandated numerical limits have an equal chance to employ an H-1B worker. To ensure a fair and orderly distribution of available H-1B visas, USCIS will deny or revoke multiple petitions filed by an employer for the same H-1B worker and will not refund the filing fees submitted with multiple or duplicative petitions.

This rule does not preclude related employers (such as a parent company and its subsidiary) from filing petitions on behalf of the same alien for different positions, based on a legitimate business need. The interim final rule becomes effective upon publication in the Federal Register.

Last August, President Bush announced that the Administration would be undertaking a series of immigration and border security reforms. The changes to the H-1B filing process under this rule are an important part of that initiative.

On April 1, 2008, employers may file petitions requesting H-1B workers for fiscal year 2009 employment starting on October 1, 2008. For fiscal year 2009, Congress has set a limit of 65,000 for most H-1B workers. Additionally, the first 20,000 H-1B workers who have a U.S. master's degree or higher are exempt from the cap. Under current procedures, which are not changed by this rule, once USCIS receives 20,000 petitions for aliens with a U.S. master's degree or higher, all other cases requesting the educational exemption are counted toward the 65,000 cap. Once the 65,000 cap is reached for a fiscal year, USCIS will announce that the cap has been filled and reject further petitions subject to the cap.

This rule also stipulates that if USCIS determines the number of H-1B petitions received meets the cap within the first five business days of accepting applications for the coming fiscal year, USCIS will apply a random selection process among all H-1B petitions received during this time period. If the 20,000 advanced degree limit is reached during the first five business days, USCIS will randomly select from those petitions ahead of conducting the random selection for the 65,000 limit. Petitions subject to the 20,000 limit that are not selected in that random selection will be considered with the other H-1B petitions in the random selection for the 65,000 limit.

The rule further clarifies that USCIS will deny petitions that incorrectly claim an exemption from any H-1B numerical limits. Those filing fees will not be returned.

This interim final rule can be viewed, along with additional information on this rule and the H-1B program, at USCIS' website at www.uscis.gov.

USCIS TO ACCEPT H-1B PETITIONS SENT TO CALIFORNIA OR VERMONT SERVICE CENTERS

Temporary Accommodation Made for FY-09 Cap-Subject H-1B Petitions

WASHINGTON – U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) announced today that it will not reject an H-1B petition that is subject to the fiscal year 2009 cap solely on the grounds that it was received at the wrong service center (e.g., the petition may have been inadvertently mailed to the California Service Center instead of the Vermont Service Center or vice versa).

It is important to note this accommodation does not apply if the petitions were sent to the Texas or Nebraska Service Centers.

USCIS is taking this limited, short-term measure to alleviate concerns from the public where an H-1B petition has been received by USCIS but at the incorrect Service Center. This measure applies only to H-1B petitions subject to the fiscal year 2009 cap that are received by USCIS before the close of business on the "final receipt date". USCIS will announce the final receipt date once the agency determines it has received the number of petitions needed to fill the congressionally mandated limitations of 65,000 new H-1B visas and 20,000 U.S. advanced degree exemptions per fiscal year. For more information on the H-1B program, please visit the USCIS website.

USCIS RELEASES PRELIMINARY NUMBER OF FY 2009 H-1B CAP FILINGS

WASHINGTON – U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) today announced a preliminary number of nearly 163,000 H-1B petitions received during the filing period ending on April 7, 2008. More than 31,200 of those petitions were for the advanced degree exemption.

USCIS expects next week it will conduct the computer-generated random selection process, beginning with the selection of the 20,000 petitions under the advanced degree exemption. Those petitions not selected under the advanced degree exemption will join the random selection process for the regular 65,000 cap.

USCIS will reject, and return filing fees for all cap-subject petitions not randomly selected, unless found to be a duplicate. USCIS will handle duplicate filings in accordance with the interim final rule published on March 24, 2008 in the Federal Register.

USCIS will provide regular updates as the processing of FY 2009 H-1B cap cases continues.

USCIS RUNS RANDOM SELECTION PROCESS FOR H-1B PETITIONS

WASHINGTON – U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) today conducted the computer-generated random selection processes on H-1B petitions, to select which H-1B petitions for fiscal year 2009 (FY 2009) would continue to full adjudication. If approved these H-1B petitions will be eligible to receive an H-1B visa number.

USCIS conducted two random selections, first on petitions qualifying for the 20,000 "master's or higher degree" (advanced degree) exemption, and second on the remaining advance degree petitions together with the general H-1B pool of petitions, for the 65,000 cap.

The approximately 163,000 petitions received on the first five days of the eligible filing period for FY 2009 (April 1 through April 7, 2008) were labeled with unique numerical identifiers. USCIS has notified the appropriate service centers which numerical identifiers have been randomly selected, so each center may continue with final processing of the petitions associated with those numerical identifiers.

Petitioners whose properly filed petitions have been selected for full adjudication should receive a receipt notice dated no later than June 2, 2008. USCIS will return unselected petitions with the fee(s) to petitioners or their authorized representatives. As previously announced, duplicate filings will be returned without the fee. The total adjudication process is expected to take approximately eight to ten weeks.

For cases selected through the random selection process and initially filed for premium processing, the 15-day premium processing period begins today (April 14), the day of the random selection process.

USCIS has "wait-listed" some H-1B petitions, meaning they may possibly replace petitions chosen to receive an FY-2009 cap number, but that subsequently are denied, withdrawn, or otherwise found ineligible. USCIS will retain these petitions until a decision is made whether they will replace a previously selected petition. USCIS will send a letter to the wait list petitioners to inform them of their status

USCIS expects that for each of these wait-listed petitions, it will either issue a receipt notice or return the petition with fees within six to eight weeks.

USCIS TO ALLOW F-1 STUDENTS OPPORTUNITY TO REQUEST CHANGE OF STATUS

Short-term, Immediate Measure for Beneficiaries of Selected H-1B Petitions

WASHINGTON—U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) announced today that it would allow F-1 students who are the beneficiaries of selected H-1B petitions for fiscal year (FY) 2009 to request a change of status in lieu of consular notification.

This short-term measure follows an April 8, 2008 interim final rule that, among other actions, automatically extends the F-1 status of qualifying students who are the beneficiaries of approved H-1B petitions to cover the gap between the expiration of a student's F-1 status and the H-1B employment start date of October 1. To obtain the automatic extension, a student must be the beneficiary of an H-1B petition filed for the next fiscal year (with an October 1 employment start date) and have requested a change of status. For F-1 student beneficiaries of petitions that USCIS subsequently rejects, denies, or revokes, or for those who violate their status, the automatic extension terminates at that time.

Since the rule was published after the filing period had closed for new FY 2009 H-1B petitions, many petitioners of F-1 students did not include a request for a change of status with the H-1B petition. Instead, petitioners requested consular notification based on the assumption that these students would have been required to leave the United States to obtain an H-1B visa at a consular office abroad.

USCIS has determined that it will allow petitioners of F-1 students whose H-1B petitions were randomly selected to receive an H-1B visa number for FY2009 following the closure of the filing period, to now request a change of status on behalf of qualified beneficiaries, if such requests are received within 30 days of the issuance of the receipt notice.

To request a change of status in lieu of consular notification, petitioners (or authorized representatives) should send an e-mail with the request to the USCIS service center where their petition is pending within 30 days of the issuance of the receipt notice. Special email addresses for each service center have been established specifically for this purpose. These addresses are listed below and are posted on USCIS' website. Petitioners should e-mail their requests for change of status in lieu of consular notification upon receipt of the notice so the agency has the request before completing H-1B petition adjudication. The requests should include the receipt number and both the petitioner's and beneficiary's name, date of birth, I-94 (Arrival/Departure Record) number, and Student and Exchange Visitor Information System (SEVIS) number. Please do not contact the service center about requesting a change of status until after receiving the receipt notice.

E-mail addresses for requesting change of status are:

- Vermont Service Center
  - Premium Processing cases: VSCPPCAPGAP.Vscppcapgap@dhs.gov
  - Non-Premium cases: VSCNONPPCAPGAP.Vscnonppcapgap@dhs.gov
- California Service Center
  - Premium Processing cases: CSC.ppcapgap@dhs.gov
  - Non-Premium cases: CSC.nonppcapgap@dhs.gov

NOTE: If an F-1 student, who is the beneficiary of a selected 2009 H-1B petition, has a pending request to change to a status other than H-1B but now wants to file under the process outlined above, he or she should withdraw the previously filed change in accordance with established regulations.

Questions and Answers

Revised May 9, 2008

USCIS ANNOUNCES INTERIM RULE ON H-1B VISAS

Rule Modifies Petition Selection Process and Prohibits Multiple Filings

What is the H-1B visa program?

The H-1B visa program is used by U.S. businesses to employ foreign workers in occupations that require theoretical and practical application of highly specialized knowledge and a bachelor's degree or higher (or its equivalent), such as scientists, engineers, or computer programmers.

What is the purpose of the new rule?

The overall goal of the new rule is to promote equal opportunity for prospective petitioners seeking visas for H-1B workers.

What are the specific modifications under the new rule?

1. USCIS will now either deny or revoke multiple petitions filed by an employer for the same H-1B worker.
2. USCIS will not refund filing fees for duplicative or multiple H-1B petitions.
3. In years when USCIS implements the random selection process for petitions, USCIS will include petitions in the random selection process that are filed during the first five business days available for filing H-1B petitions for a given fiscal year, rather than just the first two such days.
4. If a petition incorrectly indicates that it is exempt from any of the H-1B numerical limits, the petition will be denied if no H-1B visa numbers are available and the filing fees will not be returned.

Do the new rules referencing multiple filings on behalf of one worker apply to a parent company and its affiliated entities?

The rule does not prevent related employers (such as a parent company and its subsidiary) from filing petitions on behalf of the same alien for different positions, based on legitimate business need.

How long did it take for the prior FY2008 congressionally mandated H-1B caps to be reached?

April 2, 2007 was the first day H-1B petitions could be received for Fiscal Year 2008. On that day USCIS received enough petitions to fill the 65,000 cap for Fiscal Year 2008. On April 30, 2007, USCIS received enough petitions to fill the 20,000 advanced degree cap.

What are the FY2009 congressionally mandated H-1B caps?

By law, the congressionally mandated cap is 65,000 for new H-1B visas per fiscal year, subject to certain limited exceptions. The advanced degree exemption is 20,000 H-1B visas.

When can employers file an H-1B petition for fiscal year 2009?
April 1, 2008 is the first day petitions may be received for an October 1, 2008 start date.

What happens when the cap is reached?
When it is determined that the numerical limitations have been reached, USCIS employs a random selection process to choose among the petitions received on the "final receipt date." If the "final receipt date" falls within any one of the first five business days, the random selection will be run using all the cap-subject petitions received during those five days.

If the limits are reached during that period:

- 20,000 Reached - USCIS randomly selects from these petitions ahead of selection for the 65,000 limit.
- Over 20,000 Not Selected - Considered with other H-1B petitions in the random selection for the 65,000 limit.
- Under 20,000 – Ongoing approvals counted toward the 20,000 cap until the limit is reached.

If USCIS finds out that an employer is filing multiple petitions for the same potential employee, will USCIS disqualify that employer entirely?

USCIS will handle all duplicate filings in accordance with the interim final rule published on March 24, 2008 in the Federal Register. USCIS will deny or revoke all petitions filed by an employer for the same H-1B worker if more than one is filing is discovered. If duplicate or multiple petitions are discovered, whether one or more such petitions are approved, USCIS will data enter all those duplicative petitions, retain all fees, and either deny the petitions or, if a petition was approved, revoke the petition. The petitions will not be returned to the petitioner.

Helpful Hints for Filing a FY 2009 H-1B Cap Case

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS), anticipating that April 1, 2008 will see a repeat of the mass filings from last year, wishes to offer this list of measures the petitioner can take to ensure that their petition is correctly filed.

For Fiscal Year 2009, the first filing date is Tuesday, April 1, 2008. Cap subject petitions received before that date will be rejected. Petitions are filed at Vermont and California Service Centers, depending on jurisdiction. See filing instructions. Both the forms and the instructions can be downloaded from our website at www.uscis.gov.

Here are some general tips on what to do to make sure that your petition is completed and filed properly.

1. Clearly label all H-1B cap cases in red ink on top margin of Form I-129 petition. Use the following codes:

- Reg. Cap (65,000 regular cap cases minus the C/S cap cases received)
- C/S Cap (Chile/Singapore H-1B1s)
- U.S. Masters (20,000 cap exemption for beneficiaries with U.S. Masters or higher degrees)
- Exempt (for petitions filed by certain institutions of higher education; nonprofit organizations; and nonprofit research organizations or governmental research organizations, as defined in USCIS regulations)

2. Fill out Form I-129 and supplements correctly, consistently and completely.

- Form I-129 petition
- H classification supplement (page 7)
- H-1B Data Collection and Filing Fee Exemption Supplement (pages 10 and 11)

Original signatures are required. Tip: blue ink makes it easy for us to confirm an original.

3. Employer must submit the correct fees as seen on form instructions (separate checks for each are best).

- Form I-129 – $320.
- ACWIA – $1,500 if you have 26 or more full time equivalent employees
  – $750 if you have 25 or less full time equivalent employees
- Fraud fee – $500 (Not for Chile/Singapore cases)
- Premium Processing fee – $1,000 (Form I-907 required)

See Fee Exemption and/or Determination (Page 10 and 11) for detailed instructions on fees.

4. Please send only one petition per envelope. (These may then be mailed together in one mailing package.)

- Regular Cap
- U.S. Master's Cap
- Regular Cap Premium Processing
- U.S. Master's Cap Premium Processing
- H-1B1 Chile/Singapore

Please note that incorrectly completed or filed petitions may result in rejection or denial of the petition.

HELPFUL INFORMATION FOR COMPLETING AND SUBMITTING A FY 2009 H-1B CAP CASE

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) uses the information in Part C of the H-1B Data Collection and Filing Fee Exemption Supplement (Form I-129, page 11) to determine whether a petition is subject to the 65,000 and 20,000 (U.S. master's degree or higher) H-1B numerical limitation caps. Please be sure to read these questions and answers carefully in advance of completing the petition.

When can I file an H-1B Cap petition?
H-1B petitions can be filed six months in advance of the requested start date. Therefore, petitions seeking an October 1, 2008 start date can be filed no sooner than April 1, 2008. This is when the majority of H-1B cap subject petitions are filed. Conversely, petitions that are cap exempt may be filed at any time during the year, dependent on the petitioner's need.

Where should I mail my H-1B Cap subject petition?
Specific mailing addresses have been established for purposes of identification and processing of H-1B cap subject cases. The specific filing addresses are listed on the accompanying filing charts. These filing charts are also available on USCIS website. [OCOMM – Can you link to last year's filing chart please] A separate mailing address has been established for certain types of educational or nonprofit organizations which file H-1B petitions on behalf of beneficiaries that are not counted against the H-1B numerical limitations. [See separate Public Update OCOMM PLEASE INSERT LINK]

What is Premium Processing Service?
For certain employment-based immigration benefits, petitioners may choose to file a Form I-907 with the accompanying filing fee of $1,000 to have their petition adjudicated within 15 calendar days (this fee is in addition to the required base filing and other applicable fees). H-1B petitions are eligible for the Premium Processing program. The Form I-907 can be filed at the same time as or subsequent to the filing of Form I-129. If filed subsequent to the Form I-129, please be sure to include the receipt number (i.e. EAC 08 123 51234) of the Form I-129 in the pertinent section of Form I-907. Please use the latest version of Form I-907. Versions prior to August 28, 2006 will not be accepted. For more information concerning the Premium Processing program, please visit our website at www.uscis.gov.

How do I ensure that my H-1B Cap petition is considered properly filed and accepted?
Be sure to complete all sections of the Form I-129 petition, the H Classification Supplement to Form I-129 (pages 7 and 8 of Form I-129), and the H-1B Data Collection and Filing Fee Exemption Supplement (pages 10 and 11). Original signatures are required on each form. Send the correct fee amount.

Checks should be payable to the Department of Homeland Security or U. S. Citizenship and Immigration Services dated within the last six months, and include the proper guarantee amount, and signature.

Here are the current fees that petitioning employers must pay:

Base filing fee – $320
American Competitiveness and Workforce Improvement Act of 1998 (ACWIA) fee -- $750 For employers with 1 to 25 full time equivalent employees unless exempt

– $1,500 For employers with 26 or more full time equivalent employees unless exempt
(see H-1B Data Collection and Filing Fee Exemption Supplement, Part B)

Fraud fee – $500 To be submitted with the initial H-1B petition filed on behalf of each beneficiary by a petitioner. (Not for Chile/Singapore H-1B1 cases)

Premium Processing fee
– $1,000 For employers seeking Premium Processing Service

It is recommended that all signatures on the petition be in blue ink to readily identify the original signature.

A certified Labor Condition Application (Form ETA 9035) from the Department of Labor must be submitted at the time of filing. A copy of the Labor Condition Application is acceptable. If the Labor Condition Application from the Department of Labor is for multiple positions, provide the name, and USCIS case receipt number of any alien who has previously utilized it.

A duplicate copy of the petition must be submitted at the time of filing if the beneficiary will be seeking nonimmigrant visa issuance abroad. Please review the Department of State website at http://travel.state.gov/ to make sure that the consulate indicated on Form I-129 is able to process the beneficiary's nonimmigrant visa application and for any other consulate-specific special instructions.

How do I organize my H-1B package?
A separate check for each applicable filing fee (Form I-129, Premium Processing, Fraud Fee, and/or ACWIA fee) is preferred.

Here is the preferred order of documents at time of submission. Applicable fees should be stapled to the bottom right corner of the top document (Form I-907, Form G-28, or Form I-129).

- Form I-907 (if filing for Premium Processing Service);
- Form G-28 (if represented by attorney or accredited representative);
- Form I-129 ("Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker");
- H Classification Supplement to Form I-129;
- H-1B Data Collection and Filing Fee Exemption Supplement;
- Provide a Table of Contents;
    - Tab items as listed in Table of Contents;
    - Arrival-Departure Record (Form I-94) (if the beneficiary is in the US);
    - and, if applicable, the SEVIS Form I-20 (if current or former F-1 student or F-2 dependent), SEVIS Form DS-2019 (if current or former J-1 or J-2) or Form I-566 (if current A or G nonimmigrant)
    - Certified Labor Condition Application, Form ETA 9035, from Department of Labor;
    - Employer/Attorney/Representative letter;
    - Other supporting documentation;
    - Duplicate copy of the petition if the beneficiary will be seeking nonimmigrant visa issuance abroad.

If multiple petitions will be included in the same courier service or Post Office package, please place individual petitions into separate envelopes within the package.

FILING DOCUMENTATION

Notice of Entry of Appearance as Attorney or Representative (Form G-28)
If the petitioner will be represented by an attorney or other accredited representative, a properly executed Form G-28 should be submitted. Each Form G-28 should include the following:

- All sections completed;
- The printed name and signature of the representative. The representative's signature can be either an original or a facsimile; and
- The original signature of the petitioner.

Form I-129 Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker

- Please be sure to complete all sections of the form accurately. [OComm—could we link somewhere to Main Errors tip sheet]
- Be sure the beneficiary's name is spelled properly and that his/her date of birth is displayed in the proper format (mm/dd/yyyy). Also, country of birth/citizenship and the I-94 # (if applicable) should be reviewed for accuracy.
- If the beneficiary will ultimately be seeking issuance of a visa at a consular office abroad, a copy of the petition and supporting documentation should be included with the filing. For cases where the beneficiary will be seeking a change of status in the United States, a copy is not necessary.
- If the beneficiary is seeking an extension or change of status, the petition should include evidence (e.g. Form I-94 or Form I-797 approval notice) to establish that the beneficiary will have maintained a valid nonimmigrant status through the employment start date being requested.
- A copy of the beneficiary's valid passport.

H Classification Supplement to Form I-129 (pages 7-8 of Form I-129)

- Please be sure to complete all sections of the form accurately.
  In listing previous periods of stay in H/L classification (question 3), please also include the actual nonimmigrant classification (e.g. H-1B or H-4) held.
- Petitioner must sign the form, preferably in blue ink.

H-1B Data Collection and Filing Fee Supplement form (pages 10-11 of Form I-129)

- Please be sure to complete all sections of the form accurately.
- If the beneficiary has earned a Masters Degree or higher from a U.S. educational institution, be sure to answer accordingly in Part A, question 5 and Part C, question 7.
- If the petition does not involve a change of employer, Part C question 6 is not relevant. Thus, please answer "No" or provide an "N/A" in the margin of the form to the left of the question.
- Petitioner must sign the form, preferably in blue ink.

Form I-907 Request for Premium Processing

- Please be sure to complete all sections of the form accurately with original signatures.
- If there is a valid Form G-28 with the file and the attorney is signing the Form I-907, then the representative should sign in both Part 3 and 4 of the Form I-907. Otherwise, the petitioner's signature is required. We prefer that the signature(s) be in blue ink.
- When form I-907 is filed after the filing of Form I-129 please include a copy of the Form I-129 receipt notice along with the Form I-907.

Please visit www.uscis.gov frequently for filing updates or call the National Customer Service Center at (800) 375-5283 for up-to-date information.

Would you contact Stephanie and see that she knows that the e-filing template can't have any different fields than the Claims data screens for the I-129 do? And that changing any data fields in Claims is a year long – or longer – process?

Just loop back to me on this by Thursday when we know more.

Dennis and I met with efiling last week and we had a few get backs that I am late on:

1. Currently the following classification cannot be e-filed: H1B, H2B, L1, R1 and E3. I don't think we want any of these included now but I wanted to check with everyone. Barbara and Greg

2. Jurisdiction- Currently the e-filed 129s only go to CSC. We have the ability to have the 29s also go to VSC per the filing instructions if we would like to do this. What are your thoughts? Barbara and Greg

3. Denis- Stephanie Villaflor needs the data entry requirements that data entry uses in order to determine required and "good to have" data fields. Denis

4. CNMI- any issues with e-filing? I don't believe there is, but I am double checking Claudia

5. Jim- Stephanie was looking for if there were any new drop downs in CLAIMS since 2000. Could Patrick contact Stephanie and let her know? Jim

I think I misused the term applications. I know we had more denials and revokes than that. Jim F's target in past years was over 90,000 applications total.

He'll be in on Monday, but what he told me was with the approvals we already had , 69,000, plus about 16,500 pendings, taking out the denials that will happen, we would end up with the 85,000 approvals. He also reserves about 1,000 of the 85,000 for chile Singapore and that factors into his calculations.

Subject: Bullets on H1B CAP

Ali,

I asked folks to put together just a few bullets that you might find informative relative to our reaching the cap:

* USCIS reached the FY2011 H1B Cap on January 26, 2011 vs. December 21, 2009 in FY2010

* On the final day we received 916 applications. 24 were rejected, 683 were randomly selected by programmed software and processed. 209 were not selected and will be rejected back.

* Our total target for applications accepted was 85,550. This allows us to deny some of the pending applications and still issue the CAP target of 85,000 visas.

* The 20,000 visas allotted to Master's Degree holders only was reached in late December; since then, all applications from Master's Degree holders have been applied to the 65,000 visa cap.

* Planning is underway for FY2012 CAP season beginning April 1. Overtime for some agency personnel may be authorized in order to successfully service the large number of Premium Processing filings usually received during the initial days of the new filing period.

We have this down to a science now, but it wasn't always that way.

I hope this is helpful,

Don

This is very helpful, Don. Thank you very much.

It appears that we grant the great majority of petitions, right? We accept 85,550 for 85,000 slots.

Ali,

I asked folks to put together just a few bullets that you might find informative relative to our reaching the cap:

* USCIS reached the FY2011 H1B Cap on January 26, 2011 vs. December 21, 2009 in FY2010

* On the final day we received 916 applications. 24 were rejected, 683 were randomly selected by programmed software and processed. 209 were not selected and will be rejected back.

* Our total target for applications accepted was 85,550. This allows us to deny some of the pending applications and still issue the CAP target of 85,000 visas.

* The 20,000 visas allotted to Master's Degree holders only was reached in late December; since then, all applications from Master's Degree holders have been applied to the 65,000 visa cap.

* Planning is underway for FY2012 CAP season beginning April 1. Overtime for some agency personnel may be authorized in order to successfully service the large number of Premium Processing filings usually received during the initial days of the new filing period.

We have this down to a science now, but it wasn't always that way.

I hope this is helpful,

Don

Don, here are some bullets you can pick and choose from for Ali; if there are some things I'm not thinking about respond back and I'll dig up the data.

- USCIS reached the FY2011 H1B Cap on January 26, 2011 vs. December 21, 2009 in FY2010
- On the final day we received 916 applications. 24 were rejected, 683 were randomly selected by programmed software and processed. 209 were not selected and will be rejected back.
- Our total target for applications accepted was 85,550. This allows us to deny some of the pending applications and still issue the CAP target of 85,000 visas.
- The 20,000 visas allotted to Master's Degree holders only was reached in late December; since then, all applications from Master's Degree holders have been applied to the 65,000 visa cap.
- Planning is underway for FY2012 CAP season beginning April 1. Overtime for some agency personnel may be necessary in order to successfully service the large number of Premium Processing filings usually received during the initial regulatory required five business day filing period.

SCOPS,
I drafted the below response to questions I received regarding the Cap Season. To be honest, I don't know the difference between processing and cycle time and I am thinking cases should just be completed within 60 days. Please let me know if this response is okay or provide edits.
Thanks,
Claudia

VSC and CSC,
We were sent the following 2 questions regarding SCOPS' expectations during the H1B Cap Season in regards to processing of cases. In an effort to ensure consistency, I am sending SCOPS' responses to both centers. If you have any additional questions, please let us know.

1. With the earliest start date being 10/1/11, at what point in time do you expect us to be at 60 days processing and/or cycle time for cap FY12 cases? In that the benefit is not available until 10/1, I'd like to hear your thoughts on whether the expectation is to maintain the 60 day processing/cycle times at all times, as of a specific date prior to 10/1, as of 10/1, etc...
   SCOPS: As soon as possible. The focus should not be on the 10/1 start date, but rather on ensuring that all cases are adjudicated within 60 days. We understand that a center will be hit with a surge of cases at the beginning of the Cap season, however the expectation is to get back within the 60 day processing time as quickly as possible. The centers and SCOPS will be continuously monitoring processing/cycle times to ensure we meet our goals.

2. Please let us know if SCOPS is focused on the processing time, cycle time, or both when looking at I-129 processing goals?
   SCOPS: As stated above, there is an expectation that cases will be adjudicated within 60 days. Centers must also remain current with the EOS cases during this time so resources should be planned accordingly.

I hope this answers your questions. Please let us know if you have any follow up questions.

Walter/Rich,

We did finish CAP Presort for all petitions received on both Days 1 and 2 today at 4PM.

NFTS is still down. We may not get you the exact CAP numbers (box ranges from NFTS).

Attached is an estimated count for Days 1 and 2.

The estimate is a box count based on last year's average of 22.5 files per box.

Day 1 estimated total is 7,932 and Day 2 estimated total is 833 for a grand total of 8,765 for the first two days.

The following is taken from the attached report and breaks the days down by CAP category:

| Estimated Daily Receipts | (Estimate based on 600 per cage / 22.5 per box / 20 per bucket) | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | 4/1/10 | 4/2/10 | 4/3/10 | 4/5/10 | 4/6/10 | 4/7/10 | Total |
| (CRN) H1B CAP | 4,759 | 495 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 5,254 |
| (CRP) H1B CAP - Premium | 934 | 113 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 1,047 |

| Total | 7,932 | 833 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 8,765 |

Chy's team is auditing Day 1 and Day 2 boxes. They will upload and run a box range for each day if NFTS comes back up tonight.

