Hon. Alejandro Mayorkas
Secretary of Homeland Security
U.S. Department of Homeland Security
Washington, DC 20528

Dear Secretary Mayorkas:

The undersigned 334 workers' rights, immigrants' rights, civil rights and civil liberties, labor unions, human rights, research, and community-based organizations have assisted and defended countless immigrants who have sought to improve their workplaces, form unions, combat wage theft, defend civil rights, challenge harassment, and report unsafe working conditions. We have long seen how workers' vulnerability to deportation impedes their ability to speak out about labor violations and build power on the job, which in turn drives down wages and working conditions and undermines the enforcement of our country's core labor standards to the detriment of all workers. We were encouraged last October when you released a memo instructing Department of Homeland Security (DHS) components to provide guidance clarifying how they would support the enforcement of labor standards and protect victims and witnesses of labor exploitation.¹ Yet it has now been over a year since the release of that memo, and DHS has not yet clarified the process by which workers can access prosecutorial discretion, including deferred action and parole, when involved in labor disputes. This delay has real costs to the workers whose wages are stolen, who risk their safety in dangerous working conditions, who want to organize for a greater voice on the job. We therefore write to urge DHS to immediately release written guidance that clarifies the process by which undocumented workers, guestworkers, and others with precarious immigration status who are victims or witnesses of labor exploitation may seek prosecutorial discretion.

As you recognized last year, DHS "has a critical role in ensuring that our Nation's workplaces comply with our laws" and "must adopt immigration enforcement policies to facilitate the important work of the Department of Labor and other government agencies to enforce wage protections, workplace safety, labor rights, and other laws and standards."² The White House has also recognized, supported, and reinforced that DHS has a role to play in ensuring that "victims of, and witnesses to, labor exploitation and unfair labor practices [be] unafraid to cooperate with law enforcement in its investigation and prosecution of unscrupulous employers."³

¹ Memo from Secretary Mayorkas, Worksite Enforcement: The Strategy to Protect the American Labor Market, the Conditions of the American Worksite, and the Dignity of the Individual (Oct. 12, 2021), <https://www.dhs.gov/publication/memorandum-worksite-enforcement>.

³ White House Task Force on Worker Organizing and Empowerment: Report to the President at 28, <https://www.dol.gov/sites/dolgov/files/OPA/newsreleases/2022/02/OSEC20220195.pdf>.

This guidance is urgently needed, as every day that goes by without it, unscrupulous employers exploit workers and cheat the system in order to turn a profit. These employers must be held accountable, and workers must see a clear commitment from DHS so that they can indeed be “unafraid to cooperate”⁴ with labor agencies. We work directly with many workers who are unwilling to come forward without clear guidance from DHS.

To be effective, this process should include the following components:

- Consistent processing by United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS), where immigrants in civil rights or labor disputes can affirmatively request deferred action and parole (where eligible);
- Concurrent processing of deferred action requests and employment authorization applications by USCIS;
- Initial grants of deferred action that last four years;⁵
- Waiver of the I-765 filing fees for workers granted deferred action;⁶
- An expedited process for adjudicating applications in a timely manner;
- A commitment to using the full range of prosecutorial discretion, including stays of removal, administrative closure, and release from detention where applicable;
- The re-establishment of an interagency working group including DHS, the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL), the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB), Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), and other relevant federal agencies to avoid communication delays and ensure timely protections for workers; and
- Guidance on handling requests for immigration protections supported by state and local agencies enforcing civil rights and workplace laws.

We are encouraged by the guidance announced by the NLRB and the DOL on the processes by which workers who want to come forward about labor violations can seek their support for grants of prosecutorial discretion. It is critical that DHS now release its guidance and clarify the process by which these workers who witness or are subject to civil or workplace rights violations may seek protection. In addition, it should be noted that DHS’s immigration enforcement agencies are funded at a much higher rate than the agencies that protect labor standards—12 times as much—exacerbating the genuine fear workers have when coming forward to report violations to what they know are underfunded and understaffed labor agencies.⁷ Facilitating the ability of workers to come forward safely to report employer lawbreaking would act as a force multiplier to help labor agencies fulfill their mandates.

⁵ USCIS has the discretion to grant deferred action for four year increments. See, for example, USCIS’s decision to grant deferred action for four years to Special Immigrant Juveniles: Mar 7, 2022, USCIS to Offer Deferred Action for Special Immigrant Juveniles, <https://www.uscis.gov/newsroom/alerts/uscis-to-offer-deferred-action-for-special-immigrant-juveniles>.

⁶ Given this Administration’s acknowledgment that immigrant workers in these disputes are often victims of various labor abuses, a waiver of the I-765 filing fees is consistent with its policy to waive EAD fees for “victim-based benefits requests,” including its recent BFD process for U-Visa applicants. See fn. 1; <https://www.uscis.gov/policy-manual/volume-3-part-c-chapter-5>.

From day one, the Biden-Harris Administration has promised to “ensure that every worker is protected, can join a union, and can exercise their labor rights—regardless of immigration status—for the safety of all workers.”⁸ Establishing a clear, effective process to provide immigration protections and work authorization to immigrants who assert their civil and labor rights is an essential step forward in achieving this vision and will leave a legacy that elevates labor standards for all workers in this country. Your leadership on this issue will secure our potential to “grow the economy sustainably and equitably so that everyone gets ahead for decades to come.”⁹

Joyce Ajlouny, General Secretary
American Friends Service Committee
1501 Cherry Street
Philadelphia, PA 19102

Dear Ms. Ajlouny:

Thank you for your November 17, 2022 letter to the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS). Secretary Mayorkas asked that I respond on his behalf.

As noted in your letter, on October 12, 2021, Secretary Mayorkas issued a memorandum titled Worksite Enforcement: The Strategy to Protect the American Labor Market, the Conditions of the American Worksite, and the Dignity of the Individual.¹ This memorandum recognizes the harm unscrupulous employers inflict on noncitizen workers they exploit, business competitors they undercut, and U.S. workers they undermine. Your letter emphasizes, among other things, the need for clarification as to how workers can access prosecutorial discretion, including deferred action and parole, in order to ensure that workers will not face adverse consequences for providing information in support of enforcement of labor and employment laws.

As Secretary Mayorkas stated, DHS can play a critical role to ensure our nation's workplaces comply with our laws. In response to his memorandum, U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services, in conjunction with other DHS components, thoroughly reviewed existing policies and processes to identify those that strengthen DHS's efforts to support enforcement of labor and employment standards, including by encouraging a noncitizen worker to assert their workplace rights and cooperate with labor and employment investigations and prosecutions.

I'm proud to share that on January 13, 2023 DHS announced the establishment of process enhancements, including a centralized intake, for requests for deferred action by workers who fall within the scope of a labor agency investigation. Under this process, utilizing existing authority, DHS may consider requests for deferred action on a case-by-case basis in the exercise of discretion giving due consideration to a labor agency's equities. If deferred action is granted, the worker may remain in the country for up to two years and may obtain employment authorization if they demonstrate economic necessity for employment.

Thank you again for your letter and interest in this important issue. Please share this response with the other organizations that cosigned your letter. Should you require any additional assistance, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely,