If NFTS comes back up; Chy will send out an updated CAP count to all e-mailed above.

Have a great weekend.

This should what goes out, with the changes added. But be sure to record the rejects from Jan 26 very carefully. If we get any problems from someone about why they weren't included it'll be from that day. You both have the spreadsheet with the 283 filings that weren't initially selected. We then processed the top 26 of those. The remaining ones were lottery losers.

I suggest two changes:

1. Change all instances of "H1-B" to "H-1B."
2. Change all instances of "CIS" to "USCIS."

Other than that, I think this is sufficient. I don't see any reason why a petitioner needs to know that they were "almost selected" for the cap. They should receive the same letter as all other petitioners who didn't make it.

Is there anything more you would want in the reject letters about to be used than this language? Is there any need for the lottery losers from Wednesday to have different language in the letter?

First we need to see the reject letters. Do we have a different letter for those not selected from Wednesday's mail vs. all the days after Wednesday? There really should be a specific reject letter just for them.

I'm going to check here with Shelly Sweeney.

But in any case we were going to start Wednesday.

Subject: Cap-exempt petitioner question
Importance: High

Denis,

This is regarding the conversation that took place last week during the H1B cap teleconference in reference to cap-exempt organizations that wish to be treated as subject to the H1B cap. We are seeing cases from cap-exempt petitioners that want to be treated as subject to the cap, but the issue we are seeing is that they are filling out the I-129 form in a contradictory manner. The details are as follows-

We just received eight cases mailed back to us as "improperly rejected".

-They are from Baltimore County Public School system.

-We rejected them for jurisdiction as they indicated on the data collection supplement question 3 as "Yes" that they are a nonprofit organization related to an institution of higher education. Our guidance states that if any questions 1, 2 or 3 of this section are marked "Yes" that they are cap exempt and need to file at CSC.

-The petitioner returned them as improperly rejected stating that they purposely filed the cases at VSC as they wish them to be worked at VSC and counted under the H1B cap.

-They have not paid the ACWIA fee, which would be needed if they are going to be treated as cap cases. (This is because they are marking question 3 as "Yes" as explained above which makes it look like they are exempt from the ACWIA fee)

What it boils down to is if they want to be treated as cap subject and worked at VSC they should not be marking "Yes" to question 3 stating that they are a nonprofit cap exempt organization, and they also should be paying the ACWIA fee. Any guidance on how to handle the following scenario would be very much appreciated. If you need further information please let me know.

Thank you,

Becky

Can you confirm for me what the contractor's current instructions are for H-1B cap petitions filed at the wrong jurisdiction? Are the instructions the same for cap exempt H-1B petitions that are incorrectly mailed to VSC?

Looks like another decent month. Maybe we've bottomed out revenue-wise. Still the H1B CAP was reached later this year than last year. Will be interesting to see what you get on day one this year.

Steve let me clarify what the FOIA is asking for as I just sat through the meeting on it.

In April 2007 and April 2008 we received more H1B apps than our CAP could accept; we ran lotteries and rejected back those not selected. I think in 2007 we had to improvise at the last minute and I'm not sure how much data we retained. In 2008 we had a prepared database ready to record the rejects.

All we really need is the company name and how many rejects we mailed back to them. If queries could be done that would show "Peck Corporation – 55 rejects mailed back" that would be enough. Masters vs. Regular Cap, none of that is necessary.

So if this can be retrieved let me know.

Mark,

We have some data from late March 2007 up through 12/10 2008. In December of 2008 we transitioned to an IT database known as Lowery, which was part of a server crash April 5, 2010. The Lowery data could not be recovered at that time, in fact that server had to be scrubbed and re-imaged (IT Speak). No back ups were made of Lowery.

I believe IT has exhausted its search, but if anything is found in the next few hours we will get back to you.

Records ACDs,

Due to a possible pending law suit, we need to determine the following regarding the 2007 and 2008 I-129 H1B CAP case season:

- Do you still have a database or record of which cases were reject during the 2007 and 2008 season?
- Does the reject database or record contain the employer's name?

Please respond by 3:00 EST

H-1B QUOTA EXHAUSTION TARGET - MARCH 2011

Something new I'm starting. USCIS puts out weekly data on the use of H-1B visas for the 2011 fiscal year which starts in October. I'm going to monitor that for readers and add my own projection on the months the caps are likely to be hit. The quota is 65,000 per fiscal year plus an additional 20,000 for folks with degrees from US advanced degree programs. Applications began being accepted on April 1st. In past years, the H-1B quota was exhausted almost immediately after the application period opened up. Last year, as a result of the recession and also as a result of USCIS and Congress' war on staffing companies, H-1B usage fell sharply and the general quota was not reached until December. This year, usage is even more anemic.

As of August 13th, 29,700 H-1Bs have been used in the 65,000 quota. 1200 H-1Bs were receipted last week which is about the same as the prior two weeks. That represents a pick up in usage over prior months where about 500 to 700 H-1Bs were used each week. This could represent a pick up in economic activity in the US. It might also reflect the fact that we're getting closer to October 1st and H-1B employers don't have to hire far in advance anymore. Based on current usage, the H-1B quota will be exhausted in 29 weeks which is in March 2011.

Masters cap cases are at 12,300. The usage has been about 300 a week and this has been typical since April. Based on current usage, that quota will be used up in 25 weeks which is in February 2011.

There was a surge in regular cap petitions last week: the count went from 29,700 to 33,900.

Also, the analysis in the blog below is sound in my judgment.

Beginning this week we're doing twice weekly tabulations of the remaining visas for the 2011 H1B CAP. It's very important that the contractor keep current with the withdrawal requests coming in. These will impact the number of filings we can accept. At VSC, if they can't keep up with all requests they must at a minimum keep current with any impacting the CAP and process them within one day. Let me know if there are any problems with this.

Otherwise we remain on schedule to hit our limit on or about February 1.

Shelly/Denis,
Below are latest numbers. We are still on track for reaching cap in two to three weeks. I expect receipts to gradually increase until then.
The next set of numbers will be tabulated on Tuesday.
The target is 85,550 based on allowing 1,000 denials on 16,000 petitions currently pending and 450 Chile/Singapore petitions.

Denis: Most of the withdrawals come in late in the day and are processed the next day, so there will always be front-log on the DAAG. But when you through in the IT process previously sent to Frank there could be a couple of days off for the update to occur and lag time between system uploading and downloading.

It interesting you bring this up this year, in the past we have never tried to update withdrawals in an expedited fashion...there are only a few hundred and certainly as slots became available we should be able to fill them. I would hazard to guess that Jim Fitzsimons has this anomaly in his CAP calculations.

Steve, Rich,

Because we are nearing the CAP limit it's important that CGI prioritize processing withdrawal requests on the same day they are received, so that adjudications can immediately act on revoking prior approvals or denying pending cases. This will allow the maximum number of available visas to be used.

As of cob Tuesday there were 493 pending withdrawals of all cases at VSC and 120 at CSC. We want to see these numbers as close to 0 each day as they can get until CAP season is closed. Adjudications will be getting similar guidance on their responsibilities.

Frank: Our process does entail adjudications…see below:

I-129 withdrawals do not go to adjudication to be processed. The contractor creates a text file and sends the file to IT, then waits 30 day and then the contractor interfiles the letters.

Excerpts from SOP:

Access the O: Common drive and select the Microsoft Access file name "I-129 Auto Rev Letter Generator"

An e-mail containing the receipt number text files and ITSR will be sent to the IT Department POC. The IT POC will update the cases in CLAIMS 3 as "Revocation Notice Ordered" and "Revocation Notice Sent".

Mark,

We need to help BEST if we can to respond to the GAO data request below. Contact all four centers and ask them to have a thorough search done and respond with information they have for manual rejects done between fiscal years 2000- 2008 on the H1B petition, form I-129. If they can provide numbers for the I-129 form as a whole only, have them provide that. If they have neither, they should provide that.

CSC and VSC should have I-129 H1B CAP reject data at least since FY2007. The request below is for all H1B during the entire year, not just the CAP filings.

Thanks – Shelly is your POC for any further information.

Good morning Shelly-

I spoke with GAO and I hope this clarifies what they are looking for:

When we met last week, the officials we spoke to mentioned that there are manual logs of those petitions that are rejected during the sorting process in the mail room. Further, they said that they could compile data for us on how many petitions were manually rejected. We would be interested in getting this information for H-1B petitions for each year from fiscal year 2000 through fiscal year 2008.

Please let me know if this makes sense or if you need further clarification.

Holly,

We have a quick question regarding the data being requested in the third bullet for the January 19th meeting. Is GAO requesting data on manual rejects for each fiscal year's cap season or H-1B manual rejects during that fiscal year?

Thanks!

Shelly

Subject: RE: GAO 130916: H-1B Visa Cap - information requests

Good afternoon-

Thank you Sandra and OIT for you quick response and for all the information you have provided.

The 2 sub-bullets regarding the December 16th meeting have been addressed. The GAO is looking for further information regarding the following from December 16th:

- GAO is looking for standard operating procedures or regulations or guidance that describes the lottery process. During the meeting in December, it was mentioned that DHS has specific procedures for running a lottery in years such as April 2008 when a great deal more petitions were received beyond the number that were eligible for the cap. Further, it was stated that we would see what other guidance there might be for other years, such as those in which the cap has not been reached. The GAO is looking for documentation that would describe these types of processes in greater detail.

The below information is still needed regarding the January 19th meeting:

- Information on whether an employer is required to complete the fields on part C of the H-1B Data Collection and Filing Fee Exemption Supplement (these questions pertain to the numerical limitation exemption information)
- Regulations, standard operating procedures, or guidance used to determine who is counted against the cap
- Data for fiscal year 2000 through 2008 on the number of manual rejections of I-129 petitions for H-1B workers

Thanks everyone for your assistance and please let me know if you have any questions or concerns.

December 16, 2010 Meeting (OIT)

In regards to question 1, are you looking for OIT to provide this information? The I-129 form captures the same fields no matter which "type". However, I do not think I have the information on how the business team DE's these cases.

January 19, 2010 Meeting (OIT)

- Name of variable in CLAIMS3 mainframe data used to determine whether a petition is new, an extension, etc. The data is associated with the R2NISTAT table.

The field is FSRRCPT-APP-PART-2-2 which can be found in the RCPT.txt file.

- Name of variable in CLAIMS3 mainframe data used to determine whether an individual is eligible for the higher education cap, and the associated table values for this variable.

This would be the field where the Data would be stored on the Mainframe. However, the upload process does not capture this data. In reviewing the upload process, only data from questions 4, 5, and 6 of Part C (Numerical Limitation Exemption Information) would be uploaded question 7 is not.

This data is captured in CLAIMS 3 LAN but it NOT uploaded to the MF.

Subject: GAO 130916: H-1B Visa Cap - information requests

Good morning everyone-

Acting on behalf of Carmen Nemeth while she is out of the office this week, I am following up in regards to requests for information from GAO following both the December 16th meeting, and the teleconference which took place Tuesday, January 19, 2010.

Outstanding items from the meeting held December 16, 2010 and subsequent emails:

- Documentation regarding the lottery process for the cap (e.g. standard operating procedures)

1) What fields from the I-129 L-Classification Supplement are captured in the CLAIMS3 data that was provided to GAO.

2) Based on the updated spreadsheet you provided, it looks like CLAIMS3 does not capture all fields from part C of the I-129 H-1B Data Collection and Filing Fee Exemption Supplement. How does DHS determine whether a firm (not a beneficiary) is exempt from the numerical limitation for the cap?

During the January 19, 2010 meeting, we agreed to provide the following information to GAO:

- Name of variable in CLAIMS3 mainframe data used to determine whether a petition is new, an extension, etc. The data is associated with the R2NISTAT table.

- The field is FSRRCPT-APP-PART-2-2 which can be found in the RCPT.txt file.

- Name of variable in CLAIMS3 mainframe data used to determine whether an individual is eligible for the higher education cap, and the associated table values for this variable.
  - This would be the field where the Data would be stored on the Mainframe. However, the upload process does not capture this data. In reviewing the upload process, only data from questions 4, 5, and 6 of Part C (Numerical Limitation Exemption Information) would be uploaded question 7 is not.
  - This data is captured in CLAIMS 3 LAN but it NOT uploaded to the MF.

- Information on whether an employer is required to complete the fields on part C of the H-1B Data Collection and Filing Fee Exemption Supplement (these questions pertain to the numerical limitation exemption information)
- Regulations, standard operating procedures, or guidance used to determine who is counted against the cap
- Data for fiscal year 2000 through 2008 on the number of manual rejections of I-129 petitions for H-1B workers

This information is needed ASAP for the December 16th information which has been previously requested. And the additional requests for information from the January 19th meeting are needed by January 29, 2010. Please let me know if you have any questions or concerns regarding the above requests.

Thank you!

Rich,

Please review the attachment that you had sent to me previously.

Here is the Re-cap of the H1B cap cases that were rejected.

We are still waiting for case #1 and 2 (highlighted in yellow) from the petitioners.

The petitioner resubmitted case # 3 and 4 and they were accepted and processed at CSC.

The petitioners have filed case # 5 and 6 at CSC and are pending for an approval from HQ to accept them.

CSC had initially rejected case # 5 in error for the petitioner 'HSBC Bank'.

CSC had correctly rejected case # 6 for the petitioner 'Auma Engineered' for submitting the petition with an email notification and uncertified LCA and did not wait seven days prior to submitting the I-129 petition.

Could you please let me know if we are going to accept case # 5 and 6?

One of the cases on the attached list was filed before the numerical limitation was reached but was erroneously rejected. May we accept this case? There may possibly be 4 more but will let you know once we have more information. Thanks.

Hi Rich - Dilip has another case that did not have evidence of the 7-day email. Can you please respond to Kathy with that finding? Thanks.

I don't recall anything other than the first 2 and we only have concurrence from HQ on 2. I'm off tomorrow so one of you can correspond with Kathy and figure out what evidence she has and how we need to handle. If we made a mistake, we can inform HQ and ask if we can fit them under. If it's a few more cases of our word vs their word then HQ can also chime in.

Bret,

Sorry about that. The screw up was on my part. I made a chart of the affected cases. There are 6 cases. You reviewed 4 of them. I have asked these 4 attorneys to let me know the date and shipping information when they resubmit the case and I'll forward that to you.

The other 2 cases you have not seen. I have asked the attorneys to send me the documentation which I'll also forward to you.

Carolyn,

Bret had told me earlier to send the cases to the attention of Richard Nicholson with DO NOT OPEN IN MAILROOM. He also asked that I let him know the date and type of shipping (fed ex) when the attorney sends it in. I've already given the attorneys those instructions. I can give them your instructions but can you be on the lookout for cases addressed to Mr. Nicholson's attention in case some were already sent out?

I think it's just going to be a handful of cases that fall into this category. I've also told the attorney to include detailed explanation and documentation on what happened.

Kathy,

We have no way of knowing what they submitted initially and we rejected because we didn't see the evidence. For us to even consider, please have them provide proof that the lca was pending for 7 days when they made the initial submission. I am not sure it will matter, but would like to see that proof.

Hi Kathy,

I have assembled the documents for each case outlined below. Each one has the same issue, that is, that the initial filing was rejected since the LCA had not been signed, even though the USCIS was accepting H-1s with unsigned LCAs as long as they could prove that the LCA request was filed at least seven days prior to filing H-1s. I am also attaching documentation for each case as noted below.

The estimate is a box count based on last year's average of 22.5 files per box.

Day 1 estimated total is 7,932 and Day 2 estimated total is 833 for a grand total of 8,765 for the first two days.

The following is taken from the attached report and breaks the days down by CAP category:

Chy's team is auditing Day 1 and Day 2 boxes. They will upload and run a box range for each day if NFTS comes back up tonight.

If NFTS comes back up; Chy will send out an updated CAP count to all e-mailed above.

Okay, VSC just sent me this one which is their intended letter for this year (grammar error it's and the FY2011 mistake still needing correcting) and CSC sent me a variety of reject letters below. #4 is for the specific rejection of lottery losers from last Wednesday. Still needs updated dates. The other rejects have some additional info on what filings are not CAP subject.

To minimize any problems can we settle on two letters that both centers will use, one for the lottery losers only (Jan 26 mail) the other for everything received beginning Jan 27?

Subject: FY-'10 H1B Draft Reject letters

Please review the attached draft FY-'10 H1B Cap reject letters that we could use them to reject FY-'10 H1B cap cases. VSC and HQ had concurred with the verbiage of each reject letter during our H1B Cap meeting that was held at Washington DC last year.

I have modified the verbiage of these reject letters so that we could use them to reject FY-'10 CAP cases. Please see the below description for each reject letter.

Reject letter # 1 refers to the rejection of late filed Master Cap case.

Reject letter # 2 refers to the rejection of late filed Regular Cap case.

Reject letter #3 refers to the rejection of incorrect employment start date for H1B cap case

Reject letter #4 refers to the rejection of "not selected" Cap case.

Reject letter #5 refers to the rejection of winner cap case that was filed improperly.

Reject letter # 6 refers to the rejection of "early filed" which is the same as reject letter # 5. The only difference is that I added the "Filed too early" reject reason in the block 9 of the reject letter. After the cap filing period, we may take off that reject reason and use the reject letter # 5. VSC and CSC each could use their Service Center mailing address in these draft reject letters.

Could you please all advise if you concur with the verbiage of these reject letters and concur with using them to reject FY-'10 H1B Cap cases?

Thanks,

Looks like another decent month. Maybe we've bottomed out revenue-wise. Still the H1B CAP was reached later this year than last year. Will be interesting to see what you get on day one this year.

VSC and CSC service centers,

OCC has indicated that the $500 fraud prevention and detection fee required under INA 214(c)(12) is applicable in scenarios where an employer files a request to change a beneficiary's status from L-1 to H-1B, or vice versa. The fee is required in this scenario even though it involves the same petitioner and the beneficiary is essentially keeping the same job, but just changing classification.

Additionally, the fee provision of P.L. 111-230 is also applicable in that scenario (if the 50/50 threshold is met).

Please take appropriate steps to ensure compliance.

You may address any questions to me or Shelly Sweeney.

Another example of the I485 accepted without proof of status. This I485 is marked B in Part 2 and the applicant is currently in H1B status with an expiration date of April 2012. No immigrant petition (I140) was found on her behalf. Her I94 also indicates her status is H1b. Her husband's I 485 attained his permanent residence under Asylum. This I485 should have been rejected because no proof of eligible status was provided and also none can be found in systems.

(b)(6) [redacted]

A lot of the recent examples are Family Based I485s that are routed to NSC. The applications are acceptable but because of where the applicant filed, they ended up in the wrong office. Not all of the I485s that are accepted without proof of eligible status fall into that scenario. This is one that came across my desk today and I share it to reiterate that the problem is also those applications that are accepted when the person is not eligible to apply.

The cases that Dali has identified below were filed at the wrong PO Box for family based I-485's. Because our CRU team did not review this case it went through the system as if was employment based and jurisdiction was set according to employment based business rules (B's would go to either TSC or NSC based on state where the applicant lives.

Please see message below. As you will note, more research into this issue has been completed. Unfortunately, I am not able to locate the original message from Neil/Dali outlining the issue relating to accepting a Form I-485 without proof of eligibility. Essentially, Sheri Sheehan is willing to participate in a call to further discuss this issue in terms of the value added in accepting/rejecting/Lockbox CRU searching to determine eligibility for these types of cases.

Please let me know if you would like me to schedule a call with Sheri to further discuss.

Thank you very much for your assistance.

Neil/Reno:

It's taken me a bit of time to put this list together. I initiated the conversation about cases that Lockbox was accepting without proof. The response that was provided from Lockbox Support didn't really address the original question that was asked by Acting Chief Lauver. (Can you please indicate if the Lockbox accepts a Form I-485 that is submitted without proof of status?) The list below is accumulated from cases that are sent to me for research by the contractor's PLR Team. Most of them are Family based cases that fall under the CLB (Chicago Lockbox) jurisdiction. These are ones that have come to my attention and I don't assume that this is all of them. I included the Received (by USCIS) Date as well as the Date that NSC received them from Lockbox to show that these are recent cases. There were others not included that had dates back to June 2010 so this is not necessarily as new issue, but it is a recurring one that seems to be on the rise.

We still on occasion will see cases that the Principle applicant will be rejected and the derivatives are accepted. I have been working to get one resolved over the past week where the Principle's application was rejected for fee and instead of rejecting the remaining family members, the family members were accepted and the principle was rejected. All of the applications should have been rejected since without the principle, the others are ineligible. We have been holding the family members since Jan. 21. I called the attorney and they said they would send in the app and fee and as of two days ago, they hadn't. I called them again and they sent in the application and fee and we received it today. However, they sent an incorrect amount of $2010. We can accept the old fee, the problem is that there is not Supp A in the package, nor was there when it was first submitted. So we still cannot process these applications. All in all, this has cost the service a significant amount of time and money trying to resolve it, never mind the time that is lost by the applicant waiting for our decision. If they had rejected all of it initially, it would have given the applicant an opportunity to correct it and resubmit.

I know that the service has a real interest in providing the public good customer service and I agree that we should. However, sometimes our efforts result in more time lost for the applicant and more cost to the government and it makes me question whether it truly is customer service.

Good Afternoon, Tina:

This was forwarded for correct response to Lockbox Support.

The Lockbox accepts I-485s that are submitted without proof of a current priority date in multiple special instances. Those cases are noted by the applicant selecting box 2.h. Other under Reason for filing, then writing the reason on the line beneath the box. Those reasons include Child Status Protection Act (CSPA), Western Hemisphere Priority Date (WHPD) and Native American Born in Canada seeking a green card only.

If applicants are challenging our previous rejections, they have the legal right to submit the form noting either "Demand Adjudication" or "Insist on Filing."

In all of these instances, as we have covered in the Refund SOP, the applicants, with the exception of Native Americans, are essentially appealing our initial finding of no eligibility to file. In these cases, if the adjudicator later rejects the application as priority date not current/no visa available, the applicant is not subject to receive a refund and must pay the full filing fee in the event they seek adjustment at another time.

Please let me know if I can provide any other information for you.

Regards,
Cynthia

Yes and someone from NBC should be included because all these cases belong to them. Teresa Clum is my counterpart there.

Sheri as I see it the key problem to resolve is what is happening with the routing going to NSC?

Denis/Neil/Dali

Please see message below. As you will note, more research into this issue has been completed. Unfortunately, I am not able to locate the original message from Neil/Dali outlining the issue relating to accepting a Form I-485 without proof of eligibility. Essentially, Sheri Sheehan is willing to participate in a call to further discuss this issue in terms of the value added in accepting/rejecting/Lockbox CRU searching to determine eligibility for these types of cases.

Please let me know if you would like me to schedule a call with Sheri to further discuss.

Thank you very much for your assistance.

Neil/Reno:

It's taken me a bit of time to put this list together. I initiated the conversation about cases that Lockbox was accepting without proof. The response that was provided from Lockbox Support didn't really address the original question that was asked by Acting Chief Lauver. (Can you please indicate if the Lockbox accepts a Form I-485 that is submitted without proof of status?) The list below is accumulated from cases that are sent to me for research by the contractor's PLR Team. Most of them are Family based cases that fall under the CLB (Chicago Lockbox) jurisdiction. These are ones that have come to my attention and I don't assume that this is all of them. I included the Received (by USCIS) Date as well as the Date that NSC received them from Lockbox to show that these are recent cases. There were others not included that had dates back to June 2010 so this is not necessarily as new issue, but it is a recurring one that seems to be on the rise.

We still on occasion will see cases that the Principle applicant will be rejected and the derivatives are accepted. I have been working to get one resolved over the past week where the Principle's application was rejected for fee and instead of rejecting the remaining family members, the family members were accepted and the principle was rejected. All of the applications should have been rejected since without the principle, the others are ineligible. We have been holding the family members since Jan. 21. I called the attorney and they said they would send in the app and fee and as of two days ago, they hadn't. I called them again and they sent in the application and fee and we received it today. However, they sent an incorrect amount of $2010. We can accept the old fee, the problem is that there is not Supp A in the package, nor was there when it was first submitted. So we still cannot process these applications. All in all, this has cost the service a significant amount of time and money trying to resolve it, never mind the time that is lost by the applicant waiting for our decision. If they had rejected all of it initially, it would have given the applicant an opportunity to correct it and resubmit.

I know that the service has a real interest in providing the public good customer service and I agree that we should. However, sometimes our efforts result in more time lost for the applicant and more cost to the government and it makes me question whether it truly is customer service.

Good Afternoon, Tina:

This was forwarded for correct response to Lockbox Support.

The Lockbox accepts I-485s that are submitted without proof of a current priority date in multiple special instances. Those cases are noted by the applicant selecting box 2.h. Other under Reason for filing, then writing the reason on the line beneath the box. Those reasons include Child Status Protection Act (CSPA), Western Hemisphere Priority Date (WHPD) and Native American Born in Canada seeking a green card only.

If applicants are challenging our previous rejections, they have the legal right to submit the form noting either "Demand Adjudication" or "Insist on Filing."

In all of these instances, as we have covered in the Refund SOP, the applicants, with the exception of Native Americans, are essentially appealing our initial finding of no eligibility to file. In these cases, if the adjudicator later rejects the application as priority date not current/no visa available, the applicant is not subject to receive a refund and must pay the full filing fee in the event they seek adjustment at another time.

Please let me know if I can provide any other information for you.

Regards,
Cynthia

Denis,

This is regarding the conversation that took place last week during the H1B cap teleconference in reference to cap-exempt organizations that wish to be treated as subject to the H1B cap. We are seeing cases from cap-exempt petitioners that want to be treated as subject to the cap, but the issue we are seeing is that they are filling out the I-129 form in a contradictory manner. The details are as follows-

We just received eight cases mailed back to us as "improperly rejected".

-They are from Baltimore County Public School system.

-We rejected them for jurisdiction as they indicated on the data collection supplement question 3 as "Yes" that they are a nonprofit organization related to an institution of higher education. Our guidance states that if any questions 1, 2 or 3 of this section are marked "Yes" that they are cap exempt and need to file at CSC.

-The petitioner returned them as improperly rejected stating that they purposely filed the cases at VSC as they wish them to be worked at VSC and counted under the H1B cap.

-They have not paid the ACWIA fee, which would be needed if they are going to be treated as cap cases. (This is because they are marking question 3 as "Yes" as explained above which makes it look like they are exempt from the ACWIA fee)

What it boils down to is if they want to be treated as cap subject and worked at VSC they should not be marking "Yes" to question 3 stating that they are a nonprofit cap exempt organization, and they also should be paying the ACWIA fee. Any guidance on how to handle the following scenario would be very much appreciated. If you need further information please let me know.

With a very precise answer:

Our guidance is clear. If they mark "Yes" in question 3 for a, b, c, or d on the supplement, the petition should be filed at the CSC. A petitioner cannot choose which center will adjudicate their case. If they wanted to be cap subject, they should fill out the petition properly with the proper fees.

Let me know if you have any other questions.

Claudia

Thank you so much for the quick response.

I just have one more question- we have also seen cases where Part B (ACWIA fee exemption determination), questions 1, 2 or 3 of the supplement are marked as "Yes", but yet Part C of the same supplement is marked as H-1B cap subject with no exemptions claimed. Because they marked Part B that they are a nonprofit or institute of higher education and therefore did not pay the ACWIA fee, would we follow the same guidance below? (These cases have also indicated that they wish to be cap subject and worked at the VSC.)

VSC and CSC service centers,

OCC has indicated that the $500 fraud prevention and detection fee required under INA 214(c)(12) is applicable in scenarios where an employer files a request to change a beneficiary's status from L-1 to H-1B, or vice versa. The fee is required in this scenario even though it involves the same petitioner and the beneficiary is essentially keeping the same job, but just changing classification.

Additionally, the fee provision of P.L. 111-230 is also applicable in that scenario (if the 50/50 threshold is met).

Please take appropriate steps to ensure compliance.

Thanks Tom, and for my part here's the March fee register report for Vermont. Don't have the other yet.

Initial reports on H1B filing season are that it was very light, lower even than last year when we took in 19,000 petitions between April 1-7. This year it looks like fewer than 10,000 came in yesterday. This should mean the incumbent will have most of this year's filings data entry complete by cob April 15, perhaps all of them.

Just wanted to point out a small error in your numbers on the chart below. I think the total for 4/7 should be 338, which would make the grand total 10,240. The rest seem to add up.

Data entry started this morning on the Premiums (1,598 at CSC & 2,143 at VSC). I should have a data entry count included starting tomorrow.

Dennis and I met with efiling last week and we had a few get backs that I am late on:

1. Currently the following classification cannot be e-filed: H1B, H2B, L1, R1 and E3. I don't think we want any of these included now but I wanted to check with everyone. Barbara and Greg

2. Jurisdiction- Currently the e-filed 129s only go to CSC. We have the ability to have the 29s also go to VSC per the filing instructions if we would like to do this. What are your thoughts? Barbara and Greg

3. Denis- Stephanie Villaflor needs the data entry requirements that data entry uses in order to determine required and "good to have" data fields. Denis

4. CNMI- any issues with e-filing? I don't believe there is, but I am double checking Claudia

5. Jim- Stephanie was looking for if there were any new drop downs in CLAIMS since 2000. Could Patrick contact Stephanie and let her know? Jim

Thanks,
Claudia

Interesting to see how the masters to bachelors ratio is higher this year than ever and that trend probably continues into the future. In 10 years we will have two categories, the masters cap and the PhD Exemption.

All,

We just received a high level inquiry into our collection of the Public Law 111-230 fees for H1Bs and Ls ($2000 for H1Bs; $2250 for Ls). This is an urgent request, so please respond ASAP.

The CFO is going to provide the dollar amount that has been collected so far. Are VSC and CSC able to give us the number of petitioners that have paid the fee? I'm not sure if the centers tracked the fee by petitioner name, by receipt number, or neither. If by receipt number, is it possible to bounce the receipt numbers against CLAIMS to get a list of the petitioners who paid it (and thereby the number of petitioners who paid it)? Is there another way to get this info?

Thanks!

Bobbie

Subject: URGENT: PL 111-230 Fees
Importance: High

All,

We just received a high level inquiry into our collection of the Public Law 111-230 fees for H1Bs and Ls ($2000 for H1Bs; $2250 for Ls). This is an urgent request, so please respond ASAP.

The CFO is going to provide the dollar amount that has been collected so far. Are VSC and CSC able to give us the number of petitioners that have paid the fee? I'm not sure if the centers tracked the fee by petitioner name, by receipt number, or neither. If by receipt number, is it possible to bounce the receipt numbers against CLAIMS to get a list of the petitioners who paid it (and thereby the number of petitioners who paid it)? Is there another way to get this info?

Thanks!

Bobbie

By all means, please do. I think it's more than fair to share it and invite any comments or concerns they may have. You may want to clarify that this is a proposed rule, and we're not expecting it to become effective in the immediate future. One estimate we got, and I believe it was from Julia Wilcox, was that it could be published in May, which means we would need to have the Lockbox business logic for this new category of I-765s pinned down, at least that portion of the business logic that concerns where the Lockbox routes applications for adjudication, in time for release 7. So far, we are in agreement that it should be VSC and CSC because the I-765 is relates both to the underlying nonimmigrant status and to the principal's I-140, both of which are handled at those two centers. Please let me know if that's sufficient information to get you started in your discussions with Dan and Rosemary, if you need more background, or if you have any questions. Also copying Denis, as he and I have been in ongoing discussions about this.

Bryan,

Every Friday, I have a weekly call with Dan and Rosemary to discuss issues and bring them up to speed on HQ things, if appropriate. Since David references a possible call with the centers to discuss this rule, I felt it was ok to give Dan and Rosemary a heads up about the rule. They hadn't heard of it and have asked if they can see it. It's likely (though not confirmed yet) that CSC and VSC will take this workload, so it seems fair to share the draft with them. However, if you feel otherwise, let me know. I'm not sure where the draft is in its life cycle.

Can we share the draft with them?

Thanks!

Subject: H4 Rule

According to the H-4 Rule, H-4 Spouses of an H1B nonimmigrant eligible under 104(c) or 106(a) of AC21 will be able to file for employment authorization. According to Julia Wilcox, the Rule could be released as early as May 2012. In order to implement, SCOPS will need to submit the lockbox requirements this week in order to be ready for May 2012. Most importantly to give instructions to lockbox regarding the routing logic.

As these I-765s will likely be filed along with the beneficiary's I-539 and the principal's I-129 extension under AC21, the most likely centers would be VSC and CSC. Can you review to confirm these centers should adjudicate the I-765s from H4s? According to the Rule, the estimated filing volume is between 7,000 to 17,000 annually. Please let me know if more information is needed in order to confirm the jurisdiction of these I-765s. I can schedule a conference with the centers if needed.

These individuals will be eligible if they submit documentation establishing that his or her current H-4 extension of stay was approved pursuant to the principal's extension of stay. This may include the following:

- Copies of the principal H-1B's approval notice(s) (Form I-797 or successor form) establishing that the current extension of stay was based on section 104(c) or 106(a) of AC21;
- Proof of the principal H-1B nonimmigrant's pending and/or approved Labor Certification Application, Immigrant Petition for Alien Worker (I-140), or Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (I-485);
- Copy of the H-4 dependent spouse's current approval notice granting an extension of stay pursuant to the H-1B nonimmigrant's extension of stay granted based on section 104(c) or 106(a) of AC21; and/or
- Secondary evidence, if the approval notices are lost, including an attestation by the H-1B nonimmigrant regarding his or her extension, petition receipt numbers, or copies of any relevant receipt notices. With this information, USCIS may be able to check its own database to verify whether the H-1B nonimmigrant received an extension based on section 104(c) or 106(a) of AC21.

Rosemary and Dan,

Per Bobbie's request, I'm sending you a quick summary of our recent efforts regarding employment authorization for H-4 spouses. Please note that the rulemaking currently under review at the DHS level is a proposed rule, and we're not expecting it to become effective in the immediate future. One estimate we got, and I believe it was from Julia Wilcox, was that it could be published next May, which means we would need to have the Lockbox business logic for this new category of I-765s pinned down, at least that portion of the business logic that concerns where the Lockbox routes applications for adjudication, in time for release 7 in May 2012. That information was due to them this week. So far, we are in agreement that it should be VSC and CSC because the I-765 is relates both to the underlying nonimmigrant status and to the principal's I-140, both of which are handled at those two centers. Once this goes into effect, we anticipate an increase in I-765s filings of between 7,000 and 17,000 per year. Please let me know if you have any questions or need additional information. Please also let me know if you have any concerns with CSC and VSC being the two locations for adjudication. Thanks.

All,
After a relatively slow start, the volume of H-1B regular and masters-exempt cap petitions combined for FY 2012 has caught up with last year's volume as of late September. Particularly noticeable has been the increase in volume of regular cap petitions during the last several weeks. The volume was 2,200 last week. If this trend continues, then the FY 2012 cap season will end in mid-January, two weeks earlier than FY 2011 cap season.

Denis,

OP&S is proposinga change to our H-1B cap exemption guidance. BEST (with the assistance of SQAT) has determined that we will need to have C3 modified in order to accurately count the cap if/after the change becomes effective. This C3 modification would result in the addition of new fields in C3 for which the contractor would need to enter either "y" or "n" (see the new fields in red on the attached document). These questions are already on the Form I-129 and the contractor already enters the fields that are in black print on the attachment. I wanted to check with you to see whether a change of this nature would necessitate any contract modifications. Would it? If so, can we estimate approximately how much this might cost?

I do not know whetherthis proposed change can be shared with the centers or if it is close hold. I have been treating as close hold until I am told otherwise.

Thanks!

Shelly

Corinna,

I spoke with Jim F and Patrick this morning regarding drafting the ITSR for the cap exemption memo. Patrick indicated that what SQAT needs is a draft of what fields need to be added to the I-129W screen in Claims. SQAT will then include that in the ITSR when it is submitted to OIT. We also discussed that we would need to hold a call with OIT to discuss these fields once OIT begins scoping the build that this modification would be included in. The meeting would not be right away as they would not necessarily be ready to build immediately. I'm sure I'm not using the correct technical terms for this, so I'm trusting that Patrick and/or Robert will jump in and correct me if I have stated anything incorrectly.

I have made my proposed additions in red on the attached based on my meeting with Jim and Patrick. Although this memo is only separating the fee exemption/cap exemption definition for "affiliated or related nonprofit entity", we thought that it might be a good idea to include the "institution of higher education" and "nonprofit government research entities" as well in case the agency wishes to change their definitions for cap exemption purposes somewhere down the line, as well. That said, I ultimately defer to you, SQAT and SCRM (Denis Peck) as to whether we want/need to include those changes. If we add those two fields as well, the contractor will need to data enter the "y" or "n". While it is a simple matter and only two letters, I'm not sure how/whether this would affect the contract. The fourth addition deals with our third-party employers and most definitely needs to be added to the modification.

Let me know if you have any changes/modifications.

Thanks!

| Date: | Tuesday, November 22, 2011 11:10:00 AM |

It's about that time of year again;

We are approaching our CAP limit for FY2012. Beginning tomorrow please instruct the contractors to sort and categorize the CAP filings and send us your counts when the final mail for the day is received, but do not data enter any until we can confirm those processed through today do not bring us to our limit.

In addition to this, please send me the number of CAP petitions you have at cob today unprocessed, whether under CRU review or otherwise. These can be processed on Wednesday (or later).

Also you should have your bar-coding preparations ready in advance should we require that to be done on Friday, Monday or thereafter. Should we implement a random lottery for the final day of petitions, each center should barcode that day's mail and send the results to us in an Excel Spreadsheet. The RNG will be done here at HQ and the "winners" will be sent back to each center for processing.

Please let me know who will be available on Wednesday, Friday and Monday for follow up emails.

Thanks in advance – looking forward to a smooth wrap up.

1,157 cases receipted yesterday at Vermont, a heavy day. However I believe some of the undone cases (1475 + 571) shown at the end of the day will also be found to be CAP eligible once data entry begins. They only do a rough initial sort in the mailroom.

Subject: H-1B CAP is near limit. Wednesday Nov 23 mail will be held pending a count.

It's about that time of year again;

We are approaching our CAP limit for FY2012. Beginning tomorrow please instruct the contractors to sort and categorize the CAP filings and send us your counts when the final mail for the day is received, but do not data enter any until we can confirm those processed through today do not bring us to our limit.

In addition to this, please send me the number of CAP petitions you have at cob today unprocessed, whether under CRU review or otherwise. These can be processed on Wednesday (or later).

Also you should have your bar-coding preparations ready in advance should we require that to be done on Friday, Monday or thereafter. Should we implement a random lottery for the final day of petitions, each center should barcode that day's mail and send the results to us in an Excel Spreadsheet. The RNG will be done here at HQ and the "winners" will be sent back to each center for processing.

Please let me know who will be available on Wednesday, Friday and Monday for follow up emails.

Thanks in advance – looking forward to a smooth wrap up.

I think it's possible. We should get this report again same time tomorrow, and before the end of tomorrow's second shift the contractors should send me the 'racked & stacked' count that comes in Wednesday.

Friday we should have pretty good numbers to review before sending out guidance.

Subject: 1,795 CAP cases receipted on Monday

1,157 cases receipted yesterday at Vermont, a heavy day. However I believe some of the undone cases (1475 + 571) shown at the end of the day will also be found to be CAP eligible once data entry begins. They only do a rough initial sort in the mailroom.

It's about that time of year again;

We are approaching our CAP limit for FY2012. Beginning tomorrow please instruct the contractors to sort and categorize the CAP filings and send us your counts when the final mail for the day is received, but do not data enter any until we can confirm those processed through today do not bring us to our limit.

In addition to this, please send me the number of CAP petitions you have at cob today unprocessed, whether under CRU review or otherwise. These can be processed on Wednesday (or later).

Also you should have your bar-coding preparations ready in advance should we require that to be done on Friday, Monday or thereafter. Should we implement a random lottery for the final day of petitions, each center should barcode that day's mail and send the results to us in an Excel Spreadsheet. The RNG will be done here at HQ and the "winners" will be sent back to each center for processing.

Please let me know who will be available on Wednesday, Friday and Monday for follow up emails.

Thanks in advance – looking forward to a smooth wrap up.

Just the total of the entire lot is all we need, the rest is irrelevant for CAP counting purposes.

Have the contractors prioritize data entering all undone I-129s that came in prior to today so we have the most complete picture we can have on Friday. We believe we will reach the CAP with either today's incoming, or Friday's.

Denis

In the passed we have reported CAP numbers in 4 categories. Since we have already hit the Master's CAP, is this necessary or will one number that includes the whole lump sum suffice?

The previous break down was as follows:

CAP Regular Non-premium
CAP Regular Premium
CAP Masters Non-premium
CAP Masters Premium

Thank you. (b)(6)

Well you are in luck because we reached the CAP limit today and have informed the centers, and Corinna's branch is in the process of posting the announcement to the website hopefully by 5 pm. The contractor is also aware. So there is nothing much left for our branch to do Friday concerning the CAP.

Hi

Had a fine day and am enjoying today too. I think our next step is to ask shelly sweeney who works for corinna if she has a specific reject letter she wants the centers to use or if she is okay with them generating their own. Either way we probably don't begin mailing the rejects until monday, but see what she wants to do.

Good morning Shelly,

I hope you had a nice Thanksgiving Day.

We reached the H-1B cap limit on Tuesday. There will be no lottery and cap petitions received on Wednesday and thereafter will be returned to petitioners. Do you have a specific reject letter for the service centers or would you prefer that the centers generate their own? Please advise.

Thank you.

Good morning Shelly,

I hope you had a nice Thanksgiving Day.

We reached the H-1B cap limit on Tuesday. There will be no lottery and cap petitions received on Wednesday and thereafter will be returned to petitioners. Do you have a specific reject letter for the service centers or would you prefer that the centers generate their own? Please advise.

Thank you.

I've already informed Christine, Heidi and Larry, but will let the others know.

Shelly is not in the office; however, I requested reject letters from VSC and CSC hoping to give Shelly an opportunity to review them. Mind you, perhaps she already has them, but I'm not certain. I will let Christine, Heidi and Larry know not to mail reject letters until Monday.

Guillermo,

Many thanks for checking with me on this. I have made some minor changes to the VSC's document to update it for the FY12 cap. I couldn't enable track changes, but I made edits to the second, third and fourth paragraphs. I did not make changes to the CSC's as it is a pdf document, but the same changes would need to be made on it, as well.

This appears to be the same reject letter that was used last year. The only difference that I can see between the VSC's version and the CSC's version is the language at the bottom of the VSC's letter which indicates that petitioners may resubmit the case if they feel it was improperly rejected. Is that perhaps a standard for VSC's rejections versus CSC's rejections? I just don't want to make any changes to either center's rejection process that might accidentally cause a precedent of some sort.

Thanks!

I don't believe that minor template formatting differences are a problem. However, the language in the body of both rejection notices must be the same per Don and Barbara.

Juliet

This is the copy Larry Hallam sent on Friday.We want to use the language as prepared by Shelly but the upper template area, I'm not sure needs to be identical.

Shelly – the template for the Vermont example contains systems formatting such as a reject notice processed by Claims would have. However these are manual reject letters sent without being data entered in Claims. The CSC example is just one their letterhead. So long as the language in the body of the notice is exactly as you have it does the template matter? These would have no A# or Receipt number to fill in and the beneficiary would be unnecessary, wouldn't it?

All,
In case you have not heard, the H-1B cap season closed on November 22. A surge occurred early last week. Almost 3,000 petitions were received on Monday and another 2,000 on Tuesday.

Below is a table showing the latest cap counts. In the table below, the approval rates shown are based on April filings since nearly all of them have been adjudicated. As the far right column shows, if the approval rate on 34,400 petitions pending adjudication matches the approval rate on petitions filed in April, then the number of approvals for FY 2012 will be 65,100 for regular cap.
Jim

| | Approvals | Pending | Approval rate[1] | Future Approvals[2] | Cap Count[3] | Adjusted Cap Count[4] |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Regular | 35,800 | 29,600 | 92% | 27,100 | 62,900 | 65,100 |
| Masters | 17,600 | 4,800 | 97% | 4,600 | 22,200 | 20,000 |
| Combined | 53,400 | 34,400 | 92% | 31,700 | 85,100 | 85,100 |

Data available as of close of business, November 25
Counts may not add due to rounding

1 Percentage of petitions filed in April that have been approved

2 Pending multiplied by approval rate

3 Approvals plus estimated future approvals

4 Adjusted for 22,200 masters rolling over into regular cap

Don

Let me address this, I know what happened. USPS Express mail provides the online delivered date when it arrives at the post office of destination. This is what the AILA contact is referring to.

I'm afraid November 22 came upon us and we hit the CAP without expecting it that day. I would have directed the contractors to make an end of the day mail pickup at both centers to take possession of exactly these type of cases. This is what we have done the past 2-3 years. That's why it hasn't been an issue since 2008. Whether or not they processed all the fees that day would have been a minor problem and we've waived that standard in the past in this situation.

As you recall it was really about mid day Nov. 23 before we realized what had happened.

This is an FYI. VSC picks up mail each morning. Mail held during the day by the USPS is picked up and counted as "received" on the following day when that mail is picked up. For some reason, this is causing some major concern this cap season. This is not a new practice for VSC (or CSC, as I understand). We have been transparent on this in the past. Last year we contemplated changing this to require the contractor to perform a second pick-up in the late afternoon, but that idea fizzled when we realized the contract was written in such a way that all mail; must be processed (deposited) on the day it was received. It would be unlikely that a contractor could meet this mark on heavy mail days with a 4:00 pick-up. I'm not sure if the current contract would provide more flexibility such as a 24-hour deposit requirement.

I don't know if it is a full moon, or what, but I have never received any inquiries on this issue before that I can remember, and this year I have people screaming and yelling about this. I have been telling them that this has been the policy for a while and point them to the liaison minutes from 2008 covering this issue. Is it possible that there is a difference in how the USPS office in VT is issuing their delivery confirmation? Maybe in the past they gave the date of delivery as the date it was actually picked up by VSC, and now they give the date of delivery as the date it is received in their office. Well anyway, I do think an instruction on the USCIS web-site would be really helpful. Then us liaison types could point directly to the USCIS web-site, and not just liaison minutes from 2008. In fact, in the future, I would love to be able to ask this question at a Stakeholder Engagement, and then get a written answer I could point out so members to say they were further forewarned.

Oh well, such is life.

Take care,

Dan,

I am sorry to bother you on this issue again, but I am getting more calls on this on other cases, and getting really strong push-back. I took a look at the regs, and they state as follows:

8 CFR 103.2(a)(7)

(7) Receipt date.

(i) General. An application or petition received in a USCIS office shall be stamped to show the time and date of actual receipt and, unless otherwise specified in part 204 or part 245 or part 245a of this chapter, shall be regard as properly filed when so stamped, if it is signed and executed and the required filing fee is attached or a waiver of the filing fee is granted. ...

The attorneys are contending that the confirmation of filing is evidence that it was 'signed and executed'

Any thoughts?

This is another issue that comes up each year.

USCIS picks up our mail from the USPS every day. Mail received at the post office after our pick up gets updated as "delivered" by USPS. But USPS doesn't actually deliver it, they hold our mail. We wouldn't pick it up until the next business day. Since we already picked up for the day, anything that comes in after gets counted as being received on November 23, 2012.

We would consider these cases received on November 23, 2012.

Just fyi, I am being told that there is a lot of chatter on the AILA message boards about petitions that were delivered on the 22nd, but not stamped into VSC until the 23rd. That being said, this is the only inquiry I have seen, so I don't know if it is a persistent problem, or just a one off.

Also, I see your name in on the proof of delivery. I am picturing you in the mail-room, hauling in boxes of H-1B petitions and other filings.

That contract requirement in response to meet FMD's requirement that we deposit fees the same day they are received....which is in response to the Department of the Treasury's requirement for all federal agencies. Believe me I have familiarity with the overalll problem and if there was an easy solution to it that fit everything I would implement it tomorrow.

If we backdate all mail by one day then we automatically are depositing the fees a day late.

It is not a problem to waive the penalty for failing to complete same day receipting in special circumstances (H1B).

VSC is absolutely in favor of such a change. About two years ago, we wanted to move to a twice daily pick-up from USPS, but the manner in which the contract was written at the time mandated that the mail be data entered and deposited on the same day it was received. If that language has changed – to, say, within 24 hours of it being received – we could move to a twice daily pick-up and eliminate back dating, etc.

Just to follow up, we've asked Denis Peck to work with you all to change this going forward at all the centers. We cannot penalize folks by giving them a received date that is later than when the mail was actually delivered to our PO Box simply because we didn't pick it up. The solution may be to back date any mail delivered between pickups if we cannot distinguish the actual delivery date. Of course the reverse would be true for any receipts where the later date is more advantageous, such as the opening of a filing window. I understand this is bigger than just VSC, so Denis will be working with all 4 of you to develop new guidelines.

I am just apprehensive about changing policy on how we date mail. I would like to refer the problem to the Mail Management Division for an agency wide determination on how to properly deal with this issue. I can have Karen submit it to the agenda for discussion during the monthly MMD teleconference in January.

I agree there is an underlying problem here we've had ever since the USPS started providing online delivery notice service for Express Mail and Priority Mail. About 5-6 years ago.

(i) General. An application or petition received in a USCIS office shall be stamped to show the time and date of actual receipt and, unless otherwise specified in part 204 or part 245 or part 245a of this chapter, shall be regard as properly filed when so stamped, if it is signed and executed and the required filing fee is attached or a waiver of the filing fee is granted. ...

The attorneys are contending that the confirmation of filing is evidence that it was 'signed and executed'

Any thoughts?

This is another issue that comes up each year.

USCIS picks up our mail from the USPS every day. Mail received at the post office after our pick up gets updated as "delivered" by USPS. But USPS doesn't actually deliver it, they hold our mail. We wouldn't pick it up until the next business day. Since we already picked up for the day, anything that comes in after gets counted as being received on November 23, 2012.

We would consider these cases received on November 23, 2012.

Just fyi, I am being told that there is a lot of chatter on the AILA message boards about petitions that were delivered on the 22nd, but not stamped into VSC until the 23rd. That being said, this is the only inquiry I have seen, so I don't know if it is a persistent problem, or just a one off.

Also, I see your name in on the proof of delivery. I am picturing you in the mail-room, hauling in boxes of H-1B petitions and other filings.

Hey there Dan,

I don't know if there is anything that can be done, but here is an H-1B petition delivered to VSC on 11/22 but rejected as untimely. Is there any hope?

Final Request for Evidence (RFE) Templates

Leadership Guidance

May 20, 2011
#68-11

Final Request for Evidence (RFE) Templates

The following are final Request for Evidence (RFE) templates that will be posted online from May 23- June 6, 2011 at www.uscis.gov:

- I-129 P-1A Athletes and Teams
- I-129 P-1B Entertainment Groups and Performers
- I-129 P-2 Reciprocal Exchange Artists or Entertainers
- I-129 P-3 Culturally Unique Artists and Entertainers
- I-129 P Essential Support Workers

These RFE templates have been updated to incorporate stakeholder feedback that we received when the templates were posted in the "Feedback Opportunities" section of our website. We will post the updated templates online for 10 business days for stakeholder visibility. USCIS Service Centers will begin using these templates immediately.

Background:

On April 12, 2010, Director Mayorkas introduced the Request for Evidence Project, an effort that engages stakeholders in the review and revision of RFE templates used at USCIS Service Centers, to ensure each RFE is:

- Consistent across each of the Service Centers;
- Related to the classification being adjudicated;
- Tailored to the individual case; and
- Concise and clear.

We are carrying out the RFE Project in phases. The first phase, involves the review of RFEs for the O, P and Q nonimmigrant classifications and the E11 immigrant classification. Director Mayorkas kicked off the first phase hosting a national stakeholder engagement at the California Service Center.

Each RFE template is available for stakeholder review and comment for 10 business days after posting. Individuals may send their feedback to scopsrfe@dhs.gov. USCIS will continue to use existing RFEs until the public comment period ends and these comments have been considered in the development of the final version of the RFE template. We will then post the final template online for 10 business days for stakeholder visibility.

The USCIS Leadership Guidance is a product of the USCIS Office of Communications. To submit questions or cleared items, or to access previous Leadership Guidance, email USCIS Internal Communications.

Subject: H4 Rule

According to the H-4 Rule, H-4 Spouses of an H1B nonimmigrant eligible under 104(c) or 106(a) of AC21 will be able to file for employment authorization. According to Julia Wilcox, the Rule could be released as early as May 2012. In order to implement, SCOPS will need to submit the lockbox requirements this week in order to be ready for May 2012. Most importantly to give instructions to lockbox regarding the routing logic.

As these I-765s will likely be filed along with the beneficiary's I-539 and the principal's I-129 extension under AC21, the most likely centers would be VSC and CSC. Can you review to confirm these centers should adjudicate the I-765s from H4s? According to the Rule, the estimated filing volume is between 7,000 to 17,000 annually. Please let me know if more information is needed in order to confirm the jurisdiction of these I-765s. I can schedule a conference with the centers if needed.

These individuals will be eligible if they submit documentation establishing that his or her current H-4 extension of stay was approved pursuant to the principal's extension of stay. This may include the following:

- Copies of the principal H-1B's approval notice(s) (Form I-797 or successor form) establishing that the current extension of stay was based on section 104(c) or 106(a) of AC21;
- Proof of the principal H-1B nonimmigrant's pending and/or approved Labor Certification Application, Immigrant Petition for Alien Worker (I-140), or Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (I-485);
- Copy of the H-4 dependent spouse's current approval notice granting an extension of stay pursuant to the H-1B nonimmigrant's extension of stay granted based on section 104(c) or 106(a) of AC21; and/or

- Secondary evidence, if the approval notices are lost, including an attestation by the H-1B nonimmigrant regarding his or her extension, petition receipt numbers, or copies of any relevant receipt notices. With this information, USCIS may be able to check its own database to verify whether the H-1B nonimmigrant received an extension based on section 104(c) or 106(a) of AC21.

Dear Barbara and Mariela -

We received a report from a member regarding a problem with an H-1B I-797 approval notice from the CSC that we'd like to bring to your attention in the event it is related to the CLAIMS III changes. Attached are copies of (1) the courtesy copy I-797C received by the attorney of record, and (2) what should be the original approval notice, received by the petitioner, but appears to be a duplicate courtesy copy, or a hybrid courtesy/original. As you can see, the petitioner's notice states that the H-1B petition and extension of stay have been approved, and includes the language that the petitioner should keep the upper portion of the notice and give the lower portion to the employee, however, there is no lower tear-off portion on the notice. Both notices are "I-797C" notices which I believe is designated for courtesy copies.

Thank you for looking into this and please let us know if you have any questions or would like additional information from the attorney.

Best Regards,

Betsy

Guillermo,

Many thanks for checking with me on this. I have made some minor changes to the VSC's document to update it for the FY12 cap. I couldn't enable track changes, but I made edits to the second, third and fourth paragraphs. I did not make changes to the CSC's as it is a pdf document, but the same changes would need to be made on it, as well.

This appears to be the same reject letter that was used last year. The only difference that I can see between the VSC's version and the CSC's version is the language at the bottom of the VSC's letter which indicates that petitioners may resubmit the case if they feel it was improperly rejected. Is that perhaps a standard for VSC's rejections versus CSC's rejections? I just don't want to make any changes to either center's rejection process that might accidentally cause a precedent of some sort.

Thanks!

Shelly

Juliet

This is the copy Larry Hallam sent on Friday.We want to use the language as prepared by Shelly but the upper template area, I'm not sure needs to be identical.

Shelly – the template for the Vermont example contains systems formatting such as a reject notice processed by Claims would have. However these are manual reject letters sent without being data entered in Claims. The CSC example is just one their letterhead. So long as the language in the body of the notice is exactly as you have it does the template matter? These would have no A# or Receipt number to fill in and the beneficiary would be unnecessary, wouldn't it?

Chapter 1: Background

The H-1B visa classification allows a United States employer to petition for a temporary worker in a specialty occupation. U.S. employers may petition to hire H-1B employees to work in occupations that require both (1) the theoretical and practical application of highly specialized knowledge and (2) a bachelor's or higher degree in the specific specialty (or its equivalent) as a minimum for entry into the occupation in the United States. Such occupations may include scientists, engineers, college professors or other specialty occupations if specific requirements are met by both the U.S. employer (petitioner) and the H-1B nonimmigrant employee (beneficiary).

A. Purpose

The H-1B program allows United States employers to hire highly-skilled foreign workers on a temporary basis. It helps U.S. employers obtain the qualified employees they need both to meet their growth needs and to remain competitive in international markets. The H-1B program supplements the US workforce available to US employers and allows them to ensure that they obtain the employees with the skills they need regardless of where they may reside.

B. History

The following is an overview of the development of historical evolution of the H-1B visa. The requirements of the visa have evolved over time. While this history provides a useful backdrop in understanding the current H-1B program, the requirements of past versions of the statute should not be assumed to apply today.

1. Immigration Law Prior to 1952

Prior to 1952, immigration to the United States was based almost entirely on country of origin. The Immigration Act of 1924 (The Johnson-Reed Act) based immigration to the United States on quotas based on one's national origin. The 1924 Act allowed no more than two percent of the total number of immigrants from any given country present in the United States in 1890 to enter. Immigrants from Asia were not allowed to enter the United States at all. This highly restrictive system had its origins in even earlier legislation such as the Chinese Exclusion Act, as well as a 1917 Act barring immigration from what was referred to as the "Asiatic Barred Zone." Prior to 1952, the primary purpose of immigration law was to ensure cultural and racial uniformity in the United States. Economic concerns and the needs of US employers were only marginally considered if at all.

2. The Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952[1]

[1] Pub. L. No. 82-414, 66 Stat. 163.

The Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952 was considered and passed in an environment in which the Cold War was the primary concern of Congress. Preventing the spread of Communism and the admission of Communists was a main concern during the debate and in the written legislation, and this lead to the continuation of the national origins system first created in the 1924 Act. Economic and labor concerns were addressed, but there was no clear consensus in Congress and in the country on how these should be addressed. For example, the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the two leading labor groups of the time, took opposing positions on the legislation.

The addressing of economic and labor concerns led to the creation of a preference category for individuals with special skills, which was the basis of the current employment-based immigrant categories. The 1952 Act also created an employment category for nonimmigrants. It created section 101(a)(15)(H) of the Act, which contained the precursor to today's H-1B. The 1952 version of the Act exempted from the term "immigrant":

> "An alien having a residence in a foreign country which he has no intention of abandoning (i) who is of distinguished merit and ability and who is coming temporarily to the United States to perform temporary services of an exceptional nature requiring such merit and ability".

Worth noting is the lack of dual intent for the H nonimmigrant, as well as the fact that both the nonimmigrant's stay and the services themselves were required to be temporary. In other words, the H nonimmigrant could not be coming to fill a permanent need even if he possessed the requisite nonimmigrant intent. This provision, sometimes referred to as "the second temporary," was later eliminated, but still exists in the statute for H-2 nonimmigrants.

The term "distinguished merit and ability" was never defined by statute, but was instead defined in an administrative decision of the former Immigration and Naturalization Service. "Distinguished merit and ability" meant "a degree of skill and recognition substantially above that ordinarily encountered, to the extent that a person so described is preeminent in his field of endeavor."[2]

3. The 1965 Amendments to the INA

The Hart-Cellar Act of 1965[3] eliminated the national origins quota system and established the dual preference system of family-based and employment-based immigration that continues to exist today. The 1965 amendments were passed during the civil rights era and were largely seen as a continuation of the principles driving that movement. For the first time, concerns regarding the ethnic and cultural makeup of the United States were not driving immigration law. Instead, the dual priorities of family unification and employer needs became the primary concerns.

4. 1970 Amendments

In 1970, Congress eliminated the requirement that an alien of distinguished merit and ability must be coming to a temporary position. After this change, an H nonimmigrant in the distinguished merit category could be coming to fill a permanent need. However, both the petitioner and the beneficiary were required to intend that the employment itself be temporary. Congress also adopted the definition of "distinguished merit and ability" used in Matter of Shaw, but replaced the requirement of "preeminence" with one of "prominence." Congress also allowed "a high level of education" to substitute for the prominence requirement.

Later administrative decisions of the INS refined the definition of the H-1 as it began to resemble the current H-1B. In 1972, a decision opened up the H-1 category to "members of the professions."[4] The "distinguished merit and ability" requirement could be met simply by performing "professional" services. [5]

5. 1974-1989

Before 1989, the H-1 category included all "persons of distinguished merit and ability" which was generously interpreted to include all persons engaged in occupations which required a bachelor's degree or equivalent. Also included were registered nurses, athletes, artists and entertainers. There was no maximum time limit on the total period of stay or number of extensions which could be approved for an H-1, although in practice an H-1 requesting an extension beyond five years was generally denied as an "intending immigrant." There was no limit on the number of H-1 aliens who could be admitted to the United States on an annual basis, nor was there any labor market test required. Among the professions, only medical doctors, other than those entering to perform teaching or research, were precluded from the H-1 classification.

In 1989, the H-1 category was broken into components to allow for the creation of the former H-1A category for nurses. This resulted in the current H-1B designation. [6]

6. The Immigration Act of 1990

The Immigration Act of 1990[7] (IMMACT 90) created the H-1B visa as it exists today. The "distinguished merit and ability" standard was eliminated and replaced with the current requirement that the position be a "specialty occupation." IMMACT 90 imposed the labor condition attestation requirement, and also created the H-1B cap. IMMACT 90 eliminated the requirement that a foreign residence be maintained, thus establishing dual intent for H-1Bs.

IMMACT 90 separated athletes and entertainers, as well as prominent persons in business, science and education from the former H-1 category and placed them in the new O and P categories.

IMMACT 90 also imposed a maximum time limit of six years on the period of H-1B stay.

7. Later Amendments

In 1991, the Miscellaneous and Technical Immigration and Naturalization Amendments modified the H-1B definition to include fashion models of distinguished merit and ability.[8]

The American Competitiveness and Workforce Improvement Act of 1998 (ACWIA) [9] mandated that most H-1B petitioners pay an additional $500 fee, which is designated for the funding of training programs for American workers. This is known as the ACWIA fee. ACWIA also temporarily increased the H-1B cap to 115,000 for fiscal years 1999 and 2000. In 2000, the ACWIA fee was increased to $1000, and was scheduled to sunset on October 1, 2003. [10]

8. AC21 and related legislation

In 2000, three significant pieces of legislation affecting H-1Bs were enacted. On October 17, 2000, the President approved enactment of The American Competitiveness in the Twenty-First Century Act of 2000 (AC21), Public Law 106-313. On the same date, the President also approved enactment of Public Law 106-311, an untitled bill to increase the fee for certain H-1B petitions. Finally, on October 30, 2000, the President approved enactment of Public Law 106-396, the Visa Waiver Permanent Program Act (Visa Waiver Act). These amendments made the following changes:

(a) The American Competitiveness in the 21st Century Act (AC21)[11]

AC21 made significant changes to the H-1B landscape. It was largely a response to a booming economy which had led to significant demand for H-1B workers and public frustration with the cap being reached early in each fiscal year. AC21 raised the yearly cap to 195,000 for fiscal years 2001 - 2003. The limit returned to 65,000 in fiscal year 2004. Other H-1B relevant changes in AC21 included the following:

- Allowed for the immediate H-1B employment or "portability" of certain H-1B nonimmigrant aliens who change H-1B employers;

- Exempted certain H-1B nonimmigrants from the cap;

- Provided for extensions of stay in one year increments beyond the normal six year maximum for H-1Bs who are the beneficiaries of a qualifying employment-based immigrant petition;

- Provided for extensions of stay (up to three years) for H-1Bs who are beneficiaries of qualifying employment-based immigrant petitions who are eligible for those immigrant classifications but for the availability of an immigrant visa number;

- Modified the method of counting H-1B nonimmigrant aliens; and

- Provided that certain H-1B petitions that are revoked because of fraud or willful misrepresentation shall be subtracted from the numerical count for the year in which the petition was revoked.

(b) The Visa Waiver Permanent Program Act[12]

The Visa Waiver Act included an amendment to section 214 of the INA to state that an amended H-1B petition is not required when a new corporate entity is the successor of an H-1B petitioner where the only change is the petitioner's identity.

(c) Public Law 106-311

This untitled law raised the H-1B petitioner base fee from $500 to $1,000 while exempting additional types of employers (certain institutions of higher education and nonprofit research entities) from payment of this increased fee.

[12] Pub. L. No. 106-396, 114 Stat. 1631.

9. H-1B Legislation after AC21

(a) Twenty-First Century Department of Justice Appropriations Authorization Act (DOJ21)[13]

In 2002, DOJ21 amended Section 106 of AC21 to allow H-1B extensions beyond the six-year limit for H-1B beneficiaries on whose behalf a permanent labor certification or employment-based (EB) immigrant petition has been pending for 365 days or more.

(b) United States-Chile Free Trade Agreement Implementation Act[14] and United States-Singapore Free Trade Agreement Implementation Act[15]

In 2003, section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b1) was added to the INA upon the signing of Free Trade Agreements (FTAs) with Chile and Singapore. The agreements took effect on January 1, 2004. The FTAs allow for no more than 1,400 professionals from Chile and 5,400 professionals from Singapore to enter the United States annually. The numerical limitations for the FTAs are set aside from the overall H-1B Program cap of 165,000. The H-1B1 is not required to file a petition with USCIS and may apply directly to the Department of State for a visa. However, nonimmigrants already present in the US may apply to USCIS for a change of nonimmigrant status to H-1B1. H-1B1s are required to file a labor condition application from the Department of Labor, and the position must involve a specialty occupation. The requirements governing the H-1B1 are the same as for an H-1B.

(c) H-1B Visa Reform Act of 2004[16]

On December 8, 2004, President George W. Bush signed the Omnibus Appropriations Act of FY 2005 (also known as the H-1B Visa Reform Act) into law. This act reinstated the ACWIA fee which had sunset on October 1, 2003. This act also increased the ACWIA fee to $1,500 for certain H-1B petitions filed by petitioners with more than 25 employees in the United States, with some exceptions. The act set the ACWIA fee at $750 for certain H-1B petitions filed by petitioners with 25 or fewer employees in the United States, with some exceptions. A Fraud Prevention and Detection Fee of $500 was instituted for the first H-1B petition filed by a particular petitioner on behalf of a specific beneficiary on or after March 8, 2005.

(d) Employ American Workers Act (EAWA)[17]

On February 17, 2009, President Obama signed into law the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (commonly known as the "stimulus bill"). The stimulus bill contained the Employ American Workers Act ("EAWA"). EAWA took effect on February 17, 2009 and expired on February 17, 2011. EAWA prevented a company from displacing U.S. workers when hiring H-

1B specialty occupation workers, if the company received funds through the Troubled Asset Relief Program (TARP)[18] or under section 13 of the Federal Reserve Act (collectively referred to "covered funding"). Under EAWA, any company that received covered funding and sought to hire H-1B workers was considered to be an "H-1B dependent employer." Employers who received covered funds were required to make additional attestations to DOL when filing the LCA. Form I-129 was revised on March 11, 2009, to inquire whether the petitioner had received TARP funding. If the petitioner indicated it had received TARP funding, the petitioner must have indicated it was H-1B dependent on the LCA. TARP applied to all H-1B petitions filed on or after February 17, 2009, seeking an employment start date before February 17, 2011.

(e) Emergency Supplemental Appropriations for Border Security for the Fiscal Year Ending September 30, 2010[19]

On August 13, 2010, President Obama signed Public Law 111-230 which requires the submission of an additional fee of $2,000 for certain H-1B petitions where 1) the petitioner employs 50 or more employees in the United States; and 2) more than 50 percent of the petitioner's employees in the United States are in H-1B, L-1A, or L-1B nonimmigrant status. Public Law 111-230 was originally slated to remain in effect until September 30, 2014.

(f) James Zadroga 9/11 Health and Compensation Act of 2010[20]

On January 2, 2011, Congress extended the additional fee in Public Law 111-230 until September 30, 2015.

C. The E-3 Program

Section 501 of the Real ID Act of 2005[21] created the E-3 classification[22]. The E-3 classification is only for nationals of Australia. An E-3 must be coming to the United States to engage in a specialty occupation, and the US employer must file a petition on Form I-129. In all substantive respects, the E-3 is identical to an H-1B. The statute defining a specialty occupation for an H-1B includes the E-3 in its definition of specialty occupation.[23] The same criteria and standards are used to determine whether the position is a specialty occupation and whether the beneficiary is qualified to engage in the occupation. There are several mostly procedural differences which will be discussed where the issue arises in this manual. A more comprehensive discussion of the E-3 classification can be found in Chapter 7 of this Part.

[22] INA 101(a)(15)(E)(iii).
[23] INA 214(i)(1).

Every H-1B petition filed with USCIS must be accompanied by a Labor Condition Application (LCA) certified by the Department of Labor (DOL).[24] The petitioner makes attestations on the LCA regarding its responsibilities as an employer, such as wages, benefits, and working conditions of both foreign and US workers.[25] DOL does not adjudicate an LCA and generally does not evaluate the claims made on an LCA. DOL will certify the LCA unless it is either incomplete or contains obvious inaccuracies.[26] While DOL does not adjudicate the LCA, it does enforce, through its Wage and Hour Division (WHD), the attestations made on the LCA as well as certain administrative, record-keeping, and posting requirements associated with the LCA. The Requirements of an LCA are discussed in Chapter 5 of this Part dealing with petitioner requirements.

It should be noted that, unlike the permanent immigrant categories, there is no legal requirement in the H-1B program that the H-1B employee not be displacing a US worker, and DOL does not consider this issue in the H-1B context. The attestations mentioned in the preceding paragraph are designed to ensure that the H-1B employer treats H-1B employees the same as US workers. Rather than require proof of non-displacement of a US worker, the LCA attestation system removes any motivation or incentive on the part of a US employer to favor H-1B employees over US workers. This is especially true when one considers the fees, processing time, legal costs, and other factors involved in hiring an H-1B worker over a US worker.

E. Role of the Department of Homeland Security (DHS)

As part of DHS, USCIS is responsible for overseeing the H-1B program. This includes the creation of regulations and policy governing H-1B standards, as well as operational oversight. This includes the adjudication of H-1B petitions, monitoring the H-1B cap, developing training and quality assurance programs, and fraud prevention and identification.

F. Overview of the Adjudicative Process and Making an Eligibility Determination

To make a determination of eligibility for H-1B, the officer should follow the steps outlined below:

| Step | Where can I find information on this Step? |
|---|---|
| 1. Is a certified LCA in the file? | Chapter 5 |
| 2. Is the petitioner eligible to petition for an H-1B? | Chapter 5 |
| 3. Is the position eligible for H-1B? | Chapter 5 |
| 4. Is the beneficiary eligible for H-1B? | Chapter 6 |
| 5. Is a cap number required and available? | Chapter 3,4 |

G. Legal Authority

- INA 101(a)(15)-Definition of H-1B worker
- INA 214(g)-H-1B cap
- INA 214(i)-H-1B specialty occupation defined
- 8 CFR 214 – H-1B regulation

H. Definitions

The following terms relate directly to the H-1B temporary worker classification. Adjudicators should be familiar with these terms.

(1) Specialty Occupation. A specialty occupation is one that requires:

- the theoretical and practical application of a body of highly specialized knowledge;
- and the attainment of at least a bachelor's degree or its equivalent.[27]

(b) Fashion Model. An H-1B fashion model of "distinguished merit and ability" is eligible for H-1B classification.

(c) Prominent. In order to qualify for H-1B as a fashion model the model must be prominent. Prominence means a high level of achievement in the field of fashion modeling evidenced by a degree of skill and recognition substantially above that ordinarily encountered to the extent that a person described as prominent is renowned, leading, or well-known in the field of fashion modeling.[28]

(d) DOD Researcher. An alien coming to the US "to perform services of an exceptional nature requiring such merit and ability relating to a cooperative research and development project or a coproduction project provided under a government-to-government agreement administered by the Secretary of Defense." These aliens are categorized internally as H-1B2 and exist under a separate statutory authority than the regular H-1B program.

(e) Chile/Singapore H1B1. A national of Chile or Singapore coming to the United States to perform services in a specialty occupation. The H1B1 program exists apart from the H-1B program, though a national of Chile or Singapore could choose either. No petition is required of an H1B1.

(f) U.S. Employer. Every H-1B must have a U.S. employer. A U.S. employer is a person, firm, corporation, contractor, association, or other entity physically located in the United States with a taxpayer ID number.

(g) LCA. Every H-1B petition must be accompanied by a certified Labor Certification Application (LCA) valid for the dates of employment. An LCA contains certain promises (attestations) made by the petitioner relating to wages, working conditions, etc. The LCA is submitted to the Department of Labor, which certifies the LCA.

(h) Intermittent or seasonal employment. An H-1B who is employed in the U.S. on an intermittent or seasonal basis, or for an aggregate of less than six months per year is not subject to the general six-year limit on H-1B time in the U.S.

(i) Temporary. The intent to depart the U.S. upon the completion of an authorized period of admission as a nonimmigrant.

(j) Dual intent. An H-1B may pursue immigrant status while in the U.S. as a nonimmigrant. This simultaneous intent to depart at the completion of stay while also pursuing a desire to remain permanently is known as dual intent. In many other nonimmigrant situations, the intent to remain permanently is inconsistent with nonimmigrant intent and renders the alien ineligible for nonimmigrant classification.

(k) Concurrent Employment. Simultaneous employment with more than one approved nonimmigrant employer. Each employer must have an approved petition.

[28] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(ii).

(l) Credentials. An alien must possess the credentials required to enter the specialty occupation named on the petition. This extends only to entry-level credentials. A more complex or responsible position does not require greater credentials.

(m) Nurse. A nursing position that requires at least a bachelor's degree for entry into the field may qualify for H-1B. Most nursing positions do not meet this requirement.

(n) 3 for 1. When attempting to show qualification to enter a specialty occupation through experience rather through possession of a bachelor's degree, three years of experience equates to one year of study. Thus a person with no bachelor's degree would require at a minimum twelve years of experience to potentially qualify.

Chapter 2: General Filing Requirements

A. Overview of Filing Requirements

1. Required Initial Evidence. A petition for an H-1B nonimmigrant worker must be filed on Form I-129 at the proper filing location, with correct fee(s), signature, and accompanied by the following:

- A certified Labor Condition Application (LCA);
- Evidence that the petitioner is eligible to request H-1B classification;
- Evidence that the job qualifies for H-1B classification; and
- Evidence that the beneficiary qualifies to perform the duties of the specialty occupation.

Generally, once certified by DOL as complete, the LCA is acceptable for filing with a petition. The LCA validity dates should cover the period of requested employment on the petition.

Evidence that the petitioner is eligible to file an H-1B petition generally means that the petitioner is a United States employer. The petitioner should demonstrate that the position is a specialty occupation, and also that the beneficiary is qualified to engage in that occupation. This means both that the beneficiary is a professional and that he or she has the degree, training, work experience, and other qualifications, such as a license, if required, to perform the work.

2. Time of Filing. The petition may not be filed or approved earlier than six months before the date of actual need for the beneficiary's services.[29] For petitions subject to the fiscal year cap, petitions may be filed no earlier than April 1st with an October 1st start date (beginning of the next fiscal year).

3. Amended Petition. An amended petition requires the same filing fee as a new petition. Because the amended petition supplements the original petition, documentation submitted with the original filing does not have to be duplicated in the amended petition. However, an amended petition must be accompanied by evidence addressing the change which resulted in the filing of the amended petition.

4. Eligibility at Time of Filing. USCIS regulations affirmatively require a petitioner to establish eligibility for the benefit sought at the time the petition is filed.[30] A visa petition may not be approved based on speculation of future eligibility or after the petitioner or beneficiary becomes eligible under a new set of facts.[31]

[29] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(9)(i)(B).
[30] 8 CFR 103.2(b)(1).

B. Who May File

The regulation requires a United States employer to file an H-1B petition. USCIS regulations also allow an agent to file a petition as a representative on behalf of United States employers to accommodate some situations.[32] See Chapter 5 for filing requirements of U.S. employers and agents filing H-1B petitions.

Additionally, USCIS regulations affirmatively require a petitioner to establish eligibility for the benefit sought at the time the petition is filed.[33] A visa petition may not be approved based on speculation of future eligibility or after the petitioner or beneficiary becomes eligible under a new set of facts.[34]

C. Filing Location

1. General. The petition must be filed with the Service Center with jurisdiction over H petitions in the geographic area of intended employment. Currently, H-1B petitions are filed either at the Vermont or California Service Center, depending on the state of intended employment.

On June 5, 2009, USCIS removed all references in regulations to filing locations and now provides information regarding the proper filing locations in the instructions to the respective petition and application forms and through the USCIS website.[35] The most recent instructions to the Form I-129 will list the filing locations for each specific state.

2. Filing Jurisdiction for Multiple Work Locations. When the temporary employment will be in different locations, the state where the petitioning company or organization's primary office is located will determine the appropriate Service Center to send the Form I-129 package, regardless of where in the United States the various worksites are located.

For example, if the beneficiary will work in Arizona and Texas, and the petitioning company's primary office is in New York, then for filing location purposes New York should be treated as the workplace. If the beneficiary will work in Florida and Georgia, and the petitioning company's primary office is in California, then California should be treated as the workplace for filing purposes.

While an H-1B petition may cover multiple work locations, every place of work has to covered by an LCA. In the examples above, each petition would require at least two LCAs, covering both places of intended employment.

3. Work in More than One Location. Such petitions are usually filed by an agent who is representing numerous employers in various locations, or by one employer where work will be performed by the beneficiary in more than one location. Where there will be more than one workplace, a detailed itinerary must accompany the petition. Each workplace must also be covered by an LCA. Where the multiple workplaces are within one Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA), only one LCA for that area is required.

4. Extensions. The filing location for a petition seeking an extension of stay may be different from the location for a petition requesting original classification. H-1B petitions seeking extensions are currently filed at the California Service Center regardless of the place of intended work.

5. E-3 Specialty Occupation Petitions. E-3 petitions seeking a change of nonimmigrant status to E-3 are filed at the Vermont Service Center regardless of the place of intended work.

D. Other Requirements

1. Named Beneficiaries. The beneficiary of an H-1B petition must be named on the petition. The LCA submitted to DOL does not need to name the beneficiary.

2. Signature. The petitioner must sign the petition.[36] An H-1B petition may be denied for failing to establish eligibility for the benefit sought if the petition was accepted as signed, but it was not signed by a qualified signer.[37]

E. Fee Issues

An H-1B petition must be accompanied by the appropriate filing fees. In addition to the base filing fee, there are additional fees that have been imposed by statute. Spouses and children or H-1Bs are subject only to the base filing fee. H-1B fees are as follows:

1. Base Fee. The base filing fee is required for all H-1B petitions.

2. ACWIA Fee. American Competitiveness and Workforce Improvement Act of 1998 (ACWIA) Fee:

(a) ACWIA requires an H-1B petitioner to pay an additional filing fee for:

[36] 8 CFR 103.2(a)(2).
[37] 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8)(ii).

- an initial grant of H-1B status;
- an initial extension of stay; or
- authorization to change employers.[38]

If one of the above three conditions applies, the petition is subject to the ACWIA fee, unless one of the exemptions discussed below applies.

The ACWIA fee is either $750 or $1,500 depending on the number of full-time equivalent positions the petitioner employs. Petitioners who employ no more than 25 full-time equivalent employees, including any affiliate or subsidiary, submit an ACWIA fee of $750. All other petitioners submit an ACWIA fee of $1,500. It is important to note that the fee determination turns on the number of full-time equivalent positions and not the absolute number of employees. For example, if the petitioner employs 26 people, but can demonstrate that 2 of those individuals work part-time for no more than 20 hours a week, then the petitioner employs 25 full-time equivalent positions, and the lower ACWIA fee is appropriate. The burden is on the petitioner to make this demonstration.

The ACWIA fee applies to any non-exempt petitions filed with USCIS after December 08, 2004, and must be paid by the petitioner or its representative. The fee may not be paid directly or indirectly by the beneficiary.

| If the petitioner has... | Then the ACWIA fee is... |
|---|---|
| More than 25 full-time equivalent employees in the United States, | $1,500 |
| 25 or less full-time equivalent employees in the United States, | $750 |

(b) Exemptions from the ACWIA fee

Even if the petition is subject to the ACWIA fee, certain petitioners are exempt from payment of the fee. The following organizations are not required to pay the ACWIA fee:

- An institution of higher education as defined in section 101(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965,
- A nonprofit entity that is related to or affiliated with an institution of higher education,
- A nonprofit research organization or governmental research organization,

[38] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(19).

- A primary or secondary educational institution, or
- A non-profit entity, which engaged in an established curriculum-related clinical training program for students.

The ACWIA fee is not required in the following circumstances:

- A petitioner is filing its second or subsequent request for an extension of stay for an alien,
- The filing is an amended petition that does not contain any requests to extend the validity of the petition it seeks to amend, or
- A petition is filed to correct a USCIS error.[39] Such an ACWIA fee exempt petition, however, may not contain any requests to extend the validity of the petition it seeks to correct, unless the USCIS error involved the validity dates.

3. The petitioner must also pay a Fraud Prevention and Detection Fee of $500 to:

   - Initially grant an alien H-1B nonimmigrant classification, or
   - Obtain authorization for an H-1B to change employers.[40]

The $500 Fraud Prevention and Detection Fee is never required for petitions for H-1B1 (HSC) Free Trade Nonimmigrants from Chile or Singapore.[41] It also does not apply to E-3 petitions.

4. The Emergency Supplemental Appropriation for Border Security Act requires an additional $2,000 fee on H-1B petitions filed between August 14, 2010 and September 30, 2015, if the following criteria are met.

   - The petition is requesting:
   - An initial grant of H-1B status, or
   - Authorization to change employers, AND
   - The petitioner meets both of the following:
     - Employs 50 or more U.S. employees, and
     - More than 50% of those employees are in H-1B or L-1 status.[42]

[39] INA 214(c)(9).
[40] INA 214(c)(12)(A).
[41] 70 Fed. Reg. 23776.
[42] Pub. L. 111-230 and Pub. L. 111-347.

In contrast to the ACWIA fee provisions, which are triggered by the number of full-time equivalent positions employed by a petitioner, these border security fee provisions are dependent on the total number of employees. Whether some of those employees are part-time employees does not affect the fee calculation. The fee is based on the total number of employees regardless of their status as part-time or full-time employees.

F. General Issues

1. Effect of a Prior H-petition Approval. Evidence of prior approvals submitted with a subsequent new petition cannot serve as the basis for future eligibility. Knowledge of prior approval of an H petition can be helpful to USCIS when considered along with other evidence of eligibility for the benefit sought. For example, in a petition accompanied by a request for an extension, the fact of the prior approval should be taken into consideration by the officer, and absent indications of fraud or error, the officer may in his or her discretion give deference to the baseline finding of eligibility. Even in such a case, the petitioner must still demonstrate eligibility for the extension.

A prior approval never obligates USCIS to approve a subsequent petition, relieve the petitioner of providing sufficient documentation to establish current eligibility, or relieve an officer of the responsibility, inherent in his or her position, to determine whether the petitioner has actually met its burden to establish eligibility. An officer is not required to approve applications or petitions where eligibility has not been demonstrated, merely because of prior approvals that may have been erroneous.[43]

2. Multiple Petitions Using the Same LCA. An LCA may be filed for multiple positions. The petitioner may file multiple petitions at different times as the names of aliens become known, and use copies of the same labor certification until all of the positions covered by the labor certification have been filled. Each subsequent petition must refer to the petition number of all previously filed petitions using that labor certification, if available to the petitioner.

3. Multiple Petitions by an Employer. An employer may not file, in the same fiscal year, more than one H-1B petition on behalf of the same alien if the alien is subject to the H-1B cap or is exempt from the cap under section 214(g)(5)(C) of the INA. When cap numbers are in high demand and USCIS is forced to resort to a random selection to allocate H-1B visas, this rule prevents petitioners from attempting to "stack the deck" in favor of their beneficiaries.

If an H-1B petition is denied, on a basis other than fraud or misrepresentation, the employer may file a second H-1B petition on behalf of the same alien subject to cap availability.

Otherwise, filing more than one H-1B petition by the same employer or a related entity (e.g., parent, subsidiary, or affiliate) on behalf of the same alien in the same fiscal year will result in the denial or revocation of all H-1B petitions filed on behalf of that beneficiary, unless the petitioners are able to demonstrate a legitimate business need to file more than one petition on behalf of the same alien.[44]

4. Multiple Employers. An H-1B beneficiary may be employed by more than one petitioner at any given time. However, a separate petition must be approved for each employer. This is referred to on H-1B petitions as new concurrent employment. It is not necessary to file separate petitions, however, in a situation in which a person or company in business as an agent is filing a petition on behalf of multiple United States employers as their representative.

5. Inability to Obtain LCA. Generally speaking, there is no exception from the requirement that an LCA be submitted with the H-1B petition. Officers should not entertain such a request. However, it is worth noting that historically the requirement that the LCA be submitted as initial evidence has been waived in extreme circumstances. During the shutdown of the Federal government in 1996, DOL was unable to issue LCAs because it was subject to the shutdown. The adjudications function of the former INS was not shutdown during that period, and INS continued to accept H-1B petitions. In that situation, INS allowed H-1B petitions to be filed without an LCA, but required that an LCA be submitted prior to adjudication.

Similarly, in 2007, the DOL online system that certifies LCAs would not allow filers to print a certified LCA after completion of the DOL process. This occurred simultaneously with the opening of the FY2008 H-1B cap during a time when the H-1B cap was routinely reached during the first week of filing. USCIS allowed the submission of a screen print from the DOL system showing that the LCA was certified, though this was not an actual certified LCA. Petitioners were required to submit the certified LCA prior to adjudication.

G. Amended Petitions.

1. General. A petitioner must file an amended petition when there are changes in the terms and conditions of employment which may affect eligibility for the H-1B.[45] This is known as a "material" change. An amended petition is only required for these material changes. When there is a change that does not potentially affect eligibility, the petitioner should inform USCIS of the change at the time the next extension is filed.

Situations which could affect eligibility include but are not limited to the following:

- Any change which triggers the filing of a new LCA with the DOL;
- A change in the H-1B's duties from one specialty occupation to another;
- A change in work location to an area not covered by an LCA.

[44] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(2)(i)(G).
[45] 8 CFR (h)(11)(i)(A).

The following do not affect eligibility and do not require an amended petition:

- Short-term, intermittent placement at another worksite;[46]
- A change in the petitioner's ownership with no other changes, where the owner is the successor of all the immigration-related assets and liabilities of the petitioner;
- A change in the petitioner's name with no other changes;
- A change in the ownership structure of the petitioner, such as a corporate reorganization, where the new corporate entity assumes all the immigration-related assets and liabilities of the previous entity, such as LCA obligations;
- A transfer from one branch of a firm to another branch of a firm, where the duties remain the same but the firm remains the employer.

Chapter 3: Numerical Limitations and Limits on Periods of Stay

A. H-1B and Other Caps

1. The H-1B Cap. The number of new H-1B visas issued each year is limited by statute.[47] This limit, called the cap, has traditionally been set at 65,000 visas, although it has been increased by Congress in some years. The H-1B cap applies to each Fiscal Year, which begins on October 1st. Petitions for the upcoming Fiscal Year are accepted no earlier than the preceding April 1st (or the first working day after that date) because an H-1B petition may not be filed or approved more than six months before the date of actual need.[48]

The H-1B cap only applies to the principal H-1B and not to the spouse and children of the beneficiary, who obtain their visas under the H-4 classification.[49]

In addition to the regular H-1B cap, a separate cap exists for one of the exemptions to the regular H-1B cap. H-1B beneficiaries who possess a Master's degree or higher from a US institution are exempt from the cap. This exemption is discussed below and in Chapter 4 of this Part. This exemption from the cap is itself capped at 20,000 per year.

Beginning with fiscal year (FY) 1992, the H-1B cap has historically been set and met as follows.

| FY | Number of H-1B Visas | Date Cap Met |
|---|---|---|
| 1992 to 1996 | 65,000 | Cap not met |
| 1997 | 65,000 | September 1, 1997 |

2. The H-1B1 Cap. 1,400 professionals from Chile and 5,400 professional from Singapore are allowed to enter the US as H-1B1s in a fiscal year. Only the principal H-1B1 visa holder counts against the cap; spouses and children do not count. Only the first admission or conferral of status counts against the cap; subsequent extensions do not count until the sixth extension (which would be for the seventh year as an H-1B1). All subsequent extensions after the sixth extension counts against the H-1B cap.

The Chile and Singapore Free Trade Agreements affect the regular H-1B cap numbers as follows:

| Classification | Limitation |
|---|---|
| HSC – from Chile | 1,400 |
| HSC – from Singapore | 5,400 |
| H-1B – from all other countries | 58,200 |
| Total | 65,000 |

The H-1B1 cap is a set-aside from the regular H-1B cap. USCIS subtracts the H-1B1 cap from the regular H-1B cap at the beginning of the fiscal year and allocates those positions to H-1B1 petitions throughout the course of the year. At the end of the fiscal year, any H-1B1 slots that went unused are allocated to pending H-1B petitions so that the full allotment of H-1B cap slots are used.

3. The E-3 cap. E-3 visas are limited to 10,500 per year. These visas do not count against the H-1B cap. Spouses and children of E-3s do not count against the cap.

4. Petitions not subject to the cap. Not all H-1B petitions count against the cap. Petitions requesting an extension of H-1B status do not count against the cap unless the H-1B would be eligible for a new six-year period of admission.[51]

When multiple petitions are approved on behalf of an alien, only one approval is counted against the cap. For example, if an H-1B changes employers pursuant to the filing of a petition by a new employer, the second petition will not count against the cap unless the H-1B would be eligible for a new six-year period. This is also the case when an H-1B requests concurrent employment with another H-1B petitioner.

As noted above, dependent family members do not count against the cap.

When an alien previously in H-1B status who left the US is seeking to return to complete the remainder of the previously approved petition, the second petition does not count against the cap unless the alien would be eligible for a new six-year period of admission. This is known as "remainder time" and will be discussed in Chapter 5.

In addition to petitions that are not subject to the cap, there are several exemptions from the cap. These will be discussed in more detail in Chapter 4 of this Part. The cap exemptions include petitions filed by:

- Institutions of higher education, as defined in section 101(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965, 20 U.S.C. § 1001(a);
- Nonprofit entities related to or affiliated with an institution of higher education; and
- Nonprofit research organizations or governmental research organizations.[52]

They also include situations in which:

- The beneficiary possesses a Master's degree or higher from a US university (limited to 20,000 per year);
- The beneficiary will be working exclusively within Guam and/or the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas Islands;[53]
- The beneficiary was admitted to the United States as a J-1 nonimmigrant in order to receive graduate medical training and has received a waiver of the two-year foreign residence requirement to practice primary care or specialty care medicine in a medically underserved area or for an interested federal or state agency.[54] This is often referred to as a "Conrad 20" or "Conrad 30" waiver.

5. Cap for DOD H-1B2 Petitions. DOD researchers who provide services of an exceptional nature relating to DOD research and development projects or coproduction projects are classified as H-1B2. The H-1B2 classification has its own, separate numerical limitation. A maximum of 100 H-1B2 workers can be employed at any time.[55]

6. Petitioner Choice. There may be situations in which a petitioner files an H-1B petition as subject to the cap, but upon review of the petition the officer determines that the beneficiary qualifies for an exemption, or the petitioner itself is cap exempt. In all such cases, the petitioner's choice regarding cap applicability should be used.

7. Cap Determination is Made Prior to Acceptance of Petition. The determination of an available cap slot or an exemption must be made before the H-1B petition is accepted and adjudicated. If the numerical limitation for the current fiscal year has not been reached, USCIS will accept the petition for cap-subject employment and adjudication may commence. If the cap-subject petition is approved, employment may not commence until October 1st of the cap fiscal year, or the requested start date, whichever is later.

If the numerical limitation for the current fiscal year has been reached, USCIS may not accept the petition for cap-subject employment.

B. Limitations on Periods of Stay

1. H-1B Time Limit. Generally, an H-1B may be admitted for a maximum period of six years.[56] This is typically divided into two three-year validity periods separated by a request for an extension. [57] Exceptions that will allow extensions of H-1B status beyond six years are discussed later in this chapter.

Barring the applicability of one of these exceptions, generally the alien must be outside the United States for one year before he or she can return as an H-1B.

Time spent in L nonimmigrant status applies to the H-1B time limit. In other words, an L nonimmigrant who changes status to H-1B would only be eligible for a three-year period of admission as an H-1B. Similarly, time spent as an H-1B counts against the applicable time limits for the L nonimmigrant category.[58]

[54] INA 214(l)(2)(A).
[55] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(8)(i)(B).
[56] INA 214(g)(4); 8 CFR 214.2(h)(13)(iii).
[57] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(9)(iii)(A)(1).
[58] The L-1A and L-1B time limits are seven and six years, respectively. Thus an H-1B who has completed the six year period could change status to L-1A for one year if eligible, but not to L-1B.

2. Spouse and Dependents.H-1B time limits apply only to the principal H-1B nonimmigrant and do not apply independently to the principal's spouse and children.

Time spent as an H-4 dependent does not count against the maximum allowable period of stay available to principals in H-1B status. Thus, an alien who was previously an H-4 and subsequently becomes an H-1B principal is eligible for the maximum period of stay. Conversely, an H-1B principal who subsequently changes to H-4 status may remain in the derivative status for as long as the principal alien spouse maintains that principal status.

3. Intermittent Employment. The H-1B time limits do not apply to someone who does not reside continually in the United States and whose employment in the United States is seasonal or intermittent or for an aggregate of six months or less per year.

Further, the limitations do not apply to aliens who reside abroad and regularly commute to the United States to engage in part-time employment. To qualify for this exception, the petitioner and the alien must provide clear and convincing proof that the alien qualifies for such an exception. Such proof shall consist of evidence such as arrival and departure records, copies of tax returns, and records of employment abroad.

4. H-1B1 Time Limits. H-1B1s for national of Chile and Singapore are approved in one-year increments. Extensions may be granted indefinitely in one-year increments.

5. E-3 Time Limits. An E-3 is subject to the same initial time limits as an H-1B. The E-3 may be approved for a three year period and may obtain extensions in three year increments. Unlike the H-1B, however, the E-3 may obtain extensions indefinitely so long as nonimmigrant intent is maintained.

C. Exemptions from H-1B Time Limits

1. Pending Application for Labor Certification or Immigrant Classification. AC21 created an exception to the six-year limit in H-1B status for aliens who were the subject of "lengthy adjudications."[59] These changes apply to H-1Bs who are in the process of seeking permanent residence based on their employment. The changes reflect Congress' recognition of the fact that seeking and obtaining permanent residence is a long process, often through no fault of the alien. They also evidence a desire to avoid imposing the costs of government processing timelines on these aliens and on their employers, as often it is the H-1B employer who is also the immigrant petitioner, and whose operations would be disrupted by the H-1B worker having to leave the US during processing of the immigrant petition.

The six-year H-1B time limit does not apply to the petition when, as of the date of filing an extension request:

[59] Sections 104(c) and 106(a) of P.L. 106-313.

- 365 or more days have passed since the filing of any application for labor certification with DOL to obtain status as an immigrant; and the labor certification, if approved, has not been revoked, is unexpired or has been timely filed with an EB petition within the labor certification's validity period; or

- 365 or more days have passed since the filing of an EB immigrant petition that is still pending; or;

- The alien is the beneficiary of an approved EB immigration petition and is not able to file to adjust status to lawful permanent residence based on the unavailability of an immigrant visa number.

A request for H-1B time beyond six years should not be granted if it is based on a labor certification having been filed and at the time of the request, the labor certification has expired by virtue of not having been timely filed in support of an EB immigrant petition during its validity period, as specified by DOL.

So long as one or more of the above requirements are met, there is no limit on how long the exemption applies, and thus how long the qualifying H-1B may remain in H-1B status.

Officers should be aware of the fact that in the second bullet above, the employment-based petition need not be one that requires a labor certification. For example, a qualifying religious organization may employ an H-1B as a nonimmigrant and then seek to obtain permanent residence on the worker's behalf through the filing of an I-360, which does not require labor certification. As this section of the statute merely requires an employment-based immigrant petition, if 365 days have passed since the filing of the petition, the H-1B may qualify for additional time beyond the initial six years.

2. Effect of Decision on a Labor Certification or Immigrant Petition. USCIS will grant an extension of stay to such H-1B nonimmigrants in one-year increments until a final decision is made to:

(i) Deny the application for labor certification; or if the labor certification is approved, to deny the EB immigrant petition that was filed pursuant to the approved labor certification;

(ii) Deny the EB immigrant petition; or

(iii) Grant or deny the beneficiary's application for an immigrant visa or for adjustment of status.

If the application is denied or revoked, the employer is advised that there is a period of time within which the decision may be appealed to the Board of Alien Labor Certification Appeals (BALCA):

- For denied Form ETA 750 labor certification applications filed prior to March 28, 2005, the employer must file an appeal within 90 days.

- For denied or revoked Form ETA 9089 labor certification applications, the employer must file an appeal within 30 days.

If the employer does not file an appeal within the required timeframe, the denial becomes the final decision of the Secretary of Labor. USCIS will not consider a DOL decision to be final until either the time for appeal has run and no appeal has been filed or, if an appeal is taken, the date a decision is issued by BALCA.

The labor certification will still be considered "pending" while the denial or revocation of the labor certification application may be appealed, or while the appeal is actually pending, for the purposes of determining if an H-1B nonimmigrant is eligible for extension of stay.

I-140 petition denials should also not be considered final for purposes of AC21 § 106(b) during the 33 day appeal period permitted or, if an appeal is filed, during the time the appeal is pending.

3. Request for 7th Year of H-1B and Beyond. A request for additional H-1B time will usually be in the form of a petition with a request for extension of stay by the current H-1B employer. However this is not a requirement. The extension request may come from the current H-1B employer or it may come with a request for a change of employment to a new H-1B employer. Also, the employer for whom the H-1B will be working beyond the sixth year need not be the same employer who is the intending employer on the immigrant petition or labor certification.

A qualified alien need not be in H-1B status in order to obtain additional H-1B time. The alien may obtain such additional periods of H-1B admission through a petition to change status from another nonimmigrant classification, or through H-1B visa issuance at a U.S. consulate and admission from abroad. This is because the statute does not speak in terms of an extension or in terms of H-1B status, but simply states that if one of the qualifying conditions are met, then the time limits contained in the INA[60] simply do not apply.

4. Combined 6th and 7th Year Requests. A petitioner may simultaneously request the remaining H-1B time left in the initial six-year period of admission with the additional time allowed by AC21. Seventh year extension requests under section 106(a) of AC21 may be made in a petition that also contains a request for an extension that reaches the maximum six-year limit. USCIS officers should first determine the amount of H-1B extension time that may be granted to reach the six-year limitation of stay, then determine if the permanent labor certification or Form I-140 petition was filed at least 365 before the conclusion of the six year limitation of stay. If so, then the additional one year extension may be granted. If the beneficiary would no longer be in H-1B status at the time that 365 days from the filing of the permanent labor certification or immigrant petition has run, then the additional time beyond the six years cannot be granted.

In no case may the total time given by an H-1B approval exceed three years.

5. Documentation in Support of a Request for H-1B Time beyond Six Years.

(a) Based on Labor Certification. USCIS will accept the following documents as evidence that a labor certification filed on behalf of the H-1B beneficiary is still pending, or has been certified and is still valid:

- If the labor certification is a Form ETA 750 that is still pending with DOL, a screen-print from the DOL Public Disclosure System (PDS) that shows the status of the labor certification is 'In Process' or is actively 'On Appeal' that includes the name of the petitioning employer, the date that the Form ETA 750 was filed, the name of the beneficiary, and the case number assigned to the pending Form ETA 750; or

- If the labor certification application was certified before July 16, 2007, a complete copy of the Form ETA- 750 or Form ETA- 9089 which shows the date of certification and a copy of the Form I-140 petition receipt notice for the petition filed on behalf of the H-1B beneficiary; or

- If the labor certification was certified on or after July 16, 2007, a complete copy of the Form ETA-750 or Form ETA-9089 which shows the date of certification and the date the labor certification will expire, along with a copy of the Form I-140 petition receipt notice for the petition filed on behalf of the H-1B beneficiary.

- If an applicant for extension of stay cannot present a screen print from the PDS, he or she may present a letter from DOL issued within the previous 60 days prior to the filing of the extension petition instead. The DOL letter must explain why the PDS screen print is unavailable and verify that an application for a labor certification is pending.

(b) Based on Visa Unavailability. USCIS interprets section 104(c) of AC21 as only applicable when a beneficiary, who has an approved Form I-140 petition, is eligible to be granted lawful permanent resident (LPR) status but for application of the per country limitations. Any petitioner seeking an H-1B petition extension on behalf of an H-1B beneficiary pursuant to section 104(c) of AC21 must establish that at the time of filing for such extension, the beneficiary is not eligible to be granted LPR status on account of the per country immigrant visa limitations.

USCIS will accept a copy of the H-1B beneficiary's Form I-140 petition approval notice which shows that an immigrant visa is not immediately available to him or her based on the approved petition's priority date as evidence of the H-1B beneficiary's eligibility for an extension of H-1B status under the provisions of section 104(c) of AC21.

Officers are instructed to review the DOS Immigrant Visa Bulletin that was in effect at the time of the filing of the Form I-129 in which a request for a section 104(c) of AC21 H-1B extension request is made. If the H-1B beneficiary is shown to be ineligible to be granted LPR status because of the per country visa limitations, then the H-1B extension request under the provisions of section 104(c) of AC21 may be granted for a maximum of three-year increments, until such time as the beneficiary's application for adjustment of status has been processed and a decision made thereon.

6. Recapture of Time. Time spent outside the United States does not count toward the limit on time spent as an H-1B. An H-1B petitioner who can document time spent abroad by the beneficiary may seek to add back or "recapture" that time to an H-1B approval so that the beneficiary obtains the full six years of time spent in the US as an H-1B.

(a) Basis for Recapture

The statute[61] limits H-1B time based on the "period of authorized admission." Because "admission" is defined as "the lawful entry of the alien into the United States after inspection and authorization by an immigration officer", only time spent in the United States as an H-1B counts towards the maximum. Thus, an H-1B petitioner may request that full days spent outside the U.S. during the period of petition validity by the beneficiary be recaptured and added back to the total maximum period of stay. As always, it is the applicant/petitioner's burden to demonstrate eligibility, and appropriate evidence, such as copies of passport stamps I-94's, and/or plane tickets must be submitted. The time spent outside the U.S. need not have been meaningfully interruptive of the H-1B stay. The reason for the absence is not relevant to the question of whether the time may be recaptured. Any trip of at least one 24-hour day outside the U.S. for any purpose, personal or business, can be recaptured.

(b) Evidence

The burden of proof remains with the H-1B petitioner to submit evidence documenting any and all exact periods of physical presence outside the United States when seeking an extension of petition validity and extension of stay for the H-1B nonimmigrant. While petitioners often submit a summary and/or charts of travel and the number or days spent out of the United States, which eases review of the accompanying documentation, petitioners are also required to submit independent documentary evidence establishing that the alien was outside of the United States during all the days, weeks, months etc. that he or she seeks to recapture (e.g. photocopies of passport stamps and/or Form I-94 arrival-departure records).

The fact that the burden may not be met for some claimed periods, or has been met for some claimed periods, has no bearing on the remaining claimed periods. Any periods of time for which the burden has been met may be added to the eligible period of admission upon approval of the application for extension of status. An alien may not be granted an extension of stay for periods of time that are not supported by independent documentary evidence. A Request for Evidence should not be sent to the petitioner for any claimed periods unsupported by evidence.

In some instances, the petition may not be approved for the entire period of time requested because the evidence submitted does not establish eligibility for the entire period of stay requested. In those situations, the approval notice should be issued for the period of time for which eligibility has been demonstrated.

The status of an H-4 dependent of an H-1B nonimmigrant is subject to the same period of admission and limitations as the principal alien. For example, if an H-1B alien is able to recapture a two-week business trip abroad for each year for five years in a row (for a total of 10 weeks), then his or her H-4 dependents, if seeking extension of stay, should be given an extension of stay up to the new expiration of the H-1B alien's stay.

The statute and regulations allow H-4 status only "if [the dependents] are accompanying or following to join the beneficiary in the United States." If it appears that the dependent is not using or is not intending to use H-4 status primarily to accompany or follow to join the principal H-1B alien, such as a situation in which the principal only is physically present or intends to be physically present in the United States for a small proportion of his or her period of H-1B admission and the dependents are using H-4 status to evade the limitations of or eligibility rules of the nonimmigrant options that otherwise would be available, then the H-4 extension of stay may be denied, limited or revoked on notice giving the H-4 the opportunity to provide evidence that his or her intention is primarily to accompany the principal.

Chapter 4: Exemptions From the Numerical Limitations

A. Background and Purpose

Certain types of H-1B petitions are exempt from the cap. Creating exemptions rather than changing the total cap number each year ensures that H-1B beneficiaries deemed especially desirable by Congress are able to obtain H-1B status even in times of high demand. It also allows Congress to further policy goals by ensuring that employers and beneficiaries deemed important by Congress are not prevented from obtaining H-1B status by the fixed cap limits.

Congress deemed certain institutions worthy of an H-1B cap exemption because of the direct benefits they provide to the United States. Congressional intent was to exempt from the H-1B cap certain alien workers who could provide direct contributions to the United States through their work on behalf of institutions of higher education and related nonprofit entities, or nonprofit research organizations, or governmental research organizations. In effect, this statutory measure ensures that qualifying institutions have access to a continuous supply of H-1B workers without numerical limitation.

B. Cap Exemption Based on Sections 214(g)(5)(A) and 214(g)(5)(B) of the Act

These exemptions, created by AC21, apply to an H-1B who:

- is employed (or has received an offer of employment) at an institution of higher education or a related or affiliated nonprofit entity, or who
- is employed (or has received an offer of employment) at a nonprofit research organization or a governmental research organization.[62]

Qualifying cap exempt entities thus include:

- an institution of higher education,
- an affiliated or related nonprofit entity,
- a nonprofit research organization, or
- a governmental research organization.

Note that each of these exemptions focus on the physical place of employment ("employed at") rather than on the H-1B's or the petitioner's attributes. Nonetheless, a petitioning entity claiming one of these exemptions is referred to as a "cap exempt employer."

1. Employed "at". As noted above, the statute exempts from the cap qualifying H-1Bs who are employed "at" a cap exempt entity. This is in contrast to a requirement that the H-1B be employed "by" the cap-exempt entity. This allows the exemption to be applied to an H-1B employed by a petitioner who might not otherwise be cap exempt but for the place where the work is being performed. This statutory language reflects Congressional intent that certain aliens who are not employed directly by a qualifying institution may nonetheless be treated as cap exempt when such employment directly and predominately furthers the essential purposes of the qualifying institution.[63]

Third party petitioners are thus allowed to claim exemption on behalf of a beneficiary under either section 214(g)(5)(A) or (B) of the Act if the H-1B will perform job duties "at" a qualifying entity that directly and predominately further the normal, primary, or essential purpose, mission, objectives or function of the qualifying institution, namely, higher education or nonprofit or governmental research.

If a petitioner is not itself a qualifying institution, then it bears the burden of demonstrating by a preponderance of the evidence that a logical nexus exists between beneficiary's duties and the normal, primary, or essential work performed by the qualifying institution.

In many instances, third-party petitioners seeking exemptions from the H-1B cap are companies that have contracts with qualifying federal agencies (or other qualifying institutions) which require the placement of professionals on-site at the particular agency. The H-1B employees generally perform work directly related to the purposes of the particular qualifying federal agency or entity and thus may qualify for an exemption to the H-1B cap. However, qualifying third-party employment can occur in a variety of other ways. The following non-exhaustive list of examples is provided to assist adjudicators in determining cap exemption eligibility.

Example 1: Company A, a for-profit consulting firm that would not otherwise be a qualifying institution, files an H-1B petition on behalf of an employee working directly for the firm. The H-1B petition describes the alien beneficiary's job duties, which will be performed on-site at a qualifying governmental research organization pursuant to a joint-agreement between the two entities. Company A submits evidence in support of its H-1B petition demonstrating that the alien beneficiary will be working on a research project performing duties similar to those performed by actual employees of the governmental research organization in furtherance of the qualifying entity's mission. If the alien beneficiary was sponsored directly by the government research organization, he or she would clearly qualify for the H-1B cap exemption.

Q: Would the alien beneficiary qualify for the H-1B exemption?

A: Yes. In this case, the alien beneficiary would be exempt from the H-1B cap because the alien beneficiary will perform research duties that would or could otherwise be performed by employees of the qualifying institution, in furtherance of the qualifying institution's primary mission.

[63] See S. Rep. No. 106-260 (April 11, 2000) [re. S. 2045, the bill that was enacted into AC21] providing that individuals should be considered cap exempt "... by virtue of what they are doing" and not simply by reference to the identity of the petitioning employer.

Example 2: Company B, a for-profit hospital and research center that would not otherwise be a qualifying institution, files an H-1B petition on behalf of a renowned Oncologist who will be a direct employee of the hospital and whose duties will consist of clinical treatment of cancer patients and laboratory research on a new medication to treat liver cancer. Company B maintains a relationship with a qualifying non-profit research organization dedicated to finding a cure for liver cancer, whereby Company B occasionally provides resources and data in exchange for access to the non-profit's national database on protocols for treating liver cancer. Company B's new Oncologist will spend 55% (i.e., a majority) of her time working on-site at the non-profit research organization conducting research and laboratory experiments on the new medication to treat liver cancer and accessing the national database. The Oncologist will be performing sophisticated research and laboratory experiments that are not normally conducted by employees of the non-profit research organization but that nonetheless directly and predominantly further the normal, primary, or essential purpose, mission, objectives or function of the nonprofit organization. Company B and the non-profit entity will collaborate on a joint paper publishing the research.

Q: Would the Oncologist qualify for an H-1B cap exemption based on this employment?

A: Yes. In this case, the Oncologist's work clearly furthers the overall mission of the qualifying non-profit research organization and benefits the United States The fact that Company B and the qualifying non-profit entity share a cooperative relationship helps establish a sufficient nexus between the Oncologist's work and the normal, primary, or essential purpose, mission, objectives or function of the non-profit organization. Further, the Oncologist will spend more than half of her time working physically on-site "at" the qualifying entity.

Example 3: A medical fellow in pediatrics has been employed at a qualifying non-profit university medical center for two years in H-1B status. At the end of the fellowship, the doctor will become a member of Company C, a private pediatrics practice group which has its primary offices within the university medical center and predominantly trains medical students and treats patients in the medical center. The doctor will be doing exactly the same work that he did during his fellowship, including remaining on the university medical center's faculty, but for reasons related to hospital billing practices and medial malpractice insurance requirements, his technical, and therefore petitioning, employer will be the private pediatrics practice group.

Q: Would the doctor qualify for an H-1B cap exemption based on this employment?

A: Yes. In this case, the doctor would be exempt from the H-1B cap because the conditions of employment demonstrate that the doctor will be performing the same work that he performed while employed directly by the qualifying university medical center. Thus, the H-1B employment directly furthers the primary mission of the hospital because the doctor will remain on the university medical center's faculty, and will continue to educate and train its medical students and treat patients at the medical center.

Example 4: Company D, a for-profit market research firm that would not otherwise be a qualifying institution, files an H-1B petition on behalf of a direct employee. The H-1B petition states that the alien beneficiary will be conducting a specific kind of market research on-site at a qualifying University. In addition, the petition states that the University has a specialized research tool that can only be accessed from its facilities and that the alien beneficiary's research will be conducted for the benefit of the petitioner's clients and business, and not for the University.

Q: Would the alien beneficiary qualify for the H-1B exemption based on this employment?

A: No. In this case, the alien would not qualify for a cap exemption as he or she is only physically located "at" the qualifying institution and no nexus has been demonstrated between the work performed by the beneficiary and the normal purpose of the qualifying entity. The alien beneficiary will not perform work for the benefit of the qualifying institution, but rather for the for-profit firm.

2. Institution of Higher Education. The statute refers to the Higher Education Act of 1965[64] to define an Institution of Higher Education. Based on that definition, the regulations[65] define such an institution as an educational institution in any State that:

- admits as regular students only persons having a certificate of graduation from a school providing secondary education, or the recognized equivalent of such a certificate;
- is legally authorized within such State to provide a program of education beyond secondary education;
- provides an educational program for which the institution awards a bachelor's degree or provides not less than a 2-year program that is acceptable for full credit toward such a degree;
- is a public or other nonprofit institution; and
- is accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association, or if not so accredited, is an institution that has been granted preaccreditation status by such an agency or association that has been recognized by the Secretary for the granting of preaccreditation status, and the Secretary has determined that there is satisfactory assurance that the institution will meet the accreditation standards of such an agency or association within a reasonable time.

3. Related or affiliated nonprofit entity. USCIS uses the regulatory definition governing fee exemptions under ACWIA[66] to determine whether a petitioner is related or affiliated. In order to qualify as a cap exempt entity, the petitioner must demonstrate that the entity where the nonimmigrant alien will perform all or a portion of the job duties is an affiliated or related nonprofit entity (including but not limited to hospitals and medical or research institutions) by showing one of the following:

[64] 20 U.S.C. 1001(a).
[65] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(19)(iii)(C) and (iv).
[66] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(19)(iii)(B).

- The nonprofit entity is associated with an institution of higher education through shared ownership or control by the same board or federation;

- The nonprofit entity is operated by an institution of higher education; or

- The nonprofit entity is attached to an institution of higher education as a member, branch, cooperative, or subsidiary.

4. Nonprofit Research Organization or a Governmental Research Organization. USCIS also uses the definition used to determine fee exemptions to evaluate eligibility for this cap exemption.[67] Based on that definition:

- A nonprofit research organization is an organization that is primarily engaged in basic research and/or applied research.

- A governmental research organization is a United States Government entity whose primary mission is the performance or promotion of basic research and/or applied research.

- Basic research is general research to gain more comprehensive knowledge or understanding of the subject under study, without specific applications in mind. Basic research is also research that advances scientific know ledge, but does not have specific immediate commercial objectives although it may be in fields of present or potential commercial interest. It may include research and investigation in the sciences, social sciences, or humanities.

- Applied research is research to gain knowledge or understanding to determine the means by which a specific, recognized need may be met. Applied research includes investigations oriented to discovering new scientific knowledge that has specific commercial objectives with respect to products, processes, or services. It may include research and investigation in the sciences, social sciences, or humanities.

A non-profit organization described in section c and d above is defined as:

- A tax exempt organization under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, section 501(c)(3), (c)(4), or (c)(6) and
- Being approved as a tax exempt organization for research or educational purposes by the Internal Revenue Service.

5. Concurrent Employment of Certain Cap Exempt H-1Bs. An H-1B nonimmigrant employed "at" an institution of higher education or a related or affiliated nonprofit entity who has not been counted against the cap may accept concurrent H-1B employment with a cap-subject employer.

[67] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(19)(iii)(C).

The concurrent employer must file its own petition on behalf of the H-1B, but the beneficiary need not wait for approval of the petition in order to commence employment. If the cap exempt employment ceases, the H-1B then becomes subject to the cap unless he or she obtains new cap-exempt employment. This is because the statute applies the cap requirement upon new H-1B employment to an H-1B who "ceases to be employed" at the exempt entity. [68] The burden is on the potentially cap-subject concurrent petitioner to provide documentary evidence, such as an employment letter or recent paystubs from the previously approved cap-exempt petitioner to confirm that the H-1B employee continues to be employed at a cap-exempt entity or organization.

This provision does not apply to H-1Bs employed at governmental or nonprofit research organizations. Concurrent employment by such an H-1B is subject to the cap unless another basis for exemption exists, such as possession of a U.S Master's Degree.

C. Cap Exemption for Employment and Services Performed in the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands (CNMI) and Guam.

The Consolidated Natural Resources Act of 2008 (CNRA), Public Law 110-229, includes a provision exempting H-1B workers performing labor or services in the CNMI and Guam from the H-1B numerical limitation in section 214(g)(1)(A) of the INA (aka the "H-1B cap"). Upon the CNRA's implementation on November 28, 2009, H-1B workers in Guam and the CNMI are exempt from the statutory numerical limitation for H-1B classification from November 28, 2009 to December 31, 2014. See Section 6(b) of Public Law 94-241, as added by section 702 of the CNRA.

This H-1B cap exemption does not apply to any employment to be performed outside of the CNMI or Guam. As such, to qualify for this exemption, the petition must include a Labor Condition Application (LCA) for work locations in the CNMI and/or Guam only.

An H-1B worker granted H-1B status under this CNMI/Guam cap exemption who ceases to be employed in H-1B classification solely in the CNMI and/or Guam is subject to the H-1B cap. A subsequent petition filed for such an H-1B worker, i.e. a change of employer petition with a request for an extension of stay, requesting employment located outside of CNMI and/or Guam is subject to the H-1B cap.

D. Cap Exemption for Certain International Medical Graduates

Certain International Medical Graduates are cap exempt if they:

- Were admitted to the United States as a J-1 nonimmigrant physician in order to receive graduate medical training, and

[68] INA 214(g)(6).

- Receive a waiver of the two-year foreign residence requirement in order to practice primary care or specialty care medicine in a medically underserved area or for an interested federal or state agency (a. k. a. J-1 Conrad waiver).[69]

NOTE: Not all J-1 nonimmigrants qualify for this exemption. The beneficiary must be a J-1 who received graduate medical education or training and who was granted a waiver of INA 212(e) to be employed for three years as a physician for the healthcare facility named in the approved waiver. Once the beneficiary receives the Conrad waiver and fulfills his or her three-year obligation, he or she is forever H-1B cap exempt.

E. U.S. Master's Degree or Higher

The first 20,000 petitions filed on behalf of beneficiaries who possess a master's degree or higher from a U.S. institution of higher education[70] are exempt from the H-1B cap. Once the 20,000 master's cap is reached, any employer seeking an H-1B nonimmigrant who possesses a U.S. master's or higher degree will be subject to the regular H-1B cap unless the alien is eligible for another exemption.

Officers must always apply all other cap exemption provisions first before applying the H-1B master's cap.

To qualify for a master's cap number, the following criteria must be met:

1. U.S. Master's or Higher Degree

The qualifying degree must be one for which a bachelor's degree in any field is a prerequisite to obtaining the "master's" degree or higher. The name of the degree is not dispositive. Some degrees are called "masters" degrees but are in fact the entry-level degree in a field. Other degrees are not called "masters" but are in fact beyond the entry-level degree in the field. So long as the degree being claimed as a master's is at least one level beyond the entry-level degree in the field, the exemption can be given.

2. Qualifying Institution

The master's degree (or higher) must be issued from a U.S. institution of higher education as defined in section 101(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965.[71]

F. Extensions of Stay

[69] INA 214(l)(2)(A).
[70] INA 214(g)(1)(C).
[71] Pub. Law 89-329, 20 U.S.C. 1001(a).

Any alien who has already been counted toward the H-1B cap shall not again be counted toward those limitations unless the alien would be eligible for a full six years of admission as an H-1B at the time the petition is filed.[72]

The H-1B seeking an extension is thus not subject to the H-1B cap if the alien was already counted towards the numerical limitation and either:

- Did not exhaust the six-year period of maximum admission and is now seeking an extension of stay or readmission in H-1B status for the remaining portion of the initial six-year period of admission; or

- Is eligible for extension of stay or readmission in H-1B status beyond the six year maximum period based on AC21, section 106 and 104(c).

G. H-1B "Remainder" Time

In some instances, an H-1B may be eligible for a new full six years of H-1B admission because he or she has been outside the United States for a year or more, but may also have not completed the previous full six year period of admission and thus be eligible to complete that period under the "recapture" policy discussed in Chapter 3.

In such a case, USCIS allows an alien in the situation described above to elect either to be re-admitted for the "remainder" of the initial six-year admission period without being subject to the H-1B cap (if previously counted), or else seek to be admitted as an H-1B alien subject to the H-1B cap for a new six-year period of admission.

Should the alien choose to complete the initial six-year period, he or she is eligible for a six-year period of admission minus the period of time that the alien previously spent in the United States in valid H-1B status. The burden is on the petitioner to demonstrate periods of absence from the United States.

For example, an alien who spent five years in the United States in H-1B status (from January 1, 1999 - December 31, 2004), and then remained outside the United States for all of 2005, could seek to be admitted in January 2006 for the "remainder" of the initial six-year period, i.e., a total of one year.

[72] INA 214(g)(7).

Chapter 5: Specific Petitioner Requirements

A. Labor Condition Application

A Labor Condition Application (LCA) must be submitted with nearly all H-1B petitions. The LCA is a statement filed with the Department of Labor (DOL) on Form ETA 9035 by a prospective H-1B employer certifying[73]:

- That the alien hired in a specialty occupation (or as a fashion model) will be paid at least the same wage as other similarly employed persons or the prevailing wage for the occupation in the area of employment;
- That the alien will be provided with working conditions which will have no adverse effect on other similarly employed persons;
- That no strike or lockout is in progress; and
- (If the employer is a "dependent employer" as defined in section 212(n)(3)(A) of the Act) that no U.S. worker has been or will be displaced as a result of the H-1B alien's employment.

Certain employers, such as willful violators and dependent employers must make additional attestations relating to the non-displacement of US workers.[74] A willful violator is an entity that DOL finds to have intentionally not complied with LCA attestations or other DOL requirements. An H-1B dependent employer is an employer:

- With 7 or more H-1Bs who has 25 or fewer full-time equivalent employees (FTE);
- With more than 12 H-1Bs who has 26-50 FTEs;
- With 15% of the workforce as H-1Bs who has 51 or more FTEs.

An LCA is not required for H-1Bs who will be working in a Department of Defense project. These petitions are discussed in more detail in Chapter 7.

An LCA may be valid for a period up to three years.[75]

The LCA, which may be a photocopy of the original, must be valid for the period of time requested for the petition. The dates of intended employment cannot extend outside the dates on the LCA. Multiple unnamed beneficiaries may be included on the LCA, however the petitioner must reference, by file number, all previously approved petitions that used the same LCA. Once a slot on the LCA has been used for a specific alien, that slot cannot be used for another alien even if the original alien leaves the job permanently before the LCA has expired.

[73] INA 212(n)(1).
[74] 20 CFR 655.736-739.
[75] 20 CFR 655, Subpart H.

If the alien will be performing the same duties at another location for the same employer a single LCA can be filed if:

- The LCA is filed with the DOL regional office having jurisdiction over the initial place of employment; and
- All places of employment are within the jurisdiction of a single DOL regional office.

B. Position Must be Specialty Occupation

Certification of an LCA by DOL does not mean that the position is a specialty occupation. Only USCIS can determine whether the position meets the criteria for a specialty occupation.

1. Definition. A specialty occupation is an occupation that requires--

- theoretical and practical application of a body of highly specialized knowledge, and
- attainment of a bachelor's or higher degree in the specific specialty (or its equivalent) as a minimum requirement for entry into the occupation in the United States.[76]

A specialty occupation is further defined in regulations as:

> ...an occupation which requires theoretical and practical application of a body of highly specialized knowledge in [such] fields of human endeavor including, but not limited to, architecture, engineering, mathematics, physical sciences, social sciences, medicine and health, education, business specialties, accounting, law, theology, and the arts, and which requires the attainment of a bachelor's degree or higher in a specific specialty, or its equivalent, as a minimum for entry into the occupation in the United States.[77]

2. Deciding If the Proposed Employment Is a Specialty Occupation. In order to correctly adjudicate a case, it is necessary to consider all the facts surrounding the petition, to include:

- the nature of the petitioner's business/industry practice,
- a detailed description of the duties to be performed, and
- salary (both offered to the beneficiary and typical for the industry).

[76] INA 214(h)(i)(1).
[77] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(ii).

USCIS recognizes the U.S. Department of Labor's Occupational Outlook Handbook (OOH) as an authoritative source on the duties and educational requirements of the wide variety of occupations that it addresses. However, it is important to note that:

- occupations are rapidly evolving and job titles themselves are often changing; and
- the decision on whether the position qualifies as a specialty occupation should not to be influenced by a single factor, such as the job title or salary.

3. Specialty Occupation Criteria. The regulations also require that the position meet at least one of the following criteria[78]:

(a) A baccalaureate or higher degree or its equivalent is normally the minimum requirement for entry into the particular position;

(b) The degree requirement is common to the industry in parallel positions among similar organizations or, in the alternative, an employer may show that its particular position is so complex or unique that it can be performed only by an individual with a degree;

(c) The employer normally requires a degree or its equivalent for the position; or

(d) The nature of the duties is so specialized and complex that the knowledge required to perform the duties is usually associated with the attainment of a baccalaureate or higher degree.

The degree must be in a specific specialty that is directly related to the H-1B position, unless the petitioner demonstrates that alternative degrees apply to the position.

It is important not to rely only upon the position title. In order to determine if the position being sought is a specialty occupation, the duties must be evaluated. The understanding of the duties and how the position fits into the petitioner's organization will determine whether the position is a specialty occupation. The duties of the position should be evaluated against the four criteria listed above.

4. Scenarios. The following scenarios are meant to be illustrative examples for each of the above criteria, but are not exhaustive.

(a) Bachelor's Degree Normally Required: In order to meet this standard, the position offered must normally require a person with at least a bachelor's degree in a related field of study to perform the duties. Officers may reference the OOH to ascertain the normal educational and/or experience requirements of positions and should try to match the proffered duties, not just the title of the occupation.

[78] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A).

For example, the petitioner is a physical therapy provider and is seeking a physical therapist. The OOH indicates that a post-baccalaureate degree from an accredited physical therapy program is required for entry into the profession. Therefore, the position would normally require a person with at least a bachelor's degree in a related field of study.

(b) Industry Standard: Common to the Industry

In order to meet this requirement, the petitioner must show that the degree requirement is an industry standard. The petitioner must present evidence to show that the position offered is widely known in the petitioner's industry to require a person with at least a bachelor's degree in a specific field of study or its equivalent to perform the duties. This involved referring to companies of similar size and scope to the petitioner within the given industry.

In certain professions, it will be very clear that this is the case. For example, a bachelor's degree in Architecture is normally the minimum prerequisite for an architect position within an architectural firm. The petitioner could submit copies of job postings for the same position in similarly sized companies within the same industry to establish this. These job postings would need to show that the minimum educational requirement for the position is a bachelor's degree in the related field of study. Besides job postings, officers may consider other evidence such as a letter from an industry-related professional attesting that a bachelor's degree in a specific specialty is a requirement for entry into the field. Officers should be mindful that a letter is not usually sufficient if the writers' statements do not specify that the degree must be in a specific specialty and are not accompanied by additional documentary evidence.

(c) So Complex or Unique:

In the alternative, a petitioner can show that a bachelor's degree is required by showing that the particular position is so complex or unique that it can only be performed by an individual with a degree in a specific specialty.

(d) Petitioner's Historical Requirements:

In order to show that a degree is required through this method, the petitioner must demonstrate that historically the person(s) who have performed the duties of the position for the petitioner have possessed at least a bachelor's degree in a specific field of study. A petitioner may submit evidence that previous employees in the position held a bachelor's degree in a related field of study.

The critical element is not the title of the position or an employer's self-imposed standards, but whether the position or the duties actually require the theoretical and practical application of a body of highly specialized knowledge and the attainment of a bachelor's degree in the specific specialty as the minimum for entry into the occupation as required by the INA.[79] Such evidence may include, but not limited to, resumes or previous posting for this particular position.

(e) Nature of Duties:

Finally, a petitioner may demonstrate that a degree is required for the position by showing that the position are so specialized and complex that only an individual with the minimum of a bachelor's degree in a specific field of study could do the job. A petitioner's statement alone is not sufficient to meet the criterion under this prong. There must be independent documentation to corroborate a petitioner's claim.[80]

C. Employer-Employee Relationship

1. US Employer Required. Only a US "employer" may petition for an H-1B worker. A U.S. employer is defined as a person, firm, corporation, or other association, or organization within the United States which meets all of the following criteria:

- Engages a person to work within the United States;
- Has or will have an employer-employee relationship with the H-1B beneficiary, as indicated by the fact that it may hire, pay, fire, supervise, or otherwise control the work of any such employee; and
- Has an Internal Revenue Service Tax Identification Number.[81]

When meeting the second criterion, above, a U.S. employer must establish that a valid employer-employee relationship will exist between the U.S. employer and the beneficiary throughout the requested H-IB validity period. Establishing an employer-employee relationship can sometimes be problematic in petitions filed by what may appear to be independent contractors, self-employed beneficiaries, or in cases where beneficiaries are placed at third-party worksites. The placement of the beneficiary/employee at a worksite that is not operated by the petitioner/employer (third-party placement), which is common in some industries, generally makes it more difficult to assess whether the requisite employer-employee relationship exists.

2. U.S. Agents and the Employer Requirement. While every H-1B must have a U.S. Employer, the petition itself can be filed by an agent, who may or may not be the actual employer of the H-1B. Where the agent is not the employer, the petition must identify each potential U.S. employer. Agents may file H-1B petitions where:

[80] Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm. 1998) (citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm. 1972)).

- The workers are traditionally self-employed;
- The workers traditionally use agents to arrange short term employment on their behalf with numerous employers; or
- A foreign employer has authorized the agent to act on its behalf.[82]

A petition filed by an agent must include an itinerary of definite employment.

Where the agent is not the actual employer, it may be representing multiple employers and the beneficiary. If this is the case, then the petition must include a complete itinerary that specifies the dates of each service/engagement, the names and addresses of the actual employers, and the names and addresses of the locations where the beneficiary will be working.

3. Demonstrating the Employer-Employee Relationship. Many factors affect whether a valid employer-employee relationship exists or will exist between the United States employer and the beneficiary throughout the requested H-1B validity period. Engaging a person to work in the United States is more than the act of paying the wage or placing that person on the payroll. In considering whether or not there is a valid "employer-employee relationship" for H-1B purposes, USCIS must determine if the employer has a sufficient level of control over the employee. An employer-employee relationship hinges on the overarching right to control the manner and means by which the product is accomplished. When examining the factors relevant to this inquiry, however, USCIS must assess and weigh the actual factor itself as it exists or will exist and not the claimed employer's right to influence or change that factor, unless specifically provided for by the common-law test. For example, while the assignment of additional projects is dependent on who has the right to assign them, it is the actual source of the instrumentalities and tools that must be examined, not who has the right to provide the tools required to complete an assigned project.

The following factors are relevant to this determination. No one factor is decisive.

Question 1: Does the petitioner supervise the beneficiary and is such supervision off-site or on-site?

Question 2: If the supervision is off-site, how does the petitioner maintain such supervision, e.g., on-site supervision by an employee of the petitioner, weekly calls, reporting back to main office routinely, or site visits by the petitioner?

Question 3: Does the petitioner have the right to control the work of the beneficiary on a day-to-day basis if such control is required?

Question 4: Does the petitioner provide the tools or instrumentalities needed for the beneficiary to perform the duties of employment?

Question 5: Does the petitioner hire, pay, and have the ability to fire the beneficiary?

Question 6: Does the petitioner evaluate the work-product of the beneficiary, i.e. progress/performance reviews?

[82] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(2)(i)(F)(1).

Question 7: Does the petitioner claim the beneficiary for tax purposes?

Question 8: Does the petitioner provide the beneficiary any type of employee benefits?

Question 9: Does the beneficiary use proprietary information of the petitioner in order to perform the duties of employment?

Question 10: Does the beneficiary produce an end-product that is directly linked to the petitioner's line of business?

Question 11: Does the petitioner have the ability to control the manner and means in which the work product of the beneficiary is accomplished?

The common law is flexible about how these factors are to be weighed. The petitioner will have met the relationship test, if, in the totality of the circumstances, a petitioner is able to present evidence to establish its control over the beneficiary's employment. In assessing the requisite degree of control, the officer should be mindful of the nature of the petitioner's business and the type of work the beneficiary will perform. The petitioner must also be able to establish that its control of the beneficiary's work will continue to exist throughout the duration of the beneficiary's employment term with the petitioner.

4. Documentation to Establish the Employer-Employee Relationship.

(a) Initial Petition. The petitioner must clearly show that an employer-employee relationship will exist between the US employer and the beneficiary, and that the employer has the right to control the beneficiary's work, including the ability to hire, fire and supervise the beneficiary. The employer must also be responsible for the overall direction of the beneficiary's work.[83] The petition must establish that the above elements will continue to exist throughout the duration of the requested H-1B validity period. The petitioner can demonstrate an employer-employee relationship by providing a combination of the following or similar types of evidence:

- A complete itinerary of services or engagements that specifies the dates of each service or engagement, the names and addresses of the actual employers, and the names and addresses of the establishment, venues, or locations where the services will be performed for the period of time requested;

- Copy of signed Employment Agreement between the petitioner and beneficiary detailing the terms and conditions of employment;

- Copy of an employment offer letter that clearly describes the nature of the employer-employee relationship and the services to be performed by the beneficiary;

- Copy of relevant portions of valid contracts between the petitioner and a client (in which the petitioner has entered into a business agreement for which the petitioner's employees will be utilized) that establishes that while the petitioner's employees are placed at the third-party worksite, the petitioner will continue to have the right to control its employees;

- Copies of signed contractual agreements, statements of work, work orders, service agreements, and letters between the petitioner and the authorized officials of the ultimate end-client companies where the work will actually be performed by the beneficiary, which provide information such as a detailed description of the duties the beneficiary will perform, the qualifications that are required to perform the job duties, salary or wages paid, hours worked, benefits, a brief description of who will supervise the beneficiary and their duties, and any other related evidence;

- Copy of position description or any other documentation that describes the skills required to perform the job offered, the source of the instrumentalities and tools needed to perform the job, the product to be developed or the service to be provided, the location where the beneficiary will perform the duties, the duration of the relationship between the petitioner and beneficiary, whether the petitioner has the right to assign additional duties, the extent of petitioner's discretion over when and how long t he beneficiary will work, the method of payment, the petitioner's role in paying and hiring assistants to be utilized by the beneficiary, whether the work to be performed is part of the regular business of the petitioner, the provision of employee benefits, and the tax treatment of the beneficiary in relation to the petitioner;

- A description of the performance review process; and/or

- Copy of petitioner's organizational chart, demonstrating beneficiary's supervisory chain.

(b) Extension Petitions.[84] An H-1B petitioner seeking to extend H-1B employment for a beneficiary must continue to establish that a valid employer-employee relationship exists. The petitioner can do so by providing evidence that the US employer continues to have the right to control the work of the beneficiary, as described above. The petitioner may also include a combination of the following or similar evidence to document that it maintained a valid employer-employee relationship with the beneficiary throughout the initial H-1B status approval period:

- Copies of the beneficiary's pay records (leave and earnings statements, and pay stubs, etc.) for the period of the previously approved H-1B status;

- Copies of the beneficiary's payroll summaries and/or Form W-2s, evidencing wages paid to the beneficiary during the period of previously approved H-1B status;

- Copy of Time Sheets during the period of previously approved H-1B status;

[84] In this context, an extension petition refers to a petition filed by the same petitioner to extend H-1B status without a material change in the terms of employment.

- Copy of prior years' work schedules;

- Documentary examples of work product created or produced by the beneficiary for the past H-1B validity period, (i.e., copies of: business plans, reports, presentations, evaluations, recommendations, critical reviews, promotional materials, designs, blueprints, newspaper articles, web-site text, news copy, photographs of prototypes, etc.). Note: The materials must clearly substantiate the author and date created;

- Copy of dated performance review(s); and/or

- Copy of any employment history records, including but not limited to, documentation showing date of hire, dates of job changes, i.e. promotions, demotions, transfers, layoffs, and pay changes with effective dates.

If the determination is made while adjudicating the extension petition that the petitioner failed to maintain a valid employer-employee relationship with the beneficiary throughout the initial approval period, or violated any other terms of its prior H-1B petition, the extension petition may be denied unless there is a compelling reason to approve the new petition (e.g., the petitioner is able to demonstrate that it did not meet all the terms and conditions through no fault of its own). Such a limited exception will be made solely on a case-by-case basis.

5. Examples of Employee-Employer Scenarios. The following are some examples of situations that present a valid employer-employee relationship:

(a) Traditional Employment:

The beneficiary works at an office location owned/leased by the petitioner, the beneficiary reports directly to the petitioner on a daily basis, the petitioner sets the work schedule of the beneficiary, the beneficiary uses the petitioner's tools/instrumentalities to perform the duties of employment, and the petitioner directly reviews the work-product of the beneficiary. The petitioner claims the beneficiary for tax purposes and provides medical benefits to the beneficiary.

(b) Temporary/Occasional Off-Site Employment

The petitioner is an accounting firm with numerous clients. The beneficiary is an accountant. The beneficiary is required to travel to different client sites for auditing purposes. In performing such audits, the beneficiary must use established firm practices. If the beneficiary travels to an off-site location outside the geographic location of the employer to perform an audit, the petitioner provides food and lodging costs to the beneficiary. The beneficiary reports to a centralized office when not performing audits for clients and has an assigned office space. The beneficiary is paid by the petitioner and receives employee benefits from the petitioner.

(c) Long-Term/Permanent Off-Site Employment

The petitioner is an architectural firm and the beneficiary is an architect. The petitioner has a contract with a client to build a structure in a location out of state from the petitioner's main offices. The petitioner will place its architects and other staff at the off-site location while the project is being completed. The contract between the petitioner and client states that the petitioner will manage its employees at the off-site location. The petitioner provides the instruments and tools used to complete the project, the beneficiary reports directly to the petitioner for assignments, and progress reviews of the beneficiary are completed by the petitioner. The underlying contract states that the petitioner has the right to ultimate control of the beneficiary's work.

(d) Long Term Placement at a Third-Party Work Site

The petitioner is a computer software development company which has contracted with another, unrelated company to develop an in-house computer program to track its merchandise, using the petitioner's proprietary software and expertise. In order to complete this project, petitioner has contracted to place software engineers at the client's main warehouse where they will develop a computer system for the client using the petitioner's software designs. The beneficiary is a software engineer who has been offered employment to fulfill the needs of the contract in place between the petitioner and the client. The beneficiary performs his duties at the client company's facility. While the beneficiary is at the client company's facility, the beneficiary reports weekly to a manager who is employed by the petitioner. The beneficiary is paid by the petitioner and receives employee benefits from the petitioner.

The following are examples of scenarios that do not depict a valid employer-employee relationship:

(a) Self-Employed Beneficiaries

The petitioner is a fashion merchandising company that is owned by the beneficiary. The beneficiary is a fashion analyst. The beneficiary is the sole operator, manager, and employee of the petitioning company. The beneficiary cannot be fired by the petitioning company. There is no outside entity which can exercise control over the beneficiary. The petitioner has not provided evidence that that the company, and not the beneficiary herself, will be controlling her work.

(b) Independent Contractors

The beneficiary is a sales representative. The petitioner is a company that designs and manufactures skis. The beneficiary sells these skis for the petitioner and works on commission. The beneficiary also sells skis for other companies that design and manufacture skis that are independent of the petitioner. The petitioner does not claim the beneficiary as an employee for tax purposes. The petitioner does not control when, where, or how the beneficiary sells its or any other manufacturer's products. The petitioner does not set the work schedule of the beneficiary and does not conduct performance reviews of the beneficiary.

(c) Third-Party Placement

The petitioner is a computer consulting company. The petitioner has contracts with numerous outside companies in which it supplies these companies with employees to fulfill specific staffing needs. The specific positions are not outlined in the contract between the petitioner and the third-party company but are staffed on an as-needed basis.

The beneficiary is a computer analyst. The beneficiary has been assigned to work for the third-party company to fill a core position to maintain the third-party company's payroll. Once placed at the client company, the beneficiary reports to a manager who works for the third-party company. The beneficiary does not report to the petitioner for work assignments, and all work assignments are determined by the third-party company.

The petitioner does not control how the beneficiary will complete daily tasks, and no propriety information of the petitioner is used by the beneficiary to complete any work assignments. The beneficiary's end-product, the payroll, is not in any way related to the petitioner's line of business, which is computer consulting. The beneficiary's progress reviews are completed by the client company, not the petitioner.

In the following example dealing with filing by an agent, the petitioner is not the employer, but because there exists a US employer, the petition is approvable:

The petitioner is a reputable modeling agency that books models for various modeling jobs at different venues to include fashion houses and photo shoots. The beneficiary is a distinguished runway model. The petitioner and beneficiary have a contract between one another that includes such terms as to how the agency will advise, counsel, and promote the model for fashion runway shows. The contract between the petitioner and beneficiary states that the petitioner will receive a percentage of the beneficiary's fees when the beneficiary is booked for a runway show. When the beneficiary is booked for a runway show, the beneficiary can negotiate pay with the fashion house. The fashion house (actual employer) controls when, where, and how the model will perform her duties while engaged in the runway shows for the fashion house.

D. Itinerary Requirement

In all cases, if the beneficiary is to be placed at more than one work location to perform services, then the petitioner must submit an itinerary with the dates and locations of the services to be performed.[85] If the petition is filed by an agent who is the employer then the itinerary must specify the dates of each service or engagement, the names and addresses of the actual employers, and the names and addresses of the establishment, venues, or locations where the services will be performed for the period of time requested.[86] The itinerary assists USCIS in determining that the petitioner has concrete plans in place for a particular beneficiary, that the beneficiary is performing duties in a specialty occupation, and that the beneficiary is not being "benched" without pay between assignments.

D. Other Issues Relating to the Petitioner

1. Assessing the Needs of the Petitioner for the Services of the Beneficiary. In general, officers should not accept that a petitioner best knows its business plans and the staff it needs to grow its business, especially where a position being requested aligns with a business plan. A petitioner that might on the surface appear not to have a need for a particular position because of its small size or relative newness might in fact have a critical need for that position in order to grow. The petitioner, however, must meet its burden of showing that the position is consistent both with its current operations and its business plan for the future.

This issue is particularly common in cases involving petitions filed by small businesses for aliens with professional skills not normally associated with persons employed in such a business (e.g., a petition for an accountant filed by an auto repair business or restaurant). The fact that a petitions such as this is filed by a relative or family friend is cause for further investigation in order to ensure that the petition was not filed merely as an accommodation to the beneficiary. The burden of proof falls on the petitioner to demonstrate the need for such an employee.

After giving proper deference to the petitioner's business plan and legitimate operating needs, unless you are satisfied that a legitimate need exists, such a petition may be denied because the petitioner has failed to demonstrate that the beneficiary will be employed in a qualifying specialty occupation.

2. Determining the Petitioner's Ability to Pay the Required Wage. This issue, like the preceding one, is most commonly associated with small enterprises which do not necessarily have the assets required to pay the salary guaranteed in the petition. Such a petition may be an accommodation to a relative or friend who will seek other employment or there may be an agreement to work for lower wages. It is not necessary that complete financial data be submitted with every H-1B petition. However, if in the discretion of the adjudicating officer the financial condition of the petitioner is so questionable as to call into question whether the petitioner really intends to employ the alien as claimed, evidence of financial ability may be requested. This is because the financial standing of the petitioner, when taken in consideration with other factors, may be indication that the petition is an accommodation and not a valid job offer. Other factors that may be examined include, but are not limited to, the nature of the petitioner's business, the relationship between the beneficiary and the owners/officers of the petitioning entity, and the petitioner's immigration history.

[86] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(2)(i)(F).

3. Payment of Return Transportation Costs. If the H-1B employer terminates the H-1B employee before the validity of the petition approval expires, the employer is liable for the costs of return transportation to the H-1B employee's home country.[87] USCIS does not enforce this provision. Rather, a terminated employee who does not receive return transportation home has a cause of action against the former employer and may file suit for that amount.

[87] INA 214(c)(5)(A).

Chapter 6: Specific Beneficiary Requirements

The H-1B beneficiary must be qualified to engage in the specialty occupation. In order to establish this qualification, one of the following must be submitted showing that the beneficiary possesses the minimum requirements for entry into the field:

- A U.S. bachelor's degree;
- A foreign degree equivalent to a U.S. bachelor's degree;
- An unrestricted state license or other authorization allowing immediate employment in the field from the State; or
- Education, training, or experience equivalent to the training a degree would provide. [88]

A. Bachelor's Degree or Equivalent

In order to qualify for H-1B, the petitioner must demonstrate that the beneficiary possesses a bachelor's degree or its equivalent. The degree can be either from a U.S. institution, a foreign institution if that degree is the equivalent of a U.S. degree. Alternatively, the beneficiary may possess, in lieu of a degree, education, training, or experience (or some combination of the three) that is the equivalent of the training that would normally be the result of having acquired the actual degree.

1. US Bachelor's Degree. If the degree is from a US institution, as long as the degree is styled as a bachelor's degree, it can meet the degree requirement. The fact that the degree may have been earned in less than four years (or more than for years) is not relevant. However, the degree must be for a field of study relevant to the field in which the H-1B job is being filled. For example, a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering for an H-1B position involving accounting would not meet the requirement. If the relation of the bachelor's degree to the H-1B specialty occupation is not immediately apparent, transcripts may be required to demonstrate how the degree meets the requirements for the profession.

2. Foreign Degree.

(a) Degree Evaluation Required

A foreign degree submitted to meet the bachelor's degree or equivalent requirement must be submitted with an evaluation from a degree evaluation service.

[88] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(C).

USCIS officers may favorably consider a credentials evaluation performed by an independent credentials evaluator who has provided a credible, logical and well-documented case for such an equivalency determination that is based solely on the alien's foreign degree(s).

USCIS officers should consider the opinions rendered by an educational credentials evaluator in conjunction with a review of the alien's relevant educational credentials. The record must contain all of the alien's credentials which were analyzed in the evaluation and, if in a foreign language, a certified English translation.[89] Also, officers should carefully analyze both the evaluation and the alien's credentials to determine whether they are factually consistent, including the field in which the alien received a degree. USCIS officers may also consider other available credible resource material regarding the equivalency of the educational credentials to college degrees obtained in the U.S., such as the Electronic Database for Global Education (EDGE) created by the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers (AACRAO) (discussed below). Opinions rendered that are merely conclusory and do not provide a credible basis for the evaluator's opinions are not persuasive.

It is important for USCIS officers to remember that any educational credentials evaluation is expert testimony that may, in the officer's discretion, be used as an advisory opinion.[90] However, USCIS officers are ultimately responsible for making the final determination regarding an alien's eligibility for the benefit sought.[91] When an opinion is not in accord with other information or is in any way questionable, USCIS is not required to accept or may give less weight to that opinion.[92] Some factors that may call into question the reliability or credibility of an educational evaluation include:

- Reliance on certificates or diplomas from non-accredited schools or non-degree-granting institutions such as commercial technical schools or professional associations.

- When two or more evaluations have been submitted, there may be inconsistencies between the analyses or the conclusions reached by the different evaluators. It is incumbent upon the petitioner to resolve any material inconsistencies in the record by independent objective evidence, and attempts to explain or reconcile such inconsistencies, absent competent objective evidence pointing to where the truth, in fact, lies, will not suffice.[93]

- Factual inconsistencies between the evaluation and the alien's educational documents.

(b) Description and Appropriate Uses of EDGE

EDGE was created by AACRAO. AACRAO is a nonprofit, voluntary, professional association of thousands of higher education admissions and registration professionals who represent thousands of institutions in dozens of countries.[94] Its mission is to provide professional development, guidelines and voluntary standards to be used by higher education officials regarding the best practices in records management, admissions, enrollment management, administrative information technology, and student services.

EDGE is a web-based resource for the evaluation of foreign educational credentials. Authors for EDGE must follow established procedures working through AACRAO's National Council on the Evaluation of Foreign Educational Credentials.[95] This established process is subject to final review by the entire Council, a form of peer-review.[96]

AACRAO is a not for profit organization that provides an impartial, objective source and thus is one of the sources USCIS officers can consider when adjudicating degree equivalency cases. EDGE is available to the general public for a fee.

EDGE is a relevant resource where eligibility rests on whether the alien has a foreign degree that is equivalent to a U.S. bachelor's degree, or advanced degree or to determine the amount of education if it is at issue. For example, an evaluation may be necessary to determine whether the alien possesses two years of college required by the labor certification. The requirement of a particular amount or type of education may derive from the statute and regulation or the job requirements stated on the labor certification. USCIS officers should refer to relevant legal authority and PM sections on eligibility for skilled workers, professionals and members of the professions holding an advanced degree under INA 203(b)(3) and 203(b)(2).

EDGE is a useful tool where the petitioner submits an evaluation that is inconsistent with other evaluations in the record or legal authority which confirms that a bachelor's degree requires four years of study.[97] EDGE is also useful where the petitioner submits an evaluation that is supported by irrelevant source material. Some examples of irrelevant source materials are listed below.

EDGE can also facilitate fraud prevention by enabling USCIS to determine when credentials and degrees have been misrepresented or fraudulently provided by the petitioner or alien. For example, EDGE provides links to fake university alert websites and includes samples of legitimate diplomas.

EDGE may be inconsistent with an evaluation in the record. To the extent that the EDGE information casts doubt regarding whether the beneficiary's foreign education is qualifying, the EDGE information is to be considered derogatory information that USCIS officers must provide to the petitioner.[98] Specifically, USCIS officers should print a copy of the information contained in EDGE and incorporate that information into the record of proceeding. USCIS officers must advise the petitioner of the information in EDGE, provide a copy, and afford the petitioner an opportunity to rebut the information in EDGE. The petitioner's response must resolve any inconsistencies in the record by independent objective evidence.[99] As EDGE is a peer-reviewed publication, any rebuttal of the information in EDGE should also come from a credible source.

USCIS officers may consult EDGE in any situation if the USCIS officer feels EDGE can resolve discovered discrepancies. USCIS officers may also consult EDGE to provide clarification regarding the equivalency of the alien's foreign degree absent the provision of a foreign education credential evaluation by the petitioner. That said, it is important to note that consulting EDGE is not necessary in every case. For example:

- Petitioners may submit conclusive documentary evidence in the form of transcripts showing the alien has a four-year foreign bachelor's degree from an accredited university accompanied by a credible and well supported credentials evaluation that the foreign degree is equivalent to a U.S. bachelor's degree.

- The petitioner may submit an evaluation that is credible but does not establish the alien's eligibility. For example, an evaluation that concludes that the alien has the equivalent of a bachelor's degree through a combination of three years of education towards a bachelor's degree and experience cannot establish eligibility as a professional or a member of the professions holding an advanced degree. Such an evaluation may cite 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(D), which allows for the consideration of work experience in determining whether the alien holds the equivalent of a U.S. bachelor's degree in non-immigrant petitions for H-1B visas. However, 8 CFR 204.5 does not contain a similar provision for immigrant visa petitions.

- An evaluation that is inconsistent with the alien's diploma or transcript is not credible on its face and USCIS officers may require the petitioner to resolve any such inconsistency with objective evidence.[100] An example would be where the evaluation states that the beneficiary has a degree in computer science but the transcript reflects no computer science courses. Another example would be where the transcripts clearly show only three years of study but the evaluator claims the beneficiary studied longer at that institution.

(c) Less Probative Sources of Information

[98] 8 CFR 103.2(b)(16).
[99] See Matter of Ho 19 I&N Dec. 582, 591-92 (BIA 1988).
[100] See Matter of Ho, 19 I&N Dec. 582, 591-92 (BIA 1988).

There are varying forms of evidence petitioners submit to support the claims of the beneficiary's foreign degree equivalency to a U.S. degree. Each piece of evidence carries a certain amount of evidentiary weight in immigration proceedings. The standard of proof in all Form I-140 employment-based cases is the preponderance of the evidence standard. Above, we have discussed useful sources of probative information. Below we list forms of evidence that are not useful to determine a foreign degree's equivalency to a U.S. degree.

United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) - Educational evaluations may reference as exhibits additional correspondence and research regarding educational equivalency, including excerpts from the 1993 UNESCO document regarding recognition of foreign educational qualifications. The UNESCO document, however, relates to admission to graduate school and training programs and eligibility to practice in a profession. More significantly, the UNESCO document does not define "comparable qualifications" that should be recognized. Ultimately, USCIS officers should determine whether the alien's degree is, in fact, the foreign equivalent of a U.S. bachelor's degree. The UNESCO document does not address this issue and, thus, is not a useful document.

Credit Hours vs. Contact Hours - Educational evaluations may argue that the foreign educational system works on contact hours and that the amount of completed contact hours is equivalent to the number of credit hours required for completion of a U.S. bachelor's degree. Contact hours are the hours spent in the classroom with an instructor. Contact hours may vary by country and are not equivalent to credit hours.

Credit hours are the amount of credits received for taking a course and include work performed outside the classroom. Typically, in the United States, a three-semester credit hour course meets three 50-minute sessions per week for fifteen weeks for a total of 45 sessions. U.S. students typically will complete 120 credit hours for a bachelor's degree. Some evaluators will argue that a student completing a three-year degree will have more "contact hours."

Carnegie Units - The "Carnegie Unit" was defined and accepted in 1909 as a theoretical measure to gauge education, and is used to measure the amount of time a student has studied a subject. The Carnegie Unit does not apply to higher education and, thus, is not a useful means for evaluating post-secondary education.

Bologna - The Bologna bachelor's degree, issued in several European countries, is (in most cases) a three-year freestanding degree designed to prepare students for further study or employment. Evaluators may cite Bologna degrees and argue that other three-year bachelor's degrees are equivalent to a four-year U.S. degree. An assessment of the Bologna Process concluded: "Even though the Bologna Process has resulted in shorter degree programs that are defined in terms of required credits and introduced a two-tiered (undergraduate/graduate) system, the new European bachelor's is still quite distinct from its U.S. counterpart."[101] Thus, comparisons to Bologna degrees are not useful in evaluating the equivalency of a foreign degree.

[101] See World Education News & Reviews ("WES"), "Evaluating the Bologna Degree in the U.S.," March/April 2004.

B. Unrestricted State License

If the beneficiary of the petition does not possess the required U.S. or foreign degree showing that he or she is qualified to perform services in a specialty occupation, this showing can still be made if the beneficiary possesses a state license to practice the specialty. The license must be issued by the state in which the employment will take place and must be a full and unrestricted license to engage in the specialty occupation. The license must enable the beneficiary to immediately engage (upon approval of the petition) in the specialty occupation.

The ability to demonstrate eligibility for a specialty occupation by showing a state license is separate from the requirement, discussed below, that the beneficiary possess a license where a state requires one to engage in the occupation.

C. Equivalency of Experience and Education

Another way the petitioner can demonstrate that the beneficiary is qualified to engage in the specialty occupation is by showing that he or she possesses experience, education, or training, or some combination of the three, that equates to the training that would have been provided through attainment of a bachelor's degree.[102] Where the petition is attempting to show that the beneficiary is qualified to engage in a specialty occupation by virtue of experience in the specialty, the petition must show that the beneficiary's expertise in the specialty has been recognized through "progressively responsible positions relating to the specialty."[103]

The need to show that the beneficiary is qualified for the specialty occupation through experience can arise in a variety of situations. For example, the beneficiary might possess a bachelor's degree in a field that is not related to the specialty occupation. Another is the case in which the beneficiary does not possess a bachelor's degree. In such a case the petitioner can attempt to demonstrate that the courses and other work the beneficiary has engaged in equate to the bachelor's degree that would be required to engage in the specialty occupation.

One of the most common situations an adjudicator will encounter is an H-1B petition filed for an alien in specialty occupation where the alien lacks a U.S. bachelor's degree. The regulations describe the kind and amount of experience which can be used to establish the equivalence of a degree. Three years of professional experience may be used to substitute for each year of college-level training.

The most critical aspect of this type of adjudication is deciding whether the quality of experience is at high enough level to qualify as "professional." Experience is generally documented through letters from past employers. Adjudicators should look for detailed, specific information that makes the qualitative determination possible.

[102] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(D).
[103] INA 214(h)(i)(2).

Also, as noted above, the experience in the field establishing the beneficiary's qualifications for the specialty occupation must be "progressive." Employer letters, resumes, and other documents relating to past employment should show a progression of job duties, responsibilities, projects, and other tasks from which the conclusion can reasonable be drawn that the beneficiary was advancing. While the beneficiary need not necessarily have been advancing on an organizational chart, an increase in the complexity, visibility, or other indicia of increasing importance of the beneficiary's work should be shown.

Foreign educational credentials, licenses and other forms of documentation are easier to evaluate than experience. The petitioner may establish from an authoritative source or from transcripts, certificates, or other such school records that the alien has college-level education. College-level training may have been acquired at a college or university or other academic institution which grants a degree, diploma, or certificate, such as a technical college. It may be useful to compare the beneficiary's age at completion and the duration of the course of study, with the average age of graduates of United States institutions offering similar programs as a factor in determining equivalency of education.

Specialized training may have been acquired through an apprenticeship program, employee-sponsored training courses, vocational training schools, or other commercial training facilities. The starting and ending dates of all training in the field must be shown. Training certificates and an outline or summary of the curriculum should be submitted.

Membership in a professional association alone is insufficient evidence of equivalency. An association which grants certification or registration in the profession should have an accrediting body which has standards for the profession, and which issues an official document to applicants verifying that they have been awarded professional credentials in the profession. The standards of the organization should be reviewed to ensure that bachelor's degree or higher, or its equivalent, is required for membership.

In suspect cases, overseas experience can be verified by the overseas DHS office. Such investigations should not be routinely requested, but can be used when all other avenues have been explored and there is still serious doubt about claimed experience.

(1) Unsolicited Evaluations.

An evaluation by an official who has authority to grant college-level credit at an accredited college or university with training and/or work experience in the profession can also be used to support an equivalency claim. USCIS does not require the alien to be enrolled in a program for college credit at the university in order to accept the evaluation of such an expert. However, the official must be formally involved with the college or university's official program for granting credit based on training and/or experience to have the required authority and expertise to make such evaluations. The evaluation may be done in the official's name as an individual, or as an authorized representative of the college or university. Any such evaluation should be given considerable weight in determining eligibility.

Results of recognized college-level equivalency examinations or special credit programs, such as the College Level Examination Program (CLEP), or Program on Noncollegiate Sponsored Instruction (PONSI) must be translated into college credits by an authoritative source in the particular program or by an authorized official from an accredited college or university, such as the registrar, in order for the results to be applied towards the degree requirement.

There are a number of outside organizations which evaluate educational credentials to determine degree equivalency. Some organizations may also provide an opinion on the equivalency of experience to education. It is important that the adjudicator distinguish between these two types of evaluations. The latter type of evaluation carries little weight. Although USCIS does not specifically recognize or accredit any sources of evaluations, foreign educational degree evaluations can be of assistance if they are thorough, well documented and specific in reaching an equivalency determination.

D. Professional Licensing

1. Licensed Occupations. If the occupation requires a state or local license for an individual to fully perform the duties of that occupation, the beneficiary must have the license prior to approval of the H-1B petition.[104]

The petitioner must provide a certified copy of the alien's valid State license, certification, or registration to practice the profession.

One source for determining whether a state requires a license for a particular occupation may be found at the following link:

BRB Publication's Public Record Resource Center

However, some states do not issue licenses until the worker presents, as a prerequisite, evidence of an approved H-1B petition on his or her behalf. Similarly, where a State requires an applicant for a license to present a social security number that is valid for employment but the alien cannot obtain a social security number until he or she has been granted H-1 B status.

Under such circumstances, the petitioner must establish that:

- the beneficiary is fully qualified to receive the State or local license,
- all educational, training, experience, and other substantive requirements must be met at the time of filing the petition.
- the beneficiary has in fact filed an application for such State or local license in accordance with the requirements of the State or local jurisdiction in advance of being granted employment authorization in the U.S.

USCIS will approve the petition for a one-year validity period, provided that the sole reason why the beneficiary does not possess such license is that the appropriate licensing authority will not grant such license to an alien absent evidence that the alien has been granted H-1B status.

Approval of such a petition does not constitute authorization by USCIS for the beneficiary to engage in any activities requiring such licensure. Any petition that requests an extension of stay (EOS) beyond the one-year validity period on behalf the beneficiary who has been granted H-1B status under this provisional measure must show that he/she has obtained the requisite license.

If the beneficiary has not obtained the license at the time the petition for extension is filed, such petition will be denied.

[104] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(v)(A).

2. Expiring Licenses. Licenses may include an expiration date. The license must be valid at the time of filing. Officers should realize that in many occupations, a beneficiary's permanent license, though not a limited license, will not be valid for the entire length of time requested by the petitioner on the I-129 petition. Licensed professionals must renew their full license every few years. The validity dates of an approved petition should not be limited simply because the beneficiary's permanent license will expire prior to the requested ending employment date.

Although the regulation[105] allows an H-1B petition to be valid for a period of up to three years, USCIS is not required to approve an H-1B petition for a period of three years when a temporary license or labor condition application (LCA) does not cover the entire three-year employment period requested in the petition. This situation should be distinguished from one in which a full and unrestricted license is subject to routine renewal.

3. Temporary Licenses / One-Year Limit. If a temporary license is available in the state of employment, and the beneficiary is allowed to fully perform the duties of the occupation without a permanent license, then the H-1B classification may be granted if all other requirements are met.

Note: Where licensure is required in an occupation, and the beneficiary has a temporary license, the petition may only be approved for a period of one year or for the period that the temporary license is valid, whichever is longer.

4. No License Required if Working Under Supervision of Licensed Professional. If the beneficiary can fully perform the duties of the proffered position without licensure because he or she will work under the supervision of a licensed professional as permitted by State law, then the validity period of the petition will not be limited despite the lack of a permanent license. In such cases, the director shall examine the nature of the duties and the level at which they are performed. If the facts demonstrate that the alien under supervision could fully perform the duties of the specialty occupation, the petition may be approved provided all other eligibility criteria have been established.

Example 1. A Medical Resident working under the supervision of a licensed physician in New York State is not required to have a license full the duration of his/her residency and thus, the validity of the petition should not be limited.

[105] 8 CFR214.2 (h)(9)(iii)(A)(1).

Note:

- Where a licensing authority issues a permit for all of the residents on the list, an individual permit is not issued to each medical resident.

- While the permit list is valid for one year, it is automatically renewed when the hospital requires an extension for the residents to obtain subsequent year(s) of training.

- Thus, the permit that is required for residents to work in Connecticut hospitals is not a license and the validity of the petition should not be limited.

Example 2. A Civil Engineer hired to design the construction of a public building generally requires a license; however, if the petitioner submits evidence to demonstrate (1) that the state where the beneficiary will work permits him or her to fully perform the duties of a civil engineer without a license provided they are performed under the supervision of a licensed engineer and (2) the beneficiary will in fact work as a civil engineer under the supervision of a licensed engineer, then no license is required for the beneficiary.

D. Other Issues Relating to the Beneficiary

1. Export Control Licenses. The Export Administration Regulations (EAR)[106] and the International Traffic in Arms Regulations[107] (ITAR) require U.S. persons to seek and receive authorization from the U.S. Government before releasing to foreign persons in the United States controlled technology or technical data. Under both the EAR and the ITAR, release of controlled technology or technical data to foreign persons in the United States--even by an employer--is deemed to be an export to that person's country or countries of nationality. A U.S. company petitioning for an H-1B worker must establish that the license requirement does not apply or else must seek and receive a license from the U.S. Government before it releases controlled technology or technical data to its H-1B nonimmigrant workers.[108]

All H-1B petitioners must complete Part 6 of the Form I-129 H-1B petition which documents the petitioner's compliance with the above requirement.

2. Multiple Petitions/Concurrent Employment. An H-1B beneficiary can work simultaneously for more than one employer provided each files a separate petition with its own LCA. Such separate petitions are not necessary if an agent serves as the sole petitioner.

[106] 15 CFR Parts 770-774.
[107] 22 CFR Parts 120-130.

3. Effect of Beneficiary's Intent to Remain Permanently (Dual Intent). For an H-1B nonimmigrant, the fact that a labor certification, permanent visa petition or adjustment of status application has been filed does not affect eligibility for nonimmigrant H-1B status[109].

4. Dual Intent for E-3s. E-3s do not have dual intent in the same sense that an H-1B does. The E-3 cannot simultaneously intend both to remain in the U.S. permanently (by pursuing an immigrant visa) and remain temporarily. However, E nonimmigrants do not have a foreign residence requirement. The failure to maintain a foreign residence, which might otherwise be an indicator that nonimmigrant intent is lacking, is not an issue for the E-3.

5. Ability to Engage in the Occupation Immediately upon Entry. The H-1B beneficiary must be eligible and able to engage in the occupation immediately upon admission or acquiring H-1B status. This issue often arises in occupations where a state license is required. If the beneficiary will require training or must take a licensing examination before commencing employment in a specialty occupation, the petition may not be approved.[110] The exception to this rule is the situation discussed above in which H-1B status is a prerequisite to licensing in a state.

Chapter 7: Special H-1B Situations

A. Physicians

1. General. Prior to 1991, physicians could only obtain H-1B status to teach or conduct research. Changes made to the statute in 1991[111] allowed physicians can qualify for H-1B status under limited circumstances. The statute[112] now allows an alien physician to qualify for H-1B status if he or she is:

- Coming pursuant to an invitation from a public or nonprofit private educational or research institution;
- To teach, conduct research, or both;
- At or for such institution. OR
- Is coming to practice as a physician if he or she has passed the appropriate licensing examination[113],
- Is competent in the English language or is a graduate of a US-accredited medical school.

As with all H-1B petitions, a certified LCA from the DOL is required.

2. Patient Care. A physician coming pursuant to an invitation from a research or educational institution may not engage in direct patient care unless it is incidental to the physician's teaching and research. If no patient care is involved, neither a license or authorization from the state needs to be submitted.

3. Clinical Physician. If the physician will be providing direct patient care, the petition must be accompanied by the following:

- A certified labor condition application;
- A license or other authorization required by the state or territory of intended employment to practice medicine if the physician will perform direct patient care and the state requires the license or authorization;

[112] INA 212(j)(2).
[113] Prior to the mid-1990's, the appropriate examination was Parts I and II of FLEX (Federation Licensing Examination) and Steps 1, 2, and 3 of the NBME (National Board of Medical Examiners). These examinations were replaced by Steps 1, 2, and 3 of the USMLE (U.S. Medical Licensing Examination).

- A full and unrestricted license to practice medicine in a foreign state or evidence that the beneficiary has graduated from a medical school in the United States or in a foreign state;

- Evidence that the alien has passed Steps 1, 2, and 3 of the USMLE unless the alien received his/her medical education in the United States; and

- Evidence that the alien has passed the English test given by the Educational Commission of Foreign Medical Graduates (ECFMG) to establish competency in oral and written English language unless the alien has received his/her medical education in Canada or the United States.

NOTE: Some medical residents, who are physicians in training, may not require a license in certain states, e.g., New York, when working under the supervision of a licensed professional. Evidence to support any claimed exemption from a medical license must be in the record. An officer must verify state regulations regarding exemption.

(a) Licensing Examination-FLEX no longer offered

For a clinical physician, the statute requires passage of the FLEX (Federation Licensing Examination) or an equivalent examination as determined by the Secretary of Health and Human Services (HHS). The FLEX is no longer offered. HHS had previously determined that Parts I, II, and III of the National Board of Medical Examiners (NBME), and Steps 1, 2, and 3 examinations of the United States Medical Licensing Examinations (USMLE) program, are equivalent to the FLEX. However, the NBME is also no longer offered. Thus, the USMLE steps 1, 2, and 3 is the only licensing examination which will satisfy the requirements of the statute for an H-1B clinical physician.

An H-1B beneficiary coming to practice medicine as a clinical physician who has passed parts of the previous exams cannot combine those parts with parts of the USMLE to obtain licensure or for H-1B purposes. For an H-1B beneficiary who passed the earlier examinations but did not obtain a state license based on that passage, he or she will have to take the complete USMLE in order to obtain state licensure and to be eligible for H-1B status.[114]

4. Graduates of Foreign Medical Schools. Graduates of foreign medical schools must meet additional special requirements as outlined in the below table.[115]

| If the beneficiary will... | Then... |
|---|---|
| Be teaching or conducting research, or both, ANDNo patient care will be performed except that which is incidental to the alien's research or teaching, | No additional requirements must be met. |
| Be performing services as a member of the medical profession (i.e., providing patient care), | The beneficiary must have:Passed the United States Medical Licensing Examination (USMLE) ANDHave competency in oral and written English as evidenced by Educational Commission for Foreign Medical Graduates (ECFMG) Certification. |

5. Graduates of U.S. Medical Schools. Graduates of accredited U.S. medical schools do not need ECFMG certification or evidence of passing the USMLE. However, graduates of United States medical schools must still possess a license in order to practice medicine. [116]

6. English Competency. English proficiency is a requirement for H-1B physicians. At one time, the ECFMG administered an English language proficiency test and issued certificates accordingly. This test is no longer administered; however existing certificates can be accepted by USCIS. As of July 14, 2004, proficiency in the English language is established through the passage of Step 1 and the Clinical Skills portion of Step 2 of the USMLE.

Alternatively, English language proficiency is demonstrated by graduation from a medical school accredited by the US Department of Education. The school does not have to be located in the United States. For example, some US institutions have campuses located outside the US where medical education is provided which are accredited by the US Department of Education. Also, most Canadian medical schools are accredited by the US Department of Education through cooperation with the Liaison Committee on Medical Education (LCME).[117]

7. ECFMG. The ECFMG is the only recognized source in the United States for verification of medical transcripts and diplomas. Part of the ECFMG's certification process involves verification of a foreign medical graduate's overseas education. Where there is a question as to whether a foreign degree is equivalent to an M.D., an ECFMG certificate can be accepted to demonstrate equivalency. Where doubt exists, a degree evaluation should be requested.

[116] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(viii)(B)(2)(i).
[117] http://www.lcme.org/.

Despite the reference to passage of the ECFMG in the regulations discussing English language proficiency,[118] there is no longer a separate English language proficiency examination administered by ECFMG. However, a certificate issued by the ECFMG is still considered evidence that an alien is proficient in the English language.

8. Canadian Medical School Graduates

As discussed above, most Canadian medical school graduates are considered competent in oral and written English. However, Canadian medical school graduates must still pass the USMLE unless coming to the United States to teach or conduct research with no patient care except that which is incidental to the research or teaching.

9. Physicians of National or International Renown[119]

Foreign medical school graduates who are of national or international renown are exempt from the requirements in the regulations relating to petitioners for H-1B physicians.[120] This means that the physician of international renown is exempt from the examination and English language proficiency requirements, as well as the degree requirement and the limitation on activities to teaching and research. The physician of international renown is still subject to the beneficiary requirements of the regulations[121] dealing with state licensure and either foreign licensure or graduation from a foreign medical school.

Possible evidence that the beneficiary qualifies as a physician of national or international renown may include:

- Reference letters from other medical professionals of national or international renown, stating that the foreign national has national or international renown for his/her abilities as a doctor or other contributions to the medical profession;

- Awards, particularly if they are national or international in scope, such as the World Health Organization (WHO);

- Articles or presentations published by the foreign national in medical journals or presented at medical conferences;

- Media publicity or journal articles describing or making reference to the foreign national or his/her work;

[118] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(viii)(B)(2)(i).
[119] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(viii)(C).
[120] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(viii)(B).
[121] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(viii)(A).

- Evidence of the foreign national's working in prominent positions for renowned academic or medical institutions;

- Evidence of the foreign national's serving as a speaker or panelist at medical conferences;

- Evidence of the foreign national's acting as a peer reviewer of the work of others presented at conferences published in journals; and

- Any other evidence of special contributions or abilities in the medical field.

NOTE: An H-1B physician of national or international renown does not necessarily have to meet the requirements of an O-1A or E11 alien. The evidence must just establish that he or she is renowned. Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary, tenth edition, defines "renown" as "a state of being widely acclaimed and highly honored."

10. Physicians Working for the Veteran's Administration (VA)

Physicians coming to the United States to work at a Veteran's Administration (VA) hospital are required to have a state license to practice medicine; however, the license does not have to be from the state where the VA hospital is located.

B. Department of Defense (DOD) Cooperative Research Project

The immigration Act of 1990[122] provided for nonimmigrant status for an alien coming to the US "to perform services of an exceptional nature requiring such merit and ability relating to a cooperative research and development project or a coproduction project provided under a government-to-government agreement administered by the Secretary of Defense." Admission under such a program is subject to a ten-year limit. The spouse and minor children of the beneficiary may be admitted as dependents, if accompanying or following to join the alien. No more than 100 principal aliens can be in this status at any given time. Qualifying services under this program are services that require at least a bachelor's degree, or its equivalent, in a specific specialty to perform the duties.

USCIS refers to this program as H-1B2 and it is in many ways analogous to the H-1B program. However, strictly speaking the DOD program is not part of the H-1B program as it has a separate statutory basis than the H-1B program. The existence of this special program does not preclude the DOD from utilizing the regular H-1B provisions provided the required guidelines are met. Unlike the other H-1B cases, the DOD Researchers do not require a labor condition application (LCA). [123]

[123] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(vi)(A)(2).

The H-1B2 petition requires the following evidence:

- The petition must be accompanied by a verification letter from the DOD project manager for the particular project stating that the alien will be working on a cooperative project under a reciprocal government to government agreement administered by DOD. Details about the specific project are not required;

- The petitioner shall provide a general description of the beneficiary's duties and indicate the actual dates of the beneficiary's employment on the project; and

- The petitioner shall submit a statement indicating the names of aliens currently employed on the project in the United States and their dates of employment. The petitioner shall also indicate the names of beneficiaries whose employment on the project ended within the past year.[124]

- Documentary evidence should be submitted to establish the beneficiary possesses the required security clearance for positions with the DOD.

The petition shall be accompanied by evidence that the beneficiary has a U.S. baccalaureate or higher degree, or its equivalent, in the occupational field in which he or she will be performing the services[125].

If approvable, the H-1B2 DOD petition can be approved for a period of up to five years or the length of the project, whichever is shorter. Extensions can be granted up to a total stay of ten years.

C. Fashion Models

Included in the H-1B classification are fashion models of distinguished merit and ability.[126] USCIS refers to these H-1B nonimmigrants as H-1B3. An alien of distinguished merit and ability in the field of fashion modeling is one who is prominent in the field of fashion modeling. The alien must also be coming to the United States to perform services that require a fashion model of prominence .[127]

Prominence means a high level of achievement in the field of fashion modeling evidenced by a degree of skill and recognition substantially above that ordinarily encountered to the extent that a person described as prominent is renowned, leading, or well-known in the field of fashion modeling.[128]

[124] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(vi)(B).
[125] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(vi)(C).
[126] INA 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b).
[127] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(vii)(A).
[128] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(ii).

The H-1B3 position requires evidence that:

- The services to be performed involve an event, production or activity which has a distinguished reputation, or

- The services are to be performed for an organization or establishment that has a distinguished reputation for, or record of, employing prominent persons.[129]

As is the case for all H-1B petitions, the petitioner must obtain a certification from DOL that it has filed an LCA in the occupational specialty for each Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area (SMSA) where the alien will be employed.

To conclude that the beneficiary qualifies as an alien of distinguished merit and ability in the field of modeling and is thus eligible for H-1B status, the petitioner must demonstrate two of the following:[130]

- The beneficiary has achieved national or international recognition and acclaim for outstanding achievements in his or her field evidenced by critical reviews by or about the alien in major newspapers, trade journals, magazines, or other published material.

- The beneficiary has performed and will perform services as a fashion model for employers that have a distinguished reputation.

- The beneficiary has received recognition for significant achievements from organizations, critics, fashion houses, modeling agencies, or other recognized experts in the field of fashion modeling. Such testimonials must be in a form that clearly indicates the author's authority, expertise, and knowledge of the alien's achievements.

- Commands a high salary or other substantial remuneration for services (in relation to others in the field) as evidenced by contracts or other reliable evidence.

[129] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(vii)(B).
[130] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(vii)(C).

D. Free Trade Agreements with Chile and Singapore

1. Background. The Chile/Singapore Free Trade Agreements, which took effect on January 1, 2004, made nationals of Chile and Singapore eligible to seek admission to the US as H-1B1 nonimmigrants.[131] USCIS also refers to this category as HSC. While the H-1B1 classification is in many ways similar to the H-1B classification, it exists under a separate statutory provision and many of the provisions applicable to H-1B's, such as portability, do not apply to H-1B1s.

2. Eligibility. In order to qualify for H-1B1, a national of Chile or Singapore must be:

- coming to work in a specialty occupation requiring theoretical and practical application of a body of specialized knowledge, and
- have attained a bachelor's degree or higher in the specialty (or its equivalent) as a minimum for entry into the occupation.

Although the H-1B1 is not an H-1B, Congress expressed its desire that many of the same standards apply. The legislative history of the provision states that the applicable requirements are "to be interpreted identically to the requirement to qualify as a professional under the H-1B category."[132]

Thus a bachelor's degree is required for the majority of H-1B1 nonimmigrants as is the case with an H-1B nonimmigrant. There are four exceptions to this rule, and for these four exceptions the "professional" requirement can be demonstrated with something other than a bachelor's degree. They are:

- For persons from Chile, an agricultural manager;
- For persons from Chile, a physical therapist;
- For persons from Chile or Singapore, a management consultant;
- For persons from Chile or Singapore, a disaster relief claims adjuster.

3. No Petition. There is no petition filing with USCIS for an H-1B1. Persons seeking classification as an H-1B1 submit an LCA to the Department of Labor and then apply directly to the State Department for a visa. Persons in the US seeking a change of status to H-1B1, or seeking an extension of an existing H-1B1 stay, apply to USCIS by submitting the following:

- A completed Form I-129 with the base fee and ACWIA fee;

[131] 8 CFR 214.2(h)(4)(vii)(C).
[132] H.R. Rep No. 108-224, pt. 2, at 6-11; H.R. Rep. No. 108-225 pt. 2, at 5-11 (2003).

- H-1B Data Collection Supplement;

- An LCA (Annotated as "H-1B1-Chile" or "H-1B1-Singapore") submitted to the Department of Labor;

- A letter from the U.S. employer stating the activity to be engaged in, the anticipated length of stay, and the arrangements for remuneration;

- Evidence the alien meets the educational requirement for the profession or occupation, which normally is a bachelor's degree or higher. (Unless one of the above exceptions applies).

The H-1B fraud prevention and detection fee is not required as by statute that fee applies only to H-1Bs.

4. LCA. Employers must submit a labor condition attestation for foreign workers from Chile or Singapore under the Free Trade Agreement H-1B1 (HSC) program. The law requires the DOL to certify to the Department of State (DOS) that the appropriate LCA, ETA Form 9035 or ETA Form 9035E, has been filed with DOL.

If certified and the beneficiary will be consular processing, the employer transmits a copy of the signed, certified LCA to the beneficiary together with a written offer of employment. At the time of visa application at the consulate, the beneficiary will present a certified copy of the LCA, clearly annotated by the employer as "H1B1 Chile" or "H1B1 Singapore," as proof of filing.

5. Licensure. The H-1B1 category does not require licensure as a prerequisite to admission. Professionals admitted in H-1B1 classification must comply with all applicable State and Federal licensure requirements for engaging in their respective profession following their admission to the United States.

6. Cap. The Chile-Singapore Free Trade Agreements allow for no more than 1,400 professionals from Chile and 5,400 professionals from Singapore to enter the United States annually. DHS administers this cap. This cap is set aside from the overall H-1B Program cap.

E. H-1B Portability

1. Background. An H-1B nonimmigrant may change employers or add employers if concurrent employment is sought. As noted in Chapter 6, the new or concurrent employer must file an H-1B petition for the worker. Prior to 2000, an H-1B nonimmigrant seeking to add or change employers was required to wait for approval of the new petition before starting employment with the new employer. This wait for approval made H-1B nonimmigrants less mobile in the labor force relative to US workers and also made the process of filling H-1B jobs longer for US employers recruiting H-1B workers already in the US.

As a result, Congress created what came to be known as "H-1B portability." For a nonimmigrant who meets the applicable requirements, employment with the new (or concurrent) employer can start immediately upon filing of the H-1B petition by the new employer.

2. Eligibility. There is no portability application or adjudication. Portability is self-executing. Under the statute,[133] a nonimmigrant who was previously issued an H-1B visa or provided H-1B nonimmigrant status may begin working for a new H-1B employer as soon as that new employer files an H-1B petition on the nonimmigrant's behalf, if:

- The nonimmigrant was lawfully admitted to the United States;
- A nonfrivolous petition for new employment was filed before the end of the nonimmigrant's period of authorized stay; and
- The nonimmigrant has not been employed without authorization since the lawful admission to the United States mentioned above before the filing of the portability petition.

An alien who does not meet these requirements is ineligible for portability, and employment under these circumstances for a new or concurrent employer is unauthorized employment.

When an alien moves to a new employer and begins working upon filing of the new petition, the work authorization from the previous H-1B status carries over to the new filing. If the new filing is approved then that becomes the basis for the work authorization. If the new filing is denied then work authorization for the new employer ceases. Denial of the portability petition does not affect the ability of the H-1B to continue (or resume) working for the original H-1B employer if that petition otherwise remains valid.

(a) Period of Stay Authorized by the Attorney General. In order to port, an alien must meet all the requirements of Section 214(n) of the INA, including the requirement that the new petition must be filed while the alien is in a "period of stay authorized by the Attorney General." The term "period of stay" is used in other sections of the Act[134] in discussing unlawful presence and its consequences. A "period of stay" is not necessarily synonymous with the concept of "lawful nonimmigrant status." While everyone who is in a lawful nonimmigrant status will be within a "period of stay," not everyone who is in a period of stay is necessarily in lawful nonimmigrant status. For example, a nonimmigrant might have timely filed a request for a change of status or extension of status which is still pending, but have remained in the US pursuant to such request beyond the date noted on his or I-94. Such an alien would not be in a valid nonimmigrant status but would be in a period of stay and thus eligible for portability provided the other requirements are met.

[133] INA Section 214(n).
[134] INA Section 212(a)(9)(B)(ii).

Because there is no portability application or adjudication, officers are unlikely to encounter situations like this at the time of H-1B adjudication. They may arise as part of a future adjudication involving the alien such as an application for adjustment of status.

3. Multiple Portability Petitions-"Bridging" Successive H-1B portability petitions may be filed for an alien while the previous H-1B petitions remain pending (i.e. creating a "bridge" of H-1B petitions). However, to be approved every H-1B portability petition must separately meet the requirements for H-1B classification and for an extension of stay. In the event that the alien's nonimmigrant status has expired while the petitions are pending, the denial of any filing in the string of extension of stay and/or change of status filings undercuts the "bridge", meaning that any petition to extend or change status that was filed after the expiration of the alien's status that is denied will result in the denial of all successive requests to extend or change status.

4. Portability and the H-1B Cap. As discussed above, the statute sets the conditions that must be satisfied for portability to apply. Although not specified in the statute, availability of a cap position, where required, is a prerequisite to proper filing of an H-1B petition. Where an H-1B petition is rejected because of the unavailability of a cap position, the petition was not "filed" and portability thus does not apply.[135]

5. Dependents. The status of a dependent of a principal nonimmigrant who is working pursuant to portability benefits is linked to the status of the principal nonimmigrant.

F. H-1B Whistleblowers

H-1B employers are required to comply with the attestations made on the LCA submitted to the DOL. H-1B workers who report violations of the terms of the LCA to DOL are protected from retaliation from their employer.[136]

The INA[137] thus requires the creation of a process under which an H-1B alien beneficiary who files a complaint regarding an LCA violation and is otherwise eligible to remain and work in the United States may be allowed to seek other appropriate employment in the United States for a period not to exceed the maximum period of stay he or she would have been authorized as an H-1B.

If credible documentary evidence is provided in support of an H-1B petition that the H-1B alien beneficiary faced retaliatory action from his or her employer based on a report regarding an LCA violation, then USCIS adjudicators may consider any related loss of H-1B status by the alien as an "extraordinary circumstance" as defined by the regulations.[138] This may allow the alien time to acquire new H-1B employment and remain eligible to apply for a change of status or extension of stay notwithstanding the termination of employment or other retaliatory action by his or her employer.

Such credible documentary evidence should include a copy of the complaint filed by the H-1B alien beneficiary, along with corroborative documentation that such a complaint has resulted in the termination of employment of the H-1B alien beneficiary or other retaliatory action by his or her employer as described in the DOL regulations.[139]

In addition, adjudicators are reminded that the portability provisions of section 105 of AC21 may also apply to the whistleblower H 1B alien beneficiary should he or she choose to use them to seek new employment and obtain relief.

G. E-3 Specialty Occupation Workers

1. General. Section 501 of the Real ID Act of 2005[140] created the E-3 classification[141]. The E-3 classification is only for nationals of Australia. An E-3 must be coming to the United States to engage in a specialty occupation, and the US employer must file a petition on Form I-129. In all substantive respects, the E-3 is identical to an H-1B. The same criteria and standards are used to determine whether the position is a specialty occupation and whether the beneficiary is qualified to engage in the occupation. There are several mostly procedural differences which will be discussed where the issue arises in this manual.

2. Filing Location. E-3 petitions seeking a change of nonimmigrant status to E-3 are filed at the Vermont Service Center regardless of the place of intended work.

3. The E-3 cap. E-3 visas are limited to 10,500 per year. These visas do not count against the H-1B cap. Spouses and children of E-3s do not count against the cap.

4. E-3 Time Limits. An E-3 is subject to the same initial time limits as an H-1B. The E-3 may be approved for a three year period and may obtain extensions in three year increments. Unlike the H-1B, however, the E-3 may obtain extensions indefinitely so long as nonimmigrant intent is maintained.

5.Dual Intent for E-3s. E-3s do not have dual intent in the same sense that an H-1B does. The E-3 cannot simultaneously intend both to remain in the U.S. permanently (by pursuing an immigrant visa) and remain temporarily. However, E nonimmigrants do not have a foreign residence requirement. The failure to maintain a foreign residence, which might otherwise be an indicator that nonimmigrant intent is lacking, is not an issue for the E-3.

H. Nurses

[139] 20 CFR 655.801.
[141] INA Section 101(a)(15)(E)(iii).

1. H-1B Eligible. There is no prohibition on nurses qualifying for H-1B classification. An H-1B petition for a nurse position that meets the requirements of the statute can be approved. However, most nurse positions will not be able to meet the requirements of the statute because the position will not be a specialty occupation. This is because most nursing positions do not require a bachelor's degree as the minimum for entry into the profession.

There are some situations, however, where the petitioner may be able to show that the nursing position is in fact a specialty occupation because a bachelor's degree is the minimum for entry into the field. This could be the case where the nursing position involved an advanced practice nurse such as in the areas of acute care, adult nursing, pediatric nursing, neonatal, and other specialties. These are only a few examples and petitioners may attempt to meet their burden of showing that the occupation is a specialty occupation in any specialized nursing field.

2. Licensing and Examination. As is the case in all H-1B petitions in which a license is required, the nurse must have obtained a license to practice nursing in the State of intended employment prior to approval of the petition. The exception is where a State requires work authorization from USCIS or a social security number dependent upon such authorization as a prerequisite to licensing. In such a case where this is the only obstacle to obtaining the license and the petition is otherwise approvable, the petition may be approved for a one-year period. Upon expiration of the one year period of approval the nurse must present a valid unrestricted license in order to obtain an extension.

FEMA AND FEDERAL PARTNERS SUPPORT SOUTHERN STATES IN RESPONSE TO TORNADOES AND SEVERE STORMS

FEMA and its federal partners are working closely with state and local officials in Alabama and the other states impacted by the deadly tornadoes and severe storms that struck the Southeast on Wednesday night, and that continue to impact southern states.

Read the highlights of the federal response below (check the FEMA blog for the latest updates):

- Secretary Napolitano and FEMA Administrator Craig Fugate spoke to President Obama yesterday to provide an update on the continuing federal disaster relief efforts for areas affected by the devastating severe storms and tornadoes that have impacted Alabama, Mississippi and other states across the Southeast this week.

- FEMA Administrator Craig Fugate posted a special video update on the FEMA blog

- FEMA Administrator Craig Fugate traveled to Alabama yesterday to meet with Governor Robert Bentley and other state and local officials to assess the damage and ensure the state is receiving all the support needed for their response and recovery operations.

Statement from FEMA Administrator Craig Fugate:
"Our thoughts are with the families and communities in Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia and the other states that have been devastated by the severe storms and tornadoes that ripped through the region last night. As President Obama has made clear, this administration stands with the impacted states and is bringing our full resources to bear to support them in any way needed. Throughout this storm, the heroes have been the first responders, neighbors, volunteers and many others who have been working day and night to protect the public's health and safety. At FEMA, we're just one part of this team, and we're continuing to work closely with our state and local partners and tribal governments to make sure they have all the support they need for the duration of this storm." (DHS press release)

SECRETARY NAPOLITANO JOINS MILLIONS IN "GREAT CENTRAL U.S. SHAKEOUT" PUBLIC EARTHQUAKE DRILL

Secretary Napolitano and U.S. Education Secretary Arne Duncan yesterday joined leaders from FEMA, state and local officials, and more than three million Americans across the central U.S. to participate in the Great Central U.S. ShakeOut— the largest-ever, multi-state earthquake drill to be held in the U.S.

*As Secretary Napolitano and Secretary Duncan wrote, "Knowing what to do in an earthquake, or any kind of disaster, can make all the difference." Read Secretary Napolitano and Secretary Duncan's op-ed on the earthquake drill in The St. Louis Dispatch.

- "The devastating storms and tornadoes that have impacted our nation this week are a vivid reminder that disasters of all kinds can strike at any time…The Great Central U.S. Shakeout exercise will help millions of Americans know how to protect themselves in the event of an earthquake and strengthen the resiliency of communities across the central United States." (quote by Secretary Napolitano – DHS press release)

- "Every individual, family, business, school and community in our country — all of whom are a part of our nation's emergency management team — should learn essential skills and protective measures for before, during and after a crisis." (Op-ed by Secretary Napolitano and Secretary Duncan – The St. Louis Dispatch)

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE: "SECURE COMMUNITIES SHOULD BE GIVEN A CHANCE TO WORK IN A FAIR MANNER"

Following an editorial board meeting with Secretary Napolitano, the San Francisco Chronicle editorialized about the Secure Communities program. Between October 2008 and October 2010, Secure Communities has resulted in a 71 percent increase in the number of convicted criminals removed from our country.

- "Immigration law is a federal matter. Arizona cannot take it upon itself to lower the threshold for deportation – and San Francisco cannot shield the people it arrests from possible deportation. Secure Communities should be given a chance to work in a fair manner." (San Francisco Chronicle, 4/27/11)

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT: READ SECRETARY NAPOLITANO'S OP-ED ON CYBERSECURITY

Secretary Napolitano wrote an op-ed in The San Jose Mercury News this week emphasizing the important role of the public in creating a safer and more secure cyberspace. On Monday, Secretary Napolitano spoke about cybersecurity at UC Berkeley: Watch the video.

- "We're calling on all Americans to play their part. We must make basic cybersecurity practices as reflexive as putting on a seat belt." (quote by Secretary Napolitano – The San Jose Mercury News)

- "It must become a common value for all Americans that responsibility for cybersecurity begins with each individual user and extends out to every business, school, and other civic and private enterprise." (quote by Secretary Napolitano – Remarks at UC Berkeley)

A NEW KIND OF PARTNERSHIP WITH THE PRIVATE SECTOR: S&T UNVEILS FIRST "SECURE"-CERTIFIED PRODUCT

The Science and Technology Directorate's (S&T) SECURE concept is simple: The government provides companies with detailed requirements of a needed technology, product, or service, along with a conservative estimate of the potential market. In exchange, companies use their own funds to perform research and development to meet those requirements.

S&T unveiled on Wednesday the first SECURE-certified product at the Long Island Forum for Technology in Bethpage, N.Y. Read more about the SECURE program on the DHS Blog.

- The SECURE program "saves money on both ends: the government doesn't spend money on research and development, while the company doesn't waste resources trying to figure out on their own what the government ultimately is going to need." (The Blog @ Homeland Security)

PLUS: The driving force behind the creation of the SECURE program was DHS's Chief Commercialization Officer, Tom Cellucci, who was recently recognized as one of Security Magazine's "Most Influential People in Security." Congratulations, Tom!

Good morning Shelly,

I hope you had a nice Thanksgiving Day.

We reached the H-1B cap limit on Tuesday. There will be no lottery and cap petitions received on Wednesday and thereafter will be returned to petitioners. Do you have a specific reject letter for the service centers or would you prefer that the centers generate their own? Please advise.

Thank you.
